*Explained

Be it therefore RESOLVED that this memorial be spread upon the Minutes Book of the University of Kentucky Faculty and a copy be sent to his beloved wife.

Edward James Wilford died January 4, 1952. In his passing the University of Kentucky lost an able and well-loved teacher who had served in devoted faithfulness through many years. Mr. Wilford entered the service of the University as instructor in animal husbandry on June 18, 1918. He was immediately put in charge of building a meats laboratory and starting a meats course, the first such course to be taught at the University of Kentucky and one of the first in the nation. A year later he was given charge also of the teaching and research work with swine, in which work he gave considerable attention to the problems of use of pasture by swine. Since 1940 he has served as Professor of Animal Husbandry, and in charge of Meats Laboratory and Assistant in Animal Husbandry in the Experiment Station.

Professor Wilford was an inspiring teacher in combining the scientific and practical aspects of meats instruction, building in his students a lasting respect for his honesty and integrity, his insistence on doing a thorough job in whatever was attempted. His basic course in meats was always in great demand by students. He was a member of Alpha Gamma Rho fraternity, and for a time served as faculty advisor of the fraternity.

His judgment was sought in national circles on problems connected with meats work, and he was active in the Meats Section of the American Society of Animal Production. During the past few years the meats division of the College of Agriculture and Home Economics, under his leadership, designed and equipped a new meats laboratory which in facilities for both teaching and research ranks among the best on the college campuses of the country.

Professor Wilford wrote or collaborated on twenty-one papers, bulletins, and circulars during his thirty-three years at the University of Kentucky, including two Agricultural Experiment Station bulletins in process of publication at the time of his death. These bulletins report the results of a seven-year study of distillers' dried solubles as a protein supplement for growing and fattening hogs in drylot, and an exhaustive study of comparative carcass characteristics of Kentucky spring lambs and western fed lambs. The latter especially will undoubtedly prove to be the definitive work in its field.

To the lasting honor of Professor Wilford it may be said that those who had known him long, who had worked with him over the years, were greatly devoted to him. His were the qualities of faithfulness, integrity, and friendliness which wear well. He lived by the Golden Rule and through his devoted service to his church encouraged others to do likewise.

Friends and associates of Professor Wilford at the University of Kentucky sorrow deeply at his passing, and extend their sympathy to his family.

It was recommended by the Rules Committee and approved by the University Faculty:

Candidates for such credit, if veterans, should submit duly authenticated copies of their honorable discharge papers to the University Registrar; if military personnel, proof of position in good standing should be submitted to the University Registrar. At its meeting on Monday afternoon, January 7, the faculty of the College of Education voted to recommend to the University Faculty that the title for Education 111 be changed from "Remedial Reading in the Secondary School" to "The Teaching of Reading in the Junior and Senior High School." The course description should be changed to read as follows: A study of major factors in the teaching of reading at the junior and senior high school levels. Materials and testing procedures are included.

Dean Kirwan presented for the Committee on Student Organizations a recommendation for approval of a Psychology Club, open only to students in the Department of Psychology. This organization was authorized by vote of the University Faculty.

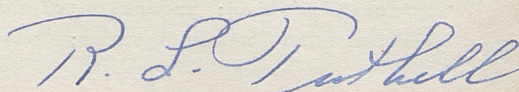

Dean Kirwan also presented, with the Committee's approval, a petition for recognition of a Student Action Society, whose purpose, "shall be to discover and to discourage illegal practices, adjacent to or near places which students may frequent, that affect the moral welfare of the students of the University of Kentucky." A motion to approve the organization was made and seconded but when put to vote was defeated. After discussing the petition at length, the University Faculty adopted the following resolution:

BE IT RESOLVED that the University Faculty approves the objectives inherent in the request for approval from the Student Action Society, but it cannot at this time approve this group, because of the technique that has been used in furthering its objectives.

BE IT FURTHER RESOLVED that the tenor of this resolution be called to the attention of the group and anyone else who is interested.

President Donovan stated that he had recently attended a meeting of the Executive Committee of the Association of Land Grant Colleges. Matters discussed included possible Congressional action affecting veterans. One proposal would extend the present G. I. Bill to cover veterans of the Korean War. Another would provide for payment to veterans of an amount not less than $800 and not more than $1200 for an academic year. The veteran would then decide where he wants to go to college and would pay his fees on the same basis as any other student.

The Faculty adjourned.
