Senior tip: Keep sense of humor during exam week

Don't know why we even bother to have finals. It is not like they can really make a difference in the end result. I know I have never had a final that could make or break my grade in any class. Instead they seem to be an excuse for the University to keep us here longer.

Tiffany Gilmartin
Editorial Editor

I do love finals week though, because there is this unspoken treaty that if you give students extra time to study, they might just do it. So when finals week rolls around, I have the week off work, no classes to attend and two finals to take.

Of course, I would love finals week, since it is the first time each semester I can actually have time to myself. Usually, I finish up my Christmas shopping during the fall finals week, since the malls are not as crowded in the middle of the week as they are on weekends. Actually, during finals week you can often find me doing just about anything except preparing for my exams. To be blunt, I really don't care about finals. I look at it this way: If you don't know what is going on in the class by this time in the semester, why bother? Then again, I am a senior, so I have had lots of time to get jaded about finals. I once studied really hard for tests, way back when I was a freshman and I thought that was what I was supposed to do.

I think my class selection has a great deal to do with my boredom with finals. I had this history class once where the professor gave us this test with four passages written on it and we had to tell the professor what the passages told us about history. O.K., you see there was no right or wrong answer, so I made up stuff. I got a 100 percent on that one. My favorite final professor was David Dick, I had him the year before he was to retire and frankly, I think he was simply tired of teaching. My JAT 101 final consisted of real toughie questions like, "What was the name of the book we used in class," "What is the name of the professor," and "True or False: UK has a world renowned school of Public Relations."

For those enrolled in any other college besides communications, the answer to that one is false. In fact, UK didn't even have a PR program until this semester. It's when I take exams like these that I grow increasingly resentful of the fact that I'm sitting around and waiting to take a test instead of in the warm California sun. But finals are here to stay, even though I think there is a push among some professors to alter this highly confrontational strategy of pedagogy. By the time my nieces and nephews get to college, finals may no longer exist. And they certainly will never again carry the weight they did when my father went to college, where failing the final meant failing the class. So if I am going to be stuck here, I figure I'll make the best of it, and think you should too.

My best advice for everyone is to keep a sense of humor about finals, remember and be glad you were not the lucky recipient of the tiny 3x5 blue book that some smart ass thought would be funny to bring to class. Professors, in their endless search to stop students from cheating, have devised this neo-Communist system that requires each student to show for the exam with two blue books, which will be collected and redistributed randomly. Invariably, each class always has one joker bring the little books and get a large book for their contribution. I tell you, arguing that there was no revolution when Thomas Jefferson was elected in 1800 is not an easy task when three words fill the line. And if all else fails, go shopping, play basketball or even drink a few too many at your favorite watering hole. Finals are not worth getting all riled up about; they're simply regular tests, just don't tell your professors that you have figured it all out. Best of luck to ya!

Hoops for the Holidays

Teams prepare for road schedule

By Rob Herbst
Assistant Sports Editor

Members of UK's basketball teams won't be singing "Home for the Holidays" during this Christmas season.

The men's basketball team will participate in nine games during the break.

For those students outside the Bluegrass who are concerned about withdrawal from UK hoops, never fear. The Cats will be on ESPN or ESPN2 no fewer than four times.

UK will start off with a rematch against Georgia Tech on Dec. 21 in the Georgia Dome. Last year the Cats defeated the Yellow Jackets 83-60 at Rupp; last year Georgia Tech had freshman phenom Stephon Marbury. This year the point guard is paying his dues with the Minnesota Timberwolves in the NBA.

After playing the not-so-dangerous North Carolina-Asheville Bulldogs, UK will participate in the Gatorade Rock 'n' Roll Shootout at Gund Arena in Cleveland.

The Cats will take on Ohio State, a team that went 3-15 in the Big Ten conference.

To end the year, UK will battle its fiercest rival on Dec. 31 in Louisville.

