

Ted Mondale assails Reagan

By DOUGLASE PITTINGER
Staff Writer

Ted Mondale, 26, the oldest son of Walter F. Mondale, Democratic presidential candidate, made a stop on the Democratic presidential campaign yesterday on campus. He gave a speech at Worsham Theater in which he accused Ronald Reagan of being out of mainstream politics and criticized his policies on several issues including arms control, education, agriculture and the nation's economy.

Speaking from an enthusiastic crowd wearing Mondale-Ferraro buttons and holding signs, Mondale said the two political parties in America used to work together.

"There used to be a responsible mainstream in the Republican Party," he said. "When my father was attorney general of Minnesota and when he served for 12 years in the U.S. Senate and again to the White House, leaders on both sides of the aisles worked together on the great issues of our time because they understood that was best for our country — that is until Ronald Reagan."

Mondale criticized Reagan's education programs by saying he thinks excellence in education comes from cutting budgets, cutting student loans and cutting research and development in universities.

He also said that for 40 years presidents of both parties had actively participated in arms control, until Ronald Reagan. "There is no reason to doubt Reagan's desire for peace, but a president must also master, command, learn and lead. You can dream all you want, but if you believe nuclear missiles can be recalled after they're launched, as Mr. Reagan did, you won't lead us to a safer world."

"You can dream till your heart's content, but if you think submarines and bombers don't have nuclear warheads on them, as Mr. Reagan thought, you won't move us away from the brink. You can dream of the lion laying down with the lamb, but if you don't learn that most Soviet missiles are land based as Mr. Reagan's not bother to learn, then your efforts at arms control are doomed from the start. I don't know what else this man doesn't know."

but let's not find out in the middle of the night."

According to Mondale, Reagan does not stand up for American workers because he gives tax breaks to corporations that ship jobs overseas, then tells the unemployed workers to look in the want ads. "Mr. Reagan, we don't get those foreign periodicals here in this country."

He also stated that since the time of George Washington, presidents of both parties have understood that government must live within its means or otherwise the next generation will face a debt, but he said Ronald Reagan is on his way to racking up a higher federal debt than all presidents before him combined.

Mondale called Reagan the biggest budget buster in history and said the government is borrowing $5 million every 24 hours. "And at that rate by 1989, all of the tax dollars that hard working Americans pay, from January to June, half of every cent you pay to the government, will not be spent on defense, or schools, or roads, or jobs, but solely on interest payments on the huge Reagan debt."

He said he watched the Republican convention and saw that Reagan never mentioned the future, but instead asked if people were better off now than they were four years ago.

"The 70,000 new millionaires are," Mondale said, "the 90,000 corporations that don't pay a penny in taxes, are, but ask the three million workers who've lost their jobs in manufacturing. Ask the six million people who slipped below the poverty line."

He said his father is questioning what can we do for our country in the next four years and will focus on several issues no matter what the political consequences. "This election isn't about jelly beans and pens, it's about toxic dumps that give cancer to our children. This election isn't about country music and birthday cakes, it's about old people who can't pay for medicine."

"This election isn't about Republicans sending hecklers to my father's events, it's about Jerry Falwell picking Supreme Court justices. This election is not about the size of Ronald Reagan's crowds, but about the size of his deficits."

TED MONDALE

He addressed Reagan's accusation that his father is a pessimist by saying that he is pessimistic only about Reagan's ability to lead America into the future. He also said Reagan represents a defeatist attitude by pretending problems don't exist, but said every four years there is a day of reckoning — election day. "It's 37 days away and my father is going to win this race."

Former leader of Costa Rica to visit UK

By ANDY ELLISON
Staff Writer

A former president of Costa Rica has been named an Ashland Oil Visiting Professor at UK.

Bunel Oduber, president of the Central American country from 1974 to 1978, will visit the campus the week of Oct. 21-28, and will speak to several classes, including political science, history, Spanish and Latin American studies groups. He will return to the campus for two weeks in the spring semester, and again next year.

The visiting professorship is made possible by a grant from Ashland Oil.

"We think the Ashland Fellows program is an excellent vehicle for exposing our students and faculty to interesting individuals with perceptions that are shaped by experiences few of us encounter," said Jack Doyle, executive assistant to the vice-president of Ashland Oil. "President Oduber is such a person."

Oduber is the second recipient of the Ashland Oil grant. Tom Wicker, associate editor of the New York Times, received the first professorship in 1982. Oduber was recommended for the visiting professorship by the UK Latin American Studies program.

"It's not often that we in Kentucky have the opportunity to interact with a president of a Central American country," said Kenneth M. Coleman, director of the Latin American Studies program. He said that because Costa Rica is the only democracy in Latin America, listening to what Costa Ricans have to say concerning the future of democracy in the region is "especially important."

Coleman added that Oduber first came to the program's attention through his work in the Inter-American Dialogue, a private advisory organization of Americans and Latin Americans that meets in Washington, D.C. The organization has issued two reports on inter-American relations.

"He has been an important participant in that discussion," Coleman said. He added that Oduber was invited to speak at a two-day conference sponsored last year by Latin American Studies, and that the group was so impressed by him that they nominated him for the visiting professorship.

