Hemenway to call for new attitude in address

Hemenway will update the campus agenda that he announced a year ago, speak about the need for a new library and the need to raise expectations.

"Students ought to be able to take pride in UK as the place to study inside the commonwealth," Hemenway said in an interview Monday. "I get concerned sometimes because we don't take enough pride in the quality that exists in this University."

Hemenway will hold town meet-ings today and tomorrow to discuss "The Future of the Lexington Cam-pus: Budgets, Buildings and Be-yond."

He will speak today in the Worsham Theater at noon and in the Seay Auditorium of the Agriculture Science North Building at 4 pm.

The second-year chancellor will speak tomorrow morning at 8 in Worsham. The talk will be available on audiotage through the chanceltor's office (257-2911).

He said that UK has fared "much better than what you would expect, given all the troubles that it's had." Hemenway said the "benchmark mentality" is partially responsible for the attitude.

He will "urge the campus to liberate itself from the straightiacket and the tyranny of the so-called bench-mark median. So long as we think of ourselves as limited by a ceilling ... we forget about all the ways we've broken through that ceilling."

Hemenway said he wants to emphasize award-winning faculty who should be recognized for their efforts.

"We seem not to recognize them often enough, the true quality that

Some students don't excercise right to vote

While the Republican party may have had the support of many UK students in the race for U.S. Senator, very few seemed to exercise their voting muscle. In an informal poll, students on campus said yesterday that day-to-day college life interfered with their ability to vote. Incumbent Sen. Mitch McConnell, a republican, defeated his opponent, Harvey Sloane, a democrat. Jason Herbert, an electrical engineering freshman, said he forgot to register but always votes republican. But the race wasn't as clean as she would have liked. "I thought the candidates cut each other down too much. There was too much mudslinging," she said.

"I don't feel confident in voting for either (candidate)," said Craig Norris, an electrical engineering freshman.

McConnell wins again, defeats Sloane soundly

By MARK R. CHELLGREN

LOUISVILLE — Republican Mitch McConnell smothered a spark of discontent among Ken-tucky voters with a blanket of com-mercials to hold off Democrat Harmercials to hold off Democrat Har-vey Sloane and win a second term in the U.S. Senate yesterday. With 2,626 of Kentucky's 3,231 precincts reporting unofficial re-turns, McConnell had 383,710 votes, or 53 percent. Sloane had 345,710 votes, or 47 percent. McConnell had been confident of victory, despite a shrinking lead in the polls as Election Day drew near. At the same time, Sloane be-gan boasting of closing a gap that at one time measured at least 20 percentage points.

gan boasting of closing a gap that at one time measured at least 20 percentage points. The incumbent, who has been criticized recently in some national publications, pointed with pride to endorsements from virtually all Kentucky newspapers that made a choice in the race. He also drew endorsements from a variety of other organizations, many of which had never before made such a pick. Much of Sloane's final campaign message tried to play on the feeling of dissatisfaction with incumbents among voters.

Sloane held onto Jefferson Country, the state's largest and home to both men. But the margin was slim and not enough to counter McConnell's lead in many traditionally Democratic counties scattered around the state.

McConnell's campaign fund of more than $5 million fueled his race, which was largely dependent on paid advertising because he was stuck in Washington until just days before the election as Congress warnagled over the budget.

Also, a heavily promoted amendment to expand property-tax exemptions for religious institutions was the only one of four proposed constitutional amendments to win approval of Kentucky's voters on Tuesday.

With 35 percent of the precincts reporting, unofficial returns showed Amendment 4 had 217,982 votes in favor to 91,492 against — a margin of 70 percent to 30 percent.

Legislative leaders promoted the first two amendments as a means of balancing power the General Assembly and executive branches.

Amendment No. 1 would have allowed the legislature to call itself into special session with a petitioned by two-thirds of the members of both the House and Senate.

With 35 percent of the precincts reporting, unofficial returns showed voters had rejected the amendment 126,568 to 68,538, or 65 percent to 35 percent.

Amendment No. 2 also got to the issue of executive prerogative, but was a bit more complicated. The amendment would have allowed the legislature to establish a procedure to review and repeal ad-

With 34 Senate races on the ballot, Democrats took aim at Helms, Mark Hatfield in Oregon and Rudy Boschwitz in Minnesota in hope of padding their current 55-45 majority. The House was even more lopsided for the Democrats, who expected to add slightly to a 259-176 majority.

The Republican winners' circle ncluded 87-year-old Sen. Strom Flurmond, who claimed a seventh term in South Carolina, John Warner in Virginia and Thad Cochran

Three open Republican Senate seats were being decided, and Rep. Bob Smith kept New Hampshire in GOP hands.