The Cats clobbered the Cardinals 89-66 last year in Rupp Arena, but this time Louisville will have the home court advantage as the teams battle in Freedom Hall. Louisville got the best of the Cats the last time the two foes met in Freedom Hall, when the Cards squeaked by with an 88-86 victory.

For those fans without a ticket to the game, make sure your cable company has ESPN2, because the UK-U of L battle will be shown on ESPN's sister station. Those who subscribe to TCI-Lexington cable have no worries; TCI will televise the game.

The Cats have but a few moments to rest after their battle with Louisville, because they'll take on another archrival only four days later.

Tennessee comes to town Jan. 4, and the talk in Knoxville is that this Volunteers team has improved tremendously. UT does have a young team, which includes Southeastern Conference Freshman of the Year candidate Charles Hathaway.

But the last time a Tennessee team walked out of Rupp Arena with a win was back in 1979.

Yet another big game for the Cats will be Mississippi St. on Jan. 7. While UK-MSU cannot be considered a rivalry, it is obvious the Cats want to win this contest.

It was Mississippi State who ruined the Cats' 27-game winning streak, and it marked Rick Pitino's first-ever loss in the SEC Tournament.

A different Bulldogs team faces UK this year: Mississippi State lost all five starters, including center Erick Dampier and forward Dontae Jones, who killed UK in the SEC Tournament with 28 points.

The Cats will finally get a break when they take on Canisius on Jan. 9 at Rupp and perennial SEC doormat Ole Miss in Oxford, Miss.

Then the Cats travel to Athens, Ga., to take on Georgia. The Bulldogs gave UK their toughest regular season conference battle as UK escaped with an 82-77 win.

The UK women's team will have its hands full over the holidays as well, starting off with a home battle versus 1996 NCAA Tournament qualifier Southwest Missouri State on Dec. 22. It will be the first ever meeting between the two schools.

After a few days off for Christmas, the Cats travel to Philadelphia for the Villanova University Tournament Dec. 29-30.

In the first round of the four team tourney, UK will take on the dangerous Alaska-Anchorage

REDEMPTION The women's basketball team will try to improve its losing record in Southeastern Conference play over the Christmas holidays.

Seawolves. If the Cats can get by the Seawolves, they meet the winner of Villanova and Fairfield.

A trip to Ole Miss awaits UK after New Year's. The Cats meet the Rebels on Jan. 2 as Southeastern Conference play begins. Last year UK went 2-9 in the SEC.

On Jan. 5 UK continues the road trip with a battle against LSU. But what looms ahead could be downright scary for the Cats.

The Cats have the pleasure of hosting Vanderbilt on Jan. 8.

The Commodores advanced to the Elite Eight in last year's NCAA Tournament.

Then UK makes the trip to the Thompson-Boling Arena on Jan. 12 where they battle last year's NCAA champions: Tennessee. The last time UK won in Knoxville was in 1985, when they won 76-72 in overtime.

Topping the list of basketball powerhouses is arch rival Western Kentucky Jan. 14 at home. This season Western Kentucky is a top 15 team and they are thinking Final Four in Bowling Green.

Theaters decked with Oscar faves

By Dan O'Neill
Assistant Arts Editor

Around this time the quality of new films increases dramatically. Producers rush to get their work out to qualify for the Academy Awards in March. It is also no coincidence that the market for movies during the holiday season nearly doubles.

This year is no different, with the majority of Oscar hopefuls expected to be released over the break. The three films with the most potential come from a trio of the business' best directors: Milos Forman, Kenneth Branagh and Jane Campion.

Czech-born director Forman, who has been absent from filmmaking for seven years, makes his triumphant return with the controversial story of pornography king Larry Flynt. Forman's film, The People vs. Larry Flynt, portrays the grade-school dropout and local Kentucky redneck as a champion for First Amendment rights. Woody Harrelson stars as the publishing maverick who created Hustler magazine, and Hole's Courtney Love plays his wife. Former Bill Clinton consultant James Carville, Edward Norton (Primal Fear) and James Cromwell (Babe) add to the unusual cast.