In addition to speaking to several class meetings, Oduber also will go to Ashland to meet with Ashland Oil officials and to visit the campus of Ashland Community College.

He also will participate in a conference sponsored by Latin American Studies. The conference, titled "Democracy in Central America: Hemispheric Perspectives," will include speakers such as Carl Gershman, president of the National Endowment for Democracy, and Carlos Aguilar of the CBS Television News.

Oduber also will speak to the Gaines fellows and students in the Patterson School of Diplomacy.

"We are privileged and honored to have such an individual with us," said Vincent Davis, director of the Patterson School of Diplomacy. "This an extremely lucky opportunity for a small group of students to rub elbows with a famous person."

Both Davis and Raymond Betts, director of the University Honors Program and coordinator of the Gaines fellows, commented on the "direct, personal contact" afforded by Oduber's visit.

Students get hands-on training at new information laboratory

By SCOTT WARD
Staff Writer

The College of Library and Information Science has a new way to give students hands-on training in library and information science.

Timothy Sineath, dean of the college, said the college is using an information laboratory "to give the student experience with real information problems and real clients" as opposed to simply learning from the textbook. He said this is the only such lab in the country that he knows of.

Sineath compared the program to a dental school which provides low cost dental treatment to attract patients for advanced dental students working under faculty supervision. He said the information laboratory will offer research assistance to advanced graduate students and faculty in locating research.

Presently however, the lab is operating on a limited basis, dealing only with "in house" research problems. The lab will be phased in and will "not be open to the University at large until we can accommodate them."

Sineath said the information lab is "not duplicating the services... of the library." He said librarians can usually only give "citations" that tell what resources pertain to a subject, but they cannot tell how these resources are related to the research. Other sources of gathering information, such as the new computerized literature searches have the same limitations.

He said the information laboratory provides a "level (of research assistance) we can't get from libraries because they don't have the staff to do it. Instead of just giving citations, the lab can provide synopses and analyses of the citations."

To accomplish this, a person needing research assistance must describe exactly what their particular research needs are in an interview with a lab worker. The lab worker then utilizes conventional research methods to find pertinent material. This material is then analyzed and briefs are written, saving the researcher time and effort.

He said the lab may charge a fee for its services to help pay for ongoing expenses such as the cost of data base searching, phone charges and graduate assistant wages, but this is not definite.

Sineath said the lab will not suffer from lack of business, but lack of funding. The lab now has met about one half of its equipment needs, but is suffering some difficulty raising the rest of the money. He said there is no set date for when the lab will begin full operation, but he said the college will "launch it when we can adequately fund it."

Alumni of the college and Sineath have developed some unusual fundraising drives in the of overcoming this problem.

The first was a phone-a-thon last spring. About 10 alumni spent three hours talking on phones, asking for donations from other alumni. Sineath said almost $4,000 was raised from the phone-a-thon, which contacted 504 alumni. About 150 of those contacted donated money.

Another project was a garage sale last Saturday. Alumni donated advertising and old merchandise including clothes, antiques, appliances and toys. The garage sale netted about $700, Sineath said.

In terms of equipment, Sineath said the $4,700 is the equivalent of two IBM micro-computers and some software to operate them. He said the college is also soliciting funds from the University. The money raised by the fundraising drives and any money the University may appropriate will cover the initial equipment costs, he said.

TV influences life, Wylie says

By NATALIE CAUDILL

Sue Wylie, a news broadcaster for Lexington television station WLEX-Channel 18, spoke about the impact television has had in her life and upon American society yesterday.

The presentation was sponsored by the Donovan Scholars Program.

Wylie, a resident of Lexington for 16 years, said she has been in television since the early '50s.

"Everybody wanted to be in programming and on television," she said.

In 1956, she went to work at the second NBC station in the United States in Miami, Fla., where she worked a movie hostess.

Wylie was moved to news. "Of course, they wanted me to do a fashion segment, a cooking segment... something that they considered womanly back then," she said.

She went on to become the first woman in the state of Florida in news.

Wylie said she never really noticed that they were not hiring females.

"It was a pattern; you just accepted it," she said.

She said television is very cosmetically oriented. "We judge people instantaneously and viewers have picked up on that," Wylie said.

"The first thing that hits you is your appearance; skin color, age and sex," she said. "Fifty-five percent of what you decide about someone is in that first glance... fair or not."

"Thirty-eight percent is determined by how you sound. Not by what you say — words are meaningless, it's how you sound," Wylie said.

Seminar on care of elderly to focus on understanding of aging process

By DARRLELL CLEM
Senior Staff Writer

The problems inherent in caring for elderly family members at home will be the focus of a five-session training series at the University.

According to Linda Brasfield, director of the Council on Aging and associate director of the Multidisciplinary Center of Gerontology, the classes will promote understanding about the normal aging process and improve family members' skills in caring for the elderly. The sessions will be ideal for people who are currently taking care of an elderly person at home or for those who anticipate doing so in the future, she said.

The sessions will run from Oct. 12 through Nov. 9 at the Sanders-Brown Research Center on Aging. Classes will be held on Fridays from 8:45 a.m. to noon.