Democrat Howell Heflin won in Alabama, David Boren in Oklahoma, Jay Rockefeller in West Virginia, David Pryor in Oklahoma; De Biden won in Delaware. Paul Simon led in Illinois and John Kerry in Massachusetts.

Among 36 statehouse races, Republican governorships in California, Texas, Florida and Illinois were at risk, probably the biggest prizes of the year.

The GOP hoped for victories that would protect their influence in drawing boundaries for House seats that will shift to the Sun Belt in 1992.

UK comeback comes up short

By BOB NORMAN

Sports Editor

The UK volleyball Wildcats came out tense, loosened up and finished tense in last night's game in Memorial Coliseum. The result? An emotional five-game loss to the University of Louisville.

When the game ended, U of L players and coaches whooped in celeration, while UK players and coaches walked off the floor quickly—shunning attention.

Understand, this was the first UK loss at the hands of U of L in eight years. The victory raised U of L's historical match record against UK to an uninspiring 3-19.

While that statistic may seem uninspiring, the win was definitely important and inspiring for for the young, immensely talented Cards.

"This was an important step for us," Louisville coach Don Hardin said, "We're beginning to believe in ourselves."

fifth game when, with the score tied at 12, the team broke down and U of L soared up to score the final three points — all on UK misses.

And it wasn't surprising.

And it wasn't surprising.

The UK squad hit the floor out of sync; their star setter, Laura Linder, fumbled; their top hitters, Cathy DeBuono and Yvette Moorchead, smacked balls into the net. The result? Two games lost, 15-6, 15-11.

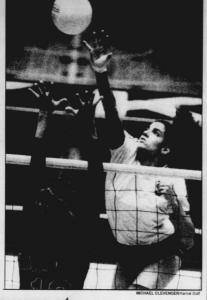

Then in the crucial third game the Cats began to shed their tentativeness and play like the real UK. Linder began to play with the kind of control, determination and precision for which she is known. DeBuono started whipping out her timing kills with thrilling competitiveness. The result: two games won, 15-9, 15-10.

Then came the thriller that ended with a whimper.

"We've struggled at times this entire year," assistant Cat coach Mary Wise said.

"We are young. They played right?"

UK middle blocker Cathy DeBuono goes up for a kill over U of L's Kelly Brown. UK's effort last night at Memorial Coliseum was, at best, up and down as they lost the match in five games.

we came here, it was to earn the respect of the Southeastern Conference, and you can't do that unless you beat them," said UK coach Bill Curry.

Curry talked yesterday about his goal to finish the season with a winning record in the SEC.

Not an easy task. To finish with a least one major upset against either 10th-ranked Florida or ninth-ranked Tennessee in upcoming weeks.

It seems unlikely, as the Cats (3-5, 2-2 in the SEC) have, in the words of Curry himself, dug themselves a hole.

"Fairly typical of our performances in games has been the way our season has gone," Curry said. "We dug ourselves a hole and then we start working to dig ourselves out of it.

The success Curry seems to be talking about is the emotional victory over Georgia two weeks ago. Yet to win, the Cats had to come back from a 10-point deficit in the first

And the Cats want to keep the self-destructing shovels back at their homes when they face Vanderbilt.

"The next lesson for our team to learn ... is not to dig the hole ... start out the football game, play it 60 minutes full boar, maximum efficiency ... and put our best on the field, said Curry, at the weekly press conference.

Cheaper food won't benefit all UK students

The controversy stewing over the prices that UK Food Services charges to students brings to mind the saying "what goes around comes around." In order for Food Services to meet student demands for lower prices, the non-profit organization must reduce the operating costs associated with providing students a place to eat on campus.

And as the University administration is quick to point out such cost reductions can be realized, but through a reduction in the level of service, hours and student jobs. Therefore, there must be a choice in the level of services for which students are willing to pay

Conjuring up criticism and signing petitions against Food Services is important in the process of determining new levels of prices and services.

However, the absence of any student involvement beyond the initial complaining stage shows a lack of understanding of the important task presented to that department and its reliance on student feedback.

Unlike many restaurants, Food Services does not exist to make a profit by offering only one kind of food or catering to one type of consumer behavior.

In fact, Food Services' job would be a lot easier if students had the same tastes, ate at the same hours and demanded the same level of service. Instead, on any given night, students want a choice between a full-course dinner, grilled food or pizza delivered to their residence hall — not to mention a snack or

However, part of the price students pay helps Food Services provide a wide array of dining alternatives.