Forman, whose last film was the 1989 Valmont, has raked in Oscars with One Flew over the Cuckoo's Nest and Amadeus. Oliver Stone produces the film and Larry Karaszewski and Scott Alexander, who have written eccentric screenplays such as Ed Wood and Mars Attacks!, penned the script.

Jane Campion follows her astonishing work on The Piano with an adaptation of Henry James' classic novel Portrait of a Lady. In the role of Isabel Archer, Nicole Kidman turns in a career-defining performance as the tormented heroine. Barbara Hershey, Hal Hartley regular Martin Donovan, and John Malkovich, in a role originally meant for William Hurt, comprise the other three leads. Mary-Louise Parker, Shelley Winters, Shelley Duvall, Viggo Mortensen and Richard E. Grant round out the splendid supporting cast.

Perhaps the most ambitious and flamboyant piece of the season comes from Kenneth Branagh's completely uncut, unabridged film version of Shakespeare's Hamlet.

The full-length picture (nearly four hours long) is set in 19th-century England with a cast to drool over.

Branagh takes the title role and surrounds himself with Bard veterans such as Kate Winslet, Julie Christie, Gerard Depardieu and Derek Jacobi. Funnymen Billy Crystal, Robin Williams, Jack Lemmon and Charlton Heston give the cast a must-see quality.

Other films include Rob Reiner's Ghosts of Mississippi, and Madonna and Antonio Banderas in Evita.

WHAT'S your sign?

By Suzanne Raffeld
 Assistant Arts Editor

Aries (March 21-April 19): On your very last test, you make your most profound contribution to class — you eat the exam. This brings up your participation grade, but you still manage to fail the course.

Taurus (April 20-May 20): You've studied hard all semester, so all you need are C's on your exams in order to maintain your A's. But you forget to take your medication, which causes you to go completely wacky and do strange things, like pretending you're a bull and charging your professor. This doesn't earn you bonus points.

Gemini (May 21-June 20): You've studied, you're caffeinated — you're as prepared as you're gonna be for that math final. But in one brief, irreplaceable moment in time, you lose all your hard studied information. All of it drops clear out of your noggin. This means another year in math hell.

Cancer (June 21-July 22): So, you've sort of got your life together, Cancer. But not for long, when your exams take a hold of your life and suck all the joy there was to your existence completely dry.

Leo (July 23-Aug. 22): You firmly believe that you are going to die this week. You are not diseased or anything, but the weight of your procrastination hits you hard, which causes you to be immobilized for a while. This just gives you another excuse for putting off more things, but hey, at least your injury makes your excuses legitimate.

Virgo (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): After stressing out to the point that your hair starts turning weird colors, you decide to take a break. But you take your break a little too far, and stay in a comatose-like state until 1998. Finals don't seem too scary after that, and besides, you needed the rest.

Libra (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): You pull an all-nighter which you think proves to be successful, because you finally understand the meaning of calculus. However, the meaning you discover is not the one the professor had in mind because you discover that it is not relevant to your life in the least bit, and in an act of protest, decide to miss the final.

Scorpio (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Two of your finals are take-home, which suits you just fine. You take them home, show them a good time, feed them fine food, etc. You manage to confuse your exams with actual people, which doesn't bode well for your grades.

Sagittarius (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): You believe you have acquired psychic powers, which will enable you to ace all your exams without studying. Unfortunately, this extreme break from reality doesn't help your academic efforts at all, but it sure makes you more interesting.

Capricorn (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): You do really well on all your exams. No, I mean it. Nothing scary, extraordinary or malicious will befall your path the following week, so enjoy and be merry.