Attempts will be made to help families feel more comfortable with their role as "caregiver" and give them the skills to avoid institutionalization of elderly family members, Brasfield said.

"They'll get some practice — like making a bed with a person in it and giving them the skills to avoid institutionalization of elderly family members," Brasfield said.

Also to be addressed are problems of mobility, which affect both the elderly and the caregivers. "Getting (the elderly) in and out of a car can be a big problem," Brasfield said. Also, many people who care for the elderly are unable to leave home for extended periods of time, she said. "It's a difficult group to reach," Brasfield said. "They're in their home and you don't see them."

"Say a husband is disabled — the wife often can't get out," Brasfield said, and "this places a tremendous strain on the caregiver. Stress often gets translated into illness, and you have two sick people instead of one," she said.

The assumption that families are insensitive to the elderly is incorrect, and at-home care will be increasingly important in future years, according to Brasfield. "I think it's a myth that families don't care about older family members," she said. "Anyone would prefer to be in their own home as long as they can."

"With the increasing number of older people and the increasing cost of health care, we have to find other (methods of care) than institutions," she said. "One of the biggest fears of an elderly person — or anyone — is being dependent on another person."

Brasfield said the gerontology center is responding to societal needs of the elderly as witnessed by such people as home health care workers,

Field film premieres for free tonight

By KAKIE URCH
Staff Writer

The Student Activities Board, in association with Tri-Slar Pictures, will present a free showing of "Places of the Heart," a new film starring Sally Field, tonight at 9:30 in the Worsham Theater.

Tickets to this local premiere will be distributed at the Information Desk in the lower level of the Student Center. Ticket distribution, beginning at 10:30 a.m. today will continue on a first-come, first-serve basis until the 250 available tickets have been distributed.

"Places of the Heart" is written and directed by Robert Benton, author and director of "Kramer vs. Kramer" and "Bonnie and Clyde." The script is autobiographical, based on Benton's experiences growing up in rural Waxahachie, Texas, in the early 1930s.

Field plays the part of Benton's aunt, Edna Benton, a young widow struggling to support her family. She takes in boarders, and with the help of a friendly itinerant worker, harvests cotton, while raising two small children.

Field won her first Academy

SALLY FIELD

Award for her dramatic portrayal of a union organizer in "Norma Rae."

The part of Edna Benton's sister, Margaret Lomax, is played by Lindsay Crouse, whose credits include parts in "Prince of the City" and "The Verdict." Crouse's character supports her family with the operation of a small beauty parlor.

John Malkovich and Ed Harris, both veterans of Sam Shepherd stage productions, play in the key male roles. Malkovich is Edna's blind lodger, Harris, most recently seen in "Swing Shift," plays the part of Wayne Lomax, Edna's lascivious brother-in-law.

Danny Glover makes his film debut in the role of Maze, Edna's sharecropper friend. Originally considered too young for the part, Glover gave such a strong audition reading that Benton rewrote the part for him.

Against the backdrop of Waxahachie in the '30s, the characters in "Places of the Heart" struggle with such issues as racism and marital infidelity while trying to survive difficult times.

They come to the understanding that forgiveness is necessary for harmonious co-existence in a small American town.

The Student Activities Board is proud to present the premiere of this dramatic chronicle of the rural American experience. Joan Loughrey, SAB program adviser said: "We are one of only six schools in the nation with 35-millimeter equipment. Because we are lucky enough to have the facilities, we can take advantage of opportunities like this premiere."

Professor's works displayed

An exhibition of recent paintings and drawings by Robert Tharsing, associate professor of art, opened this Monday at the Center for Contemporary Art. It is a rich visual experience, where brilliancy and range of color along with intense, expressive brushwork abound.

Themes run from quiet, realistically rendered landscape drawings to socio-political events and more timeless, universal statements. The overall feeling derived from viewing Tharsing's works is a love for the act of painting. Vibrant juxtaposition of color along with contrast of textural application are strong testimony to Tharsing's extensive vocabulary.

The majority of Tharsing's works are large, yet he also likes to work quite small. While the dynamic brushwork and color remain the same, an "increase in drama, impact and aggressiveness" results. "A small painting has a sense of precousness and intimacy to it," he said, while a large painting creates "more tension between the viewer and itself."

The most striking aspect of Tharsing's paintings is the contrast of an abstract foundation of veils of color with readable yet open-ended images. Using raw canvas rather than gessoed, Tharsing pours and spreads several layers of thinned color creating "the implication of space." These overlays and transparencies multiply color diversity and intensity.

From this level to succeeding ones, he uses thicker, multi-colored pools of paint spread over the surface, creating solid forms of abstract definition. Readable imagery is expressively developed up out of this abstract space. Rocks, water, fire, clouds, deities, people float or find their own space and vantage point.

"Political Science" is collage-like in effect. Every part develops its own color scheme and space, giving a simultaneous, free-floating, yet unified effect. Visual fragments representing aspects of current events are depicted over the same surface, signifying the simultaneity and complexity of world events, their repercussions and dissonances.

"Abuses of Power I & II" also have this quality. Visually, it doesn't matter where one starts or stops. There is no beginning and no end.