Granted, many of us would like food prices to decrease, and, to that end, Food Services should exercise diligence in keeping prices down

But that is only half of the equation. It is incumbent upon students to become actively involved in helping Food Services chart a new pricing strategy. There are many consequences of simply reducing prices by cutting costs.

Such a change may upset more students than it attempts to satisfy. Certainly, a reduction in cafeteria hours and offerings translates into many people having to change their eating habits. They may, in fact, be willing to pay more for a better selection and longer hours.

Furthermore, that some students may lose their jobs is partic ularly unsettling. Must someone dependent on a Food Service job suffer so every student can save a few dollars a semester? So before the Food Services budget cutting ax is sharpened.

UK has failed to live up to Robinson spirit reathit countians got a good reminder Oct. 26 of the caring nature of Kentucky's flagship university which has so prospered through the years due to the benevolent nature of the late E.O. Robinson, who made millions lumbering here in the 1910s and '20s.

Two-hundred fifty people were laid off from their jobs with Arch On The North Fork Oct. 26 becau

On The North Fork Oct. 26 because the Breathitt County coal-mining firm has been unsuccessful in its attempts to mine its coal under lease at a highwall next to UK's hallowed Robinson Forest.

The forest was left to UK to help the local people so that they could learn to be self-supporting, better educated and thus have a better way of life. Has UK kept faith with E.O. Robinson's wishes about the magnanimous gift of his properties here? We think not.

What better way help people than

What better way help people than provide jobs?

UK claims that the Robinson For-ox caims tan the Robinson For-est is being used for research pur-poses, yet it has come up with no solid records to prove this, and Bart Thielges who headed that depart-ment at UK, is no longer there. Re-portedly he is on the West Coast probably doing research for some other fortunate institution.

UK even has claimed the forest as a park, but it is not open for the public's enjoyment or use. Locked gates and fences keep all but a favored few out of the forest.

UK has contended all along that it is a caring institution that "cares" about the people of Breathit County, Is this caring? To be so stubborn and bullheaded about allowing his coal company to continue mining coal and providing good jobs for people along with support side industries or business that employ almost 2,000 people.

The layoffs will deal a devastating blow to the local economy. Only the lines to the unemployment office will grow from this turn of events. The UK Board of Trustees voted recently to bid out some of its coal lands, not the choice ones, of course. These probably will be saved until a later date when UK can figure outing how the mining proceeds can be used at Lexington to benefit the people of Breathit.

Knott and Perry counties as E.O.
Robinson instructed when he gave the University the properties.
To date there's been no inkling that UK is asking for bids on the seven tracts of land the trustees approved. If this bidding is underway, you'd think it would be making headlines across this state and certainly would be required to appear in the local papers where the lands are located.

lands unsuitable designation for the Robinson Forest.

We too love the land — the hills, but people must come first.

We remind you that Robinson Forest is not vigni land. It is not Lilly's Wood. It is land that has been referested and cut for timber several times. And some sections have been timbered by UK and nev-ter reforested.

diced few at UK saw the presenta-tion by Arch, not all of the UK trustees.

Instead, these few officials easily persuaded the trustees the coal mining should not be allowed because it would damage the valuable research in progress in the Clemons Watershed of Robinson Forest.

We'd like to think that right will win out in this dispute and that eventually, after unnecessary litigation and lengthy delays, all will be resolved.

tion and lengthy delays, all will be resolved.

We know Arch will continue to fight for its right to mine; it has filed a lawait in Breathitt Circuit Court that will be heard in mid-December. But having lost the faith, it's hard at this point to keep hoping.

The Jackson Times wants these 250 workers, and another 20 in a couple weeks for a total of 270, to know that it really cares about them and about Jackson and Breathitt counties.

and about Jackson and Breatmic counties.

Also involved are 75 salaried workers with uncertain fates and also the truckers. It's the pebble making waves in the water. It spreads on and on.

We shall continue to support Arcl On The North Fork. We think E.O. Robinson would approve. He obviously cared about people, too!

... I would have voted for Mitch McConnell — not because I agree with everything he has done, but compared to Harvey, I feel he's the lesser of two evils. I don't particularly like either one, though."

Brandon Smith, a political science senior, said he supports McConnell.

McConnell.

"He is a friend of my family," Smith said. "It would scare me to death to have somebody like Harvey Sloane in office."

"To be honest ... I don't know much about the candidates ... in general I always pull the republican lever across the board, "said Mike Mills, an electrical engineering and computer science junior.