Aquarius (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Well, I guess it would have helped if you had gone to some of your classes this semester. And I guess you might be in a better position if you had an IQ high enough to combat your nonexistent attendance record. Run, Aquarius — because no planet is aligning in your favor for quite some time.

Pisces (Feb. 19-March 20): Your slimy persona slithers its way into doing moderately well on your exams. So, even though your academic career is going okay, you are still not someone who I would leave my children alone with, if I had kids.

JOLT Just a few of the many products college students use to get through the late-night cram. Caffeine is considered a mild stimulant, but heavy dosage can have harmful effects.

Director says moderation is key

By James Ritchie
Senior Staff Writer

Sometimes it's easy to run out of day before running out of work to do, especially during the crunch of finals week. No wonder so many students turn to caffeine to stay awake studying for that last barrage of tests.

In moderation, caffeine has its benefits. Classified as a mild stimulant, caffeine can quicken reaction time and prolong vigilance of demanding tasks. Thus the substance has gained popularity with shift workers and college students.

"They're able to do more," said Mary Lea Gora-Harper, director of the Drug Information Center at UK.

The amount of caffeine necessary to produce such effects, she said, varies with the individual. Unfortunately, when overused, caffeine can have negative effects. Short-term problems include restlessness, nervousness and insomnia, Harper said.

People consuming large amounts of caffeine may experience withdrawal symptoms such as headaches and irritability when they decrease or discontinue their intake.

Caffeine is not considered an addictive drug, though. Patterns of caffeine consumption differ greatly from those of harsher drugs. Stopping caffeine use is not difficult, according to the International Food Information Council Foundation.

Withdrawal symptoms can be avoided if intake is decreased gradually.

"Most people don't have a problem with stopping," Harper said.

But like addictive drugs, an overdose is possible. Doses ranging from 250-750 mg can lead to nausea, headache and irregular heartbeat, while doses of more than 750 mg can produce delirium and seizure.

People have died from caffeine overdose, Harper said. Ten grams is a lethal dose.

For comparison, a cup of coffee or a bottle of Jolt cola has about 100 mg of caffeine. A 12-oz can of Mountain Dew has 55 mg, and a Coke contains 46 mg. A 12-oz glass of tea has 30-60 mg. A single tablet of Vivarin has 200 mg of caffeine.

Harper said using caffeine to stay awake for tests is like many other things — it usually is not a problem if used in moderation. Oftentimes students' problems with caffeine start long before finals week, she said. They already have problems sleeping and concentrating when studying for the big test.

Students should weigh the risks of using large amounts of caffeine to stay awake in stressful situations, Harper said, especially because lack of sleep and concentration can adversely affect test performance.

Caffeine is found in the leaves, seeds or fruit of more than 60 plants. These include coffee and cocoa beans, kola nuts and tea leaves, which are used to make beverages such as coffee, tea and cola drinks. The substance is added in small amounts as a key flavor ingredient.

How to decrease negative caffeine effects

1. Dilute coffee or tea with milk, and drink low fat milk after a meal, to help coat the stomach and prevent gastric irritation.
2. Drink brewed coffee at about one-half strength, or mix some decaffeinated coffee before brewing.
3. Be alert for the side effects of an overdose (which occur at different doses in different people), and stop drinking when you experience one.
4. Remember that caffeine is contained in many over-the-counter and prescription medications, and soda which can cause stimulation and add to your total caffeine intake.
5. Carefully follow the directions on the labels for NoDoz and other caffeine-containing over-the-counter medications. Do not exceed the recommended dosage.

HITTING BOOKS Cumulative exams are the norm at UK, despite the fact that some professors feel they limit the amount of time spent on material covered late in the semester.

'Not the end of the world'

By Mat Herron
Finals Guide Editor

Sing Hallelujah. The final exam. The last time you will walk into a classroom, break out the notebook and listen to a professor flood your cerebellum with dates and names, and your hand with aches and pains.