Juxtaposition of visual images generates meaning through proximity. Tharsing said, "Geography Lesson: East & West" depicts an erupting volcano at the left, melting in its own fires, while to the right, three huge cannon heads shoot up and in toward this natural disaster, as if reaffirming the inevitability of uncontrolled power and concomitant destruction.

Paintings using landscape elements are the richest in varied paint application, freedom, and dynamic expression. They are also more open to personal interpretation. Archetypal symbols run through many of these. "Fire in the Cave," "View with Cliffs," "Hope & Despair" and "The River" all have a mythological sensibility. Water, fire, earth, the cave and the boat all become multi-layered symbols.

"View with Cliffs" is strangely beautiful and disquieting. The contrast of peach-colored skies filled with billowing clouds of stormy, heavy gray creates a tension reinforced by the tilted perspective of a distant shoreline below. This shore is hedged in on either side by aggressively painted cliffs dominating the foreground, and engulfed by swirling, deep blue waters.

There is always a sense of ambiguity in Tharsing's paintings, no matter how explicit the imagery. The stroke of the brush, the physicality of the paint and unusual color choice against a stained, synthetic space, continually recall to the viewer the evolution of each painting and the artist's presence.

Irresolution is pertinent to Tharsing's paintings. "We tend to want to resolve things," he said, "yet things keep changing, and nothing is ever completely resolved."

Tharsing has brought together 25 works, creating a rich, varied and dynamic environment in which one could spend a long time.

The Center for Contemporary Art is in the Fine Arts Building. Hours are from 12:40 p.m. daily. There will be an opening reception for the artist from 4-6 p.m. this Friday, Oct. 5. The public is invited to attend.

Wildcats back to basics over two-week break

By CELESTE R. PHILLIPS
Staff Writer

With a week off from the regular season, the UK coaching staff was able to accomplish many things with the football team, Coach Jerry Claiborne said at yesterday's press conference.

This past week, Claiborne took his Wildcats back to the basics of football. Taking advantage of the open date last Saturday, the Wildcats worked on getting their fundamentals solid for the upcoming Rutgers game this Saturday.

The team worked mainly on improving the blocking and tackling, but the team also strived toward making fewer mistakes and committing less turnovers. So far in the season, UK has had five fumbles and one interception.

"The biggest thing we did, those few days that we had, was trying to get back to our basic fundamentals and do a better job of blocking and tackling and not creating mistakes," Claiborne said.

Senior offensive guard Frank Hare said the open date gave the team the opportunity to improve on its basic skills. This, according to Hare, was one of the problems of the team during the game against Tulane.

At first when we came back, we worked on fundamentals," Hare said. "Coach Claiborne thought we had to work pretty hard on the fundamentals cause we weren't as fundamentally sound as we should have been down at Tulane."

The open date also gave the Wildcats time to let their wounds from a hard-hitting Tulane game heal.

Sophomore defensive lineman Tom Wilkins, who received a hyperextended knee in that game, should be ready for Rutgers, Claiborne said. Don Duckworth, a reserve guard who received an injury during the Tulane game, also is trying to get ready for Saturday's game.

Senior defensive tackle Jeff Smith, who injured a kneecap in New Orleans, will not be able to play Saturday.

The Cats also worked on strength over the two week layoff. Although they did not practice Monday and Tuesday of last week, they still went through extensive workouts, including weight lifting.

According to junior offensive tackle Vernon Johnson, the conditioning enabled them to build up their strength.

"We were able to get our legs back," Johnson said. "We worked extra hard in the weight room to maintain our strength and to increase it."

Since the team has two weeks off, they worked on fundamentals for a week and will continue to prepare for Rutgers this week.

UK's coaching staff had been able to view films of Rutgers as early as last week and have been working on a game plan.

"We had good practice sessions and hopefully we'll have three more good practice sessions this week in preparation for this Rutgers team," Claiborne said.

Rutgers, 3-1 on the season, is a "very polished" team according to Claiborne.

"They make very few mistakes," he said. "They've had only one turnover in the past two games. They also cause teams to make turnovers."

Claiborne has been stressing that his players work hard on getting back to the "solid, crisp playing" they displayed earlier in the year.

"They (Rutgers) don't make mistakes and their turnover margin is very, very good," Claiborne said. "They've been creating things and making their opponents turn the ball over."

When asked if he thinks the two weeks of practicing will have a good effect on the team, Claiborne said he wouldn't know until after the game.

"We'll find that out Saturday how good their going to be," Claiborne said. "If it's over and you did well, you did a good job; if it's over and you didn't do well, you did a poor job and you start all over again."

If Rutgers should come this weekend and beat UK, what will be the new cliché for the Kentucky football team? Back to the drawing board!

UK's Vernon Johnson talks with assistant coach Ferrell Sheridan and other members of the team during last year's win over Indiana. Johnson said the Cats built up their strength during their week off last week.

Chicago stomps on San Diego in National League opener

CHICAGO (AP) — Gary Matthews hit two home runs to lead a record-breaking parade of five Chicago homers as the Cubs clobbered the San Diego Padres 13-0 yesterday in the first game of the best-of-five National League Championship Series.

Besides Matthews, the Cubs got home runs from Bob Dernier, Ron Cey and Rick Sutcliffe, who had a 16-1 record with Chicago.