Well, for a month anyway. For those who sit on the brink of graduation, the week of Dec. 16 will be the last time they endure five or so days of mind-numbing exams. Freshmen get the unique honor of spilling their brain on paper for another three and a half years.

Regardless of whether finals week is a cakewalk or a backbreaker, students who have gone through the madness come away with memories to treasure — or loathe — for years after.

"Lots of Diet Mountain Dew, staying up all night because I'm a procrastinator, always cramming, always studying the night before, and praying I don't have an exam on Friday," said English senior Chrissy Guyer, recalling her final memories.

A 3.8 grade point average may reflect an easy ride for the vice president of the Student Government Association, but Guyer said her finals haven't all been wine and roses — especially that Shakespeare exam.

"It was difficult taking it," she said, "because you have to get all the information and do it thoughtfully and coherently."

Not all classes require you treat your brain like a garbage dump. Smaller courses, Guyer said, rely on class participation to determine if the student is grasping key concepts. Some professors use final papers that must include material from the beginning of the semester. Nevertheless, Guyer said nothing substitutes for good preparation.

"Don't procrastinate, get started during dead week, go see your professors if you have a problem, and study in slow increments," Guyer said.

English freshman Thayne Schickel knows this well. The Louisville native has dealt with the finals stress at her alma mater, Assumption.

"We had finals every year, so I've had a finals week all through high school," she said. "Out of six classes I would have four or five actual tests."

With a 15-page, 16-source paper on Hamlet looming on the horizon, Schickel expects her hardest final to be calculus, her easiest, Spanish.

"I'm not that great in calculus, and I find the teacher really hard to follow," she said. "In Spanish, the final only lasts 15 minutes."

Asked what impressions of finals week she heard before attending UK, Schickel said most college students used one word — "Hell."

Considering the difficult nature of the exams, is taking a cumulative exam the quality way to measure the quantity of learned material?

"I don't see any alternative," said Robert Ireland, a professor who teaches Survey of the United States through the Civil War, American Legal History and Famous Criminal Trials.

"Students don't like to take them, and teachers don't like to grade them. If I were a student, I would take the class less seriously if there were no exams."

No comprehensive exams are given in any of these classes, Ireland said. He said comprehensive finals limit the attention paid to concepts covered late in the semester.

Elizabeth Bates, a learning skills instructor who teaches UK 101 study skills works at the Counseling and Testing Center to help students cope with test anxiety. She said students should not place any more importance on finals than necessary.

"Failure is feedback," she said. "It's not the end of the world. Finals are final exams, nothing more, nothing less."

In determining the date of the final examination, "classes which meet first" refers to the initial class meeting of the normal instructional week (Monday through Friday).
NO FINAL EXAMINATION SHALL BE GIVEN BEFORE MONDAY, DECEMBER 16, 1996.

If a final examination is to be given, it will be administered during the examination period as scheduled above by the University Registrar.

If an examination schedule conflict is created by faculty rescheduling of an examination, the student shall be entitled to take the rescheduled examination at another time during the examination period by mutual agreement with the instructor.

In the case of undue hardship for an individual student, a final examination may be rescheduled by the instructor.

GET ME OUTTA HERE Resident advisers expect a big rush of students to move out the Thursday of finals week.

Move-out to draw rush

By Chris Campbell
Assistant Editorial Editor

"Get out and get home for the holidays."

Dawn Wilson, a Boyd-Patterson resident adviser, had that to say on what to do about finals week and moving out of the residence halls.

At a time when test results and final course grades are at the core of students' thoughts, one thing that should not be pressing the mind is how students will move out.

But it is. After students are finished with finals, most want to get home, back to where their family is, where the pressures from college are magically whisked away — where Santa, not your resident adviser, is your hero.

RAs have spent a lot of time preparing for the rush of people throughout the week.

"We got together sometime back before Thanksgiving," Daniel Bishop, a Kirwan III RA, said.

"We threw some ideas back and forth to each other to see what people thought."

A rise in theft became a problem at Kirwan III after the Thanksgiving break.

The only suggestion Bishop had to residents in general was to lock their doors.

Other RAs agree that locking doors is the best, and possibly the only, way to avoid the kleptomaniacs who apparently exist on campus.

Students don't seem to be too concerned with the possibility of theft, partially due to the spacing of the finals.

"I wouldn't anticipate a problem with theft," marketing freshman Julia Sander said.

"As long as you are smart and don't leave stuff just sitting around, you should be fine."

Everyone has different tests on different days, so I guess I am optimistic."

While theft is "not a problem" at the Boyd-Patterson complex on North Campus, Wilson said, things can happen.

"Housekeeping, maintenance, all have keys to your rooms," she said.

"Not that anything will happen, but keys do get lost or stolen, and if someone wants to get to your stuff, they will."

Theft is not the main concern Wilson has for the big move off of campus for the Christmas break.

She is worried about UK Police towing away cars of students and parents trying to assist students in moving out.

"It is just insane," Wilson said.

"The Parking Nazis come out (like they did, at the beginning of Thanksgiving break) and tow cars and still ticket people trying to move out."

The consensus from most RAs is that Thursday will be the big day for people moving out.

Wilson said she expects that day to be "hell on wheels."

Moving out...

All residents must be moved out by Saturday, December 21, at noon.

A method to the madness

By Molly Mize
Staff Writer

The time has come to part with that beloved chemistry book and that treasured algebra text.

Sell-back has begun. The Student Center Book Store will be buying books back Dec. 9-21 from 7:45 a.m. to 7 p.m. at the Student Center, the Commons and Lexington Community College.

Kennedy's will buy books back at anytime.

A student I.D. is required to sell books back at the Student Center Book Store.

Receipts are not necessary at either location.

It is also not necessary to sell books at the location where they were bought.

Chris Harper at the Student Center Book Store said they will not buy books marked "free copy" that were bought at Kennedy's. Students will receive cash for books sold back.

Sell-back is done at both stores on a first-come, first-served basis.

Some students may want to sell their books to friends instead of back to the book stores, but this may not always be a wise idea.

Pete Hysten, textbook manager at Kennedy's, said, "We clean and repair books. It is easier than going to the effort of trying to find someone currently enrolled in that class. Sometimes people buy books from friends, and then get to class and learn that they bought the wrong book."

Harper said bookstores can offer students the most for their money.

"By selling it to the store, you get the best price for your money, and you are helping other students out too."

Kennedy's will not buy back textbooks if teachers are not reusing the book, or if the author and publisher have printed a new edition.

The Student Center Book Store will buy discontinued books back at wholesale price, which is about 12-15 percent of the price of a new book. Continued books will be bought for half the new book price. Kennedy's will refuse a continued book only if it is in really bad condition.

The Student Center Book Store will buy most continued books back as long as they can read it. Harper said they do not buy back study guides.

To keep sell-back running smoothly, Hysten said, "There is a method to what we are doing... students do not understand that you must have thick skin."

Harper said sell-back at the Student Center Book Store "will be done by computer. We want to treat each student as an individual. Come in with the attitude of 'I will give this guy a chance' and I will be nice to you."

Music education junior Erin Murphy said the process of sell-back can cause frustration.

"They don't let us know what books we can't sell back — when you buy a really expensive book, they barely give you $10 for it ... (and you have) to search for who will give you the best price for your book."

Both stores already have some books available for next semester. The Student Center Book Store should have its books ready by Dec. 23; Kennedy's should have books ready by finals week.

Exam week makes shopping a challenge

By Lindsay Hendrix
Features Editor

The 1996 holiday shopping season — the period between the day after Thanksgiving and Christmas Eve — is five days shorter than last year.

Some store owners think this may be the reason that the biggest shopping day of the year, Nov. 29, drew more crowds than past years — shoppers knew they had less time to get it all done.