Dernier, who scored three runs, and Matthews, who had four RBI, hit solo homers off Padres' right-hander Eric Show for the Cubs' first two runs in the first. Sutcliffe hit a leadoff homer in the third, and Matthews added a three-run homer in a six-run fifth during which the Cubs sent 12 men to the plate against reliever Greg Harris.

Cey hit his fourth career playoff homer in the sixth inning.

The five homers broke a League Championship Series record accomplished four times previously, twice in each league.

Sutcliffe yielded only singles to Steve Garvey and Garry Templeton, struck out eight and walked five in seven innings. Warren Bruslarf allowed four hits in the last two innings, completing a six-hitter.

Garvey got the first hit off the Cubs' ace when he reached on a bunt single in the fourth.

Aided by a 20 mph wind blowing out toward center field, Dernier's leadoff homer cleared the screen behind the left-field bleachers and landed in Waveband Avenue. It came on a 1-0 pitch from Show, who had yielded 18 homers during the regular season.

After Ryne Sandberg struck out, Matthews hit his homer, a low line drive in left-center that delighted the 36,282 rabid fans.

Dernier had only hit three homers during the season, Matthews, 14.

Sutcliffe, meanwhile, had taken aim at the rather large strike zone of Cavanaugh with great success over the first three innings. He struck out two batters each in the second and third innings, including McReynolds and Show. He did not allow a baserunner until Martinez walked to lead off the third.

Leading off the bottom of the inning, Sutcliffe hit only the third League Championship Series homer by a pitcher, smashing an 8-1 pitch from Show into Sheffield Avenue, over the right-field bleachers.

Before the inning was over, Chicago had scored two more runs, on an RBI single by Leon Durham and a sacrifice fly by Moreland. And the Padres were in the hole, 5-0.

Dernier led off the Cubs' fifth with a double, and Harris walked Sandberg. And the Cubs had their two tashers — who had scored more than 200 runs between them — on base. Matthews hit the next pitch from Harris into the right-field bleachers for his second homer of the game.

The score was 8-0 Chicago.

Harris got the first out of the inning when Durham grounded to second, but Moreland followed with an infield single up the middle. Cey walked, and Jody Davis drove in the fourth run of the inning with a single. Another run scored on Larry Bowa's fielder's choice grounder, and after a bloop single by Sutcliffe and a walk to Dernier, Sandberg drove in a run with a single. The inning finally ended when Matthews struck out.

The Cubs added two runs in the sixth. Cey hit a two-out homer off Harris. Davis followed with a double and scored when Show's infield single struck away Bowa's infield single for an error.

We Are Trying To Prevent A Measles Epidemic
At The University Of Kentucky!

From 1963-1970 many children were vaccinated with "killed virus" vaccines that unfortunately did not give long lasting immunity. Therefore many college students who were vaccinated during these years are NOT immune.

This situation has led to some serious measles epidemics on college campuses over the past three or four years. These epidemics occurred at neighboring universities such as Indiana, Hurdue and Miami of Ohio in addition to many other colleges nationwide.

For this reason the Student Health Service is conducting a measles immunization clinic:

WHEN: October 1 through October 5

WHERE: MEDICAL PLAZA BUILDING (the entrance to the building is just beyond the overhead bridge across Rose St.) FIRST FLOOR BEHIND THE INFORMATION DESK

TIME: 9 a.m. to 3 p.m.

COST: $5

THERE IS NO HARM IN RECEIVING A SECOND IMMUNIZATION IF THERE IS ANY DOUBT ABOUT YOUR IMMUNITY. (Students born before 1957 do not need further immunization because they would be considered exposed to natural measles and would be expected to have natural immunity.)

Protection of the University of Kentucky student body requires 100% participation. Please give this matter your prompt attention. We need your cooperation to assure that U.K. does not experience a measles epidemic in this and future years.

Nicaraguan elections postponed

MANAGUA, Nicaragua — The leftist Sandinista government and the leading political opposition agreed yesterday to postpone elections scheduled for Nov. 4, but not on a new date, an opposition source said yesterday.

The source, who asked not to be named for security reasons, said the agreement was reached in Rio de Janeiro, Brazil, where Sandinista political coordinator Bayardo Arce met yesterday with opposition leader Arturo Cruz. He said the meeting was arranged through the Socialist International, a worldwide organization of Socialist parties and affiliates meeting in Brazil.

Jackson to speak in Louisville

LOUISVILLE — The Rev. Jesse Jackson is scheduled to speak at a voter-registration rally Sunday in Louisville, officials said.

Jackson, an unsuccessful candidate for the Democratic nomination, will speak at 2 p.m. at Memorial Auditorium. The rally is sponsored by the Citizenship Education Fund, a coalition of 38 non-partisan groups around the state promoting voter registration.

Volunteers will go door-to-door Saturday and Sunday to register voters, said state Sen. Georgia Powers, D-Louisville, director of the education fund.

The deadline for registering is midnight next Tuesday. The group's goal is to register 17,000 new voters in Kentucky.

Two marines held in death

TOKYO — Two U.S. Marines were held in military custody yesterday for investigation of the killing of a third Marine, a 19-year-old Pennsylvania woman whose body was found in a flaming vehicle on Okinawa, U.S. military authorities said.