UK students have it even tougher than the average holiday shopper this season. Many students do not begin their gift seeking until after the stress of final papers and exams has passed. But if they do that this time around, students will be left with only four shopping days. Final exam week usually ends in the teens of December. Because of the 1996 calendar, though, the semester ends Dec. 20, much to students' dismay.

The late finish has caused some students to resort to different options to complete their holiday shopping, because they fear they simply won't have time to get it all done.

"The rest (of my shopping) will probably be taken care of by my sister," said Peggy Koenig, psychology sophomore who estimates her Christmas shopping expenses to be around $150 each year.

Koenig said she thinks this semester's schedule puts extra pressure on some students' holiday, especially since other state schools get out earlier.

"(The day we get out) is kind of late," she said. "I know a lot of schools that get out the 13th."

Finals week has put some students, especially those traveling to get home, in a pinch.

"We get out the 20th," said Kelli Sogar, a communications and Spanish sophomore. "If you have to drive home a long time, you don't get home until the 21st, and you only have three days to shop."

Sogar said although she may be pushing it, she's going to postpone her shopping until those few days after exam week. She said she'll get it all done ... somehow. Although many have thought in advance about their shopping plans, and have already begun to worry about how they are going to get all their shopping done between Dec. 21 and 24, others have yet to get that far in making their holiday plans.

"I gotta get some money first," undeclared freshman Steve Gossman said, "and then I gotta go home to go shopping."

He's one of the lucky ones, though, who is finished with his finals early. So he doesn't have to face too bad of a holiday rush.

"We get off so long, so it doesn't make much difference to me," he said about the last day date. "I get done with my finals on the 17th."

SHOP 'TIL YOU DROP A late finish for finals week, along with the shorter shopping season, may leave less time for some UK students to buy gifts for friends and family.

Radio show gets children involved in Christmas story

Associated Press

DALLAS — It's the Christmas story from the Bible, but probably not the way you remember it.

In this version, three girls — daughters of the Wise Men — want to reach the stable where Jesus is born and warn their dads about King Herod's plot to kill the baby Jesus.

Along the way, they bump into other kids who help them on their quest, including the son of a centurion, a shepherd boy and the children of an innkeeper.

In the end, the girls get word to their fathers and foil Herod's evil plan.

That plot is from "A Way to the Manger," a holiday radio program for kids and the first installment of "Ancient Heroes Christmas Chronicles."

For the project, Youth Life Creations, the creator, teamed up with the Dallas-based USA Radio Network, which is distributing the show to its affiliates.

"It's not exactly 'The Grinch Who Stole Christmas,' but it is definitely an opportunity for children to get involved in the real story of Christmas," said Mike Sala, director of sales and marketing for USA Radio Network.

About 180 radio stations have signed up to air the program, which comes in two half-hour installments, Sala said. The USA Radio Network serves more than 1,300 stations, Sala said.

The underlying theme of the story is that cooperation and trust help the kids reach their goal.

And, despite the name, the programs won't end when the Christmas season is over. Sala and Terry Brown, owner of Youth Life Creations, say there are plans to put together chronicles for Easter and other holidays.

The Ancient Heroes line of products began in 1993 when Brown, a retired registered nurse from Muncie, Ind., was asked by her three sons to buy superhero trading cards, but when she saw them, she didn't like them.

"They were violent-looking and I think a little bit demeaning toward women," she said.

She asked the salesman in the trading card store if there were any alternatives.

The answer was no. After searching, the only thing Brown could find was a deck of cards featuring Bible characters. They weren't very exciting in her opinion, so she decided to make her own.

The current set of 50 cards features some typical heroes and villains — Moses, David, Goliath, but also include some possibly less familiar characters like Miriam, Moses' sister, and Amenhotep II, the pharaoh of the Passover story.

On the back of each card is a summary of each character's life or event, followed by questions whose answers can be found in the Bible.