The detained Marines were identified as Pfc. Comrado Perez, Jr., 20, and Cpl. Alfonso Contreras, Jr., 19, both of the 3rd Landing Support Battalion of the 3rd Force Service Support Group. Their hometowns were not listed in the statement issued by the U.S. Forces Marine Liaison Office.

A spokesman in the press office, Sgt. Tom Evans, identified the victim as Pfc. Lori Gavula, 19, of Mahanoy City, Pa. The military announcement said she died of injuries to the brain.

The media office statement said the victim was allegedly picked up near Kadena Air Base and taken to Perez' apartment in Oyama, near Kadena, where she was allegedly murdered.

The statement said Perez and Contreras were suspected in the killing of Ms. Gavula.

The media office statement said she was assigned to the Headquarters and S.D. Battalion, at the Marine base at Camp S.D. Butler in Okinawa, northern Japan.

Religion is the root and anchor of values, religion professor says

By MYRA BOTTOM Reporter

Religion is the root and anchor of our values, according to Donald Nugent, a history and religious studies professor. "It is the root acknowledged or not. It has intrinsic value for everyone," he said.

Nugent, who has written numerous books under the pseudonym Christopher Nugent, is teaching "History of Western Religious Thoughts" for the first time this semester.

The class, which is offered at 6 p.m. on Tuesdays and Thursdays, covers religious thoughts from Ancient Judaism to the Renaissance. "It is not taught from any confessional position or denominational position, it's ecumenical. The ecumenical movement is the idea to reconcile unity in the churches," Nugent said.

The difference between the religious studies offered at UK and courses in a theological seminary is that religious studies introduces and examines many different religious thoughts, while a seminary focuses on one religion. "The main difference is that the objective is to inform than inflame," Nugent said. "We (UK) live with the first amendment. We aren't in any position to take any partisan view."

Nugent said religious studies are very important to a college education. "I don't think it is vital to a liberal arts education. You don't have to be a believer, obviously, to be interested. One can take it for either history or religious studies.

"The unexamined faith is not worth believing," he said.

UK now offers a minor in religious studies, consisting of 18 hours with several prerequisites. Nugent said he hopes UK will eventually offer a major in religious studies.

"The success of our program in religious studies depends on the receptibility of the students," he said.

"For me this response has been mostly gratifying. I think it has been a good experience."

"A History of Western Religious Thoughts II" course will be offered next semester. It will cover the Renaissance, Thomas Merton, Thomas Barth and the theology of liberation.

Television has effected the political elections.

"The electronic media certainly does play an important part in the elections. It is a shame that candidates' success is linked to how much money they have to buy commercials," Wylie said.

Among the people that Wylie has met, she said she admires Rose Kennedy and Cornelia Wallis, former first lady of Kentucky.

"She's (Wylie) very good. I think she does an excellent job," said Margaret McCormick, a Donovan Scholar.

So far, more men than women have shown interest in the sessions, Brasfield said, maybe because their wives are disabled and the men are less adept at cooking and other household chores. About 10 people have registered for the classes, which are free, and a limit of about 20 has been set.

Court urged to cut high-school rights

By RICHARD CARELLI Associated Press

WASHINGTON — The Supreme Court was urged yesterday to help combat drug trafficking and violence in the nation's public schools by trimming students' legal protection against searches by their teachers.

"The Fourth Amendment should be held inapplicable to school searches," a New Jersey prosecutor argued in seeking to have teachers exempted from the rules to which police officers must comply.

The Constitution's Fourth Amendment forbids unreasonable government searches. Generally, police must obtain a court warrant based on probable suspicion of a crime before conducting any search.

"Discipline cannot be maintained by teachers encumbered with the same (standards) as police officers," state Deputy Attorney General Allan Nodas said as he urged adoption of "a common-sense approach to the problems teachers face each day."

The justices must decide whether drugs and weapons seized from students in searches that would have been unlawful if conducted by police may be used as evidence when the students stand trial.

The New Jersey Supreme Court, ruling in a case from Piscataway High School, said that the "exclusionary rule" barring unlawfully seized evidence from criminal trials applies to searches in public schools by school officials.

The state court did not bar school officials from basing disciplinary action on evidence seized in unlawful searches, but said such evidence may not be used in court.

Nodas urged the high court to overturn the New Jersey court's ruling. Even if the Fourth Amendment does govern searches by teachers, the constitutional protection should be applied less rigorously, he said.

But Lois DeJulio, the East Orange, N.J., lawyer representing a former Piscataway High student whose purse was searched, argued that students should not be treated as prison inmates with only limited privacy rights.

The New Jersey controversy arose when on March 7, 1980, a 14-year-old girl was caught smoking in a Piscataway High restroom.

"After the girl, identified in court records only as T.L.O., denied smoking, a vice principal searched her pocketbook and found a pack of cigarettes. Digging further into the purse, the vice principal also found drug paraphernalia and records indicating that T.L.O. was selling marijuana to her fellow students."

Police were called and the girl subsequently was prosecuted as a juvenile. But the New Jersey Supreme Court last year overturned a delinquency finding against her after ruling that the girl's constitutional rights had been violated by the search.

The materials seized from her purse never had been used as evidence, the state court said.

Donovan not the first official to be indicted

By HARRY F. ROSENTHAL
Associated Press
WASHINGTON — While American history is studied with crimes, Labor Secretary Raymond Donovan apparently is the first cabinet officer to be indicted while in office.
Spiro T. Agnew, vice president in the scandal-plagued Nixon administration, escaped indictment by pleading no-contest to income tax evasion and resigning immediately as part of a plea-bargaining agreement.

Even in the fabled Teapot Dome scandal of the 1920s, Interior Secretary Albert B. Fall was already out of office when he was indicted . . .

Richard M. Nixon, himself, was named by the Watergate grand jury as a criminal conspirator, but he was not indicted. After he resigned, while prosecutors were thinking about charging him, Nixon was pardoned by his successor, Gerald R. Ford, for all crimes committed in office.

John N. Mitchell, who had been attorney general in the Nixon administration, was indicted, convicted and served a prison sentence — but he was out of office when the grand jury brought charges. Maurice Stans, Nixon's Commerce secretary, also was indicted but he, too, was out of office.
Even in the fabled Teapot Dome scandal of the 1920s, Interior Secretary Albert B. Fall was already out of office when he was indicted for bribery and conspiracy.

In the Carter administration, Bert Lance, resigned because of allegations of financial improprieties. He was not indicted until he was long out of Washington.
Before that, in the Watergate days, the men closest to Richard Nixon got into trouble with the law. Agnew and Mitchell, H.R. Haldeman and the president's chief of staff, John D. Ehrlichman, his former top domestic adviser — in all, 11 men who had served in the White House or other top posts.

Agnew pleaded no contest and resigned on the same day in 1973. He claimed he was innocent but a civil court in Maryland nearly a decade later held that he received kickbacks while he was governor and vice president. Agnew paid the state $268,482, representing $147,500 in kickbacks and $101,255 in interest.
The other Nixon men were tried, convicted of crimes, and served time in prison: Haldeman and Ehrlichman, 18 months each; Mitchell, 14 months.

Lance resigned as director of the Office of Management and Budget in the Carter administration in 1977. He was indicted by a federal grand jury in Atlanta in May 1979, along with three business associates, on charges that they conspired to obtain $20 million in loans for their own benefit from at least 41 banks from 1970 to 1978.
A jury acquitted Lance on nine counts of bank fraud and a mistrial was declared on three remaining counts. The judge dismissed those charges later at the request of the government.

Donovan pleads innocent to charges of theft

By JOHN SHANAHAN
Associated Press Writer

NEW YORK — Labor Secretary Raymond Donovan and nine other people pleaded innocent yesterday to stealing $8 million from New York City on a subway construction contract awarded two years before Donovan joined the Reagan administration.
Donovan — believed to be the first sitting Cabinet member ever indicted — appeared in state Supreme Court in the Bronx along with his nine codefendants, who include a Democratic state senator. All pleaded innocent to a 157-count indictment charging them with one count of grand larceny, 125 counts of falsifying business records and 11 counts of false filings.
The grand larceny charge carries a maximum penalty on conviction of seven years in prison. The other counts each carry four-year maximums.
The indictment also named as defendants the Schiavone Construction Co. of Secaucus, N.J., of which Donovan was executive vice president, and Jopel Contracting and Trucking Corp. of the Bronx, one of whose owners was the indicted state senator, Joseph Galiber.

The indictment said the money was stolen from the city Transit Authority, which gave a $186 million contract to Schiavone as the primary contractor. Schiavone allegedly padded payments it made to Jopel, a subcontractor.

"They engaged in a scheme whereby they filed inflated, phony, false records with the Transit Authority," Bronx District Attorney Mario Merola said.
Donovan said afterward that Merola "may have won today's battle by the misuse of his office, but I guarantee you that he will not win the war."
He said he was shocked to learn that none of the questions he was asked during his appearance before the grand jury last week related to the charges in the 73-page indictment. "The indictment was obviously prepared before I testified," he said.

The labor secretary, who came through two previous investigations of his activities as executive vice president of Schiavone, has maintained that the indictment was the work of a Democratic district attorney playing politics.
"I've enjoyed four-party support," replied Merola.

who had Republican Party backing in three of four runs for office.

"Nobody's above the law," he said at a news conference after the arraignment. "We have a state senator, a man who was my friend. . . He's black and he's a Democrat. We had to do what we had to do."

President Reagan, who agreed to Donovan's request Monday for a leave without pay while he fought the charges, said he considered the 54-year-old Cabinet member innocent until proven guilty.
Merola said the path to Donovan's indictment was paved by his office's investigation of two murder charges, said he considered the 54-year-old Cabinet member innocent until proven guilty.

League won't change debate time for baseball

By CHRISTOPHER CONNELL
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — The League of Women Voters will not change the starting time for Sunday's first presidential debate, even if it conflicts with a crucial baseball playoff game, a spokeswoman said yesterday.
ABC-TV, which is broadcasting the American League playoffs, has not decided what to do if the Detroit Tigers-Kansas City Royals series goes to a fifth game, a network spokeswoman said.
That would put the best-of-five playoffs up against the opening 90-minute debate between President Reagan and Walter F. Mondale in Louisville on Sunday.
The league, the debate's sponsor, agreed Monday to start the second and final Reagan-Mondale encounter on Oct. 21 at 8 p.m. EDT, an hour earlier than planned, to accommodate a Sunday night football game on ABC. That contest between the Dallas Cowboys and the New Orleans Saints will kick off at 9:30 p.m., a half-hour later than originally scheduled.

Karen Lebovich, public affairs director for the League of Women Voters, said, "The time for the debate is not going to change. We're aware that the American League could go to a fifth game. We've talked to ABC, the baseball league and the campaigns."
Chuck Adams, associate director of information for Major League Baseball, declined to speculate on whether it would be willing to change the game's 8 p.m. EDT starting time. "At this point, we have not been advised by the network that there is any complication for baseball," he said Tuesday.
Asked what ABC would do if the events overlap, Joanne Bistany, the network's director of news information, said, "We have not resolved that yet. I don't know when a decision will be made. They may wait until Friday to see what happens. And they may not know until Saturday."

Scott Widmeyer, a Mondale campaign spokesman, expressed concern Tuesday about the possibility of an overlap with the baseball game.

"We certainly want the maximum amount of time available to the American public to see the two candidates and the sharp differences between them," he said, adding, "We don't want to see any erosion" of the audience.

John Buckley, a Reagan campaign spokesman, said he hoped a compromise could be worked out. "We hope not to interfere with the game," he added.

U.S. captures spies in two separate incidents

By MICHAEL J. SNIFFEN
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — The FBI charged an East German woman yesterday with spying for the Soviet Union and the grandson of a prize-winning American historian with selling U.S. satellite photographs of a Soviet warship to a London military journal.
The two were arrested Monday night at airports here and in New York in the unrelated cases.
Alice Michelson, 67, of East Germany, was allegedly one of the most elusive types of spies, a so-called "illegal," who arrives here as an ordinary citizen not attached to an embassy and not given diplomatic status.
An alleged spy courier, she was said to have been trapped by a U.S. Army sergeant who pretended to work for the Soviets.

In the other case, Samuel Loring Morison, 40, of Crofton, Md., was charged under the espionage statute with selling secret U.S. satellite photos of a Soviet aircraft carrier being built at a Black Sea naval shipyard to a London military journal, where it was published.

Morison's case marked the first time the government has used the espionage statute to charge an individual who was selling or giving secrets not to a foreign government but to a corporation.
He is the grandson of Samuel Eliot Morison, who won Pulitzer Prizes for biographies of Columbus and of John Paul Jones. The elder Morison, who died in 1976, taught history at Harvard from 1915 to 1965 and is widely known for "The Oxford History of the American People."
A court affidavit by FBI and naval intelligence agents described Morison as dissatisfied with his job as a Soviet amphibious ship analyst at the Naval Intelligence Support Center. Letters extracted by the FBI from the ribbon on his typewriter showed him soliciting a full-time job with Jane's, the publisher of authoritative books on armaments.

While he worked at the intelligence center in Sulland, Md., outside Washington, Morison also was the $5,000-a-year, part-time U.S. editor for Jane's Fighting Ships.
The FBI recovered the photos from Jane's and said it found Morison's fingerprint on one.

In London, Richard Coltart, a spokesman for Jane's, refused to say where the photographs were obtained. The FBI agents said Morison denied taking the photographs or providing them to Jane's.

Reagan, Mondale teams plan parties for after the debate

LOUISVILLE, Ky. (AP) — President Reagan and Walter Mondale are expected to visit the "debate-watching parties" Sunday night after their meeting at the Kentucky Center for the Arts.

The Mondale campaign plans to invite the public to watch the debate on big-screen TV and to hear the Democratic nominee speak at a rally immediately after it ends.

Reagan's guests will have to pass a pre-screening, his state campaign chairman said.
The president's gathering, which will be at an undisclosed, downtown location, will be only "some what open" to the public because of security and crowd-control concerns, said Larry Forge, state Reagan-Bush campaign chairman.

A representative of Mondale said anyone is welcome to watch the debate on six or eight big screens that will be set up in a second-floor meeting room at Commonwealth Convention Center.
The hall holds 1,500 people and tickets won't be required, said Steve Leroy, a campaign advance man for Mondale.

He said Mondale will arrive about 20 minutes after the 1 1/2 hour debate, which begins at 9 p.m., and will address the crowd.

No tickets to the debate at the Kentucky Center are available to the public.

Mondale will arrive in Louisville Saturday while Reagan is due at midday Sunday.

The president apparently has decided against campaigning here Monday, as local Republicans had requested, and instead will fly to North Carolina.

The University of Georgia's Master of Marketing Research Program is truly unique. It is governed by a Board of Advisors drawn from the leaders of industry. Their personal involvement results in an outstanding program that prepares you for the real world.
It's an eighteen month program that combines classroom and on-the-job research experience. It was the first and is still the finest integrated program of graduate study leading to a Master of Marketing Research degree.
As you would expect, admission is selective and competition is stiff. Scholarships are available for qualifying applicants.
