March held to protest plight of homeless in U.S.

Event a display of cultural unity

WASHINGTON – Occupants of Beverly Hills mansions and skid-row shelters marched hand-in-hand Saturday in the largest demonstra-tion for decent and fair housing since the civil rights crusade of the 1960s.

The mile-long march along Con-stitution Avenue, from the Washstututon Avenue, from the Wash-ington monument to a rally site just short of the Capitol, crowned a three-day "Housing NOW!" cam-paign, sponsored by more than 200 organizations, on behalf of the homeless as well as all Americans yearning for more affordable homes.

Washington Mayor Marion Bar-ry, a co-sponsor of the parade, claimed 250,000 people in the throng, which filled the entire line that figure as too high, but their own estimate, 40,000, was not compiled until late in the after-noon, after many people had drifted away from more than five hours of speechmaking and entertainment.

D.C. Metropolitan Police spokesman Abraham Parks, by contrast, said his department count-dabout 75,000 at the same hour, near the end of the program. The program culminated a political siege that had been months in the making, and ended with the rousing oratory of the Rev. Jesse Jackson and the music of Stevie Wonder.

Jackson said: "We are taught that the homeless are derelicts, crazy people who have chosen self-destruction. My brothers and sisters, this is America, the richest nation in the world. No one should go homeless. Their condition is not a measure of their worth; it's a measure of our worth."

Jackson noted reports that former said Maxine Green, a public housing activist and president of the National Tenants' Organization. "In New York City alone, there are more than 200,000 people on the waiting list for housing. It's so bad you can't even apply for housing in New York. In Chicago and Louisiana, housing is deplorable. We need change."

East German police arrest demonstrators during crackdown

By DRUSILLA MENAKER Associated Press

BERLIN – East German police arrested hundreds of people during pro-democracy protests in East Ber-lin that lasted into early yesterday and also broke up huge weekend demonstrations in five other major cities.

In East Berlin citizens cheered protesters from apartment balconies.

Numerous injuries were reported Saturday as police swinging truncheons repeatedly charged demonstrators. Police punched, kicked beat, and dragged the protesters away, and roughed up Western journalists covering the demonstrations in East Berlin.

The protests, coinciding with the visit of Soviet President Mikhail S. Gorbachev on East Germany's 40th anniversary, were the largest since a workers' uprising was put down by the Soviets in 1953.

Despite the growing unrest and exodus of East German leader Erich Honecker said during lengthy talks with Gorbachev that he would stick to his hard-line course.

Honecker said the hopes of proponents of reform "built on sand."

Also yesterday police in East Berlin braced for more prodemocracy protests. Lutheran church leaders called for the release of those arrested Saturday and appealed for calm.

Secret police patrolled the Unter den Linden boulevard, a major street, and motorcycle police were stationed at intersections leading to the mammoth Brandenburg Gate along the Berlin Wall. Paramilitary groups waited in trucks on a side street.

Michigan debaters win UK Round Robin

By ROBYN WALTERS

The University of Michigan won the 18th annual Thoroughbred Round Robin debate tournament held at the Harley Hotel last week. Wake Forest University placed second and Harvard University finished in third place. UK tied for fourth place with Iowa at the invitational tournament.

The top three teams all had 6-zecords. The final rankings had to be determined, therefore, by the speaker points each team receives in each round. Judd Kimball, one of the debaters on the Wake Forest team, said he was pleased with how his team did.

"Winning even a few debates at the Round Robin is doing very well," Kimball said. The Wake Forest team of Kim-ball and Alan Coverstone had a 3-5 record at the Round Robin last year, but this year their only losses were to Michigan and Redlands University.

The UK team of T.A. McKinney and Calvin Rockefeller finished with a 4-4 mark. UK lost to Wake Forest University, University of Northern Iowa, Harvard and George Mason University.

T.A. McKinney, a political science junior from Nashville, Tenn., and Calvin Rockefeller, a communications junior from Birmigham, Ala, represented UK in the tournament.

"We were very disappointed to the tournament.

"We were very disappointed to lose to George Mason and Harvard.
We really thought we had won those rounds," said McKinney, a political science junior from Nash-ville, Tenn.
But McKinney said he thought it was still good that UK wound up insishing in fourth place in a tournament that featured the nation's nine best team?

"Although we did not win, the educational benefit of competing among the top nine teams in the country makes it worth it," said Rockefeller, a communication junior from Birmingham, Ala.

"And I really don't know what happened to Kenny Willis yesterday," Claiborne said yesterday about Willis, who missed 2 feld goal attempts and had an extra point blocked. "Kenny just had a bad day, Everybody has bad days, and Kenny had his yesterday."

But all was not bad for the Cats.

The offense, which was almost non-existent two weeks ago at Alabama, managed to move the abill and score two touchdowns against the Tiger defense.

"Yeah, I fell like we moved the ball well against Auburn between the 30s, but we were not able to score," UK offensive tackle Mike Pleifer said. "We just didn't take advantage of our opportunities." The Wildcat offense amassed 305 yards of total offense, but

UK offense needs more effort once inside 20

A question to the UK football team: Define effective offense.

"Inside their 30, their defense clamped down on us," said UK coach Jerry Claiborne. "In those situations we need to convert the third down or nail the field goal, which we didn't do that today."

The effort put into Saturday's 24-12 loss to Auburn by UK's offensive unit was its best of the season. But the improved performance was still ineffective.

UK was able to move the ball from the drive's line of scrimmage to the opponent's 20-yard line with some amount of success for the first time this season. But at that point the offense collapsed.

UK quarterback Freddie Maggard ust reading the drive of the season and the offense collapsed.

must realize that an offense's effectiveness is judged from within the 20-yard line. Specifically, the Cats need to get past those 20 yards into the 10 yards termed (this will be forreign to UK fans) the END ZONE.

"You judge a quarterback's performance by W's and L's, not this prosonal numbers." Maggard said. "And we didn't win today, so I guess I didn't do my job."

UK's 2-2 record would, by Maggard's standards, mean that the quarterback has performed reasonably well. But the record that matters, UK's 0-2 Southeastern Conference mark, is more representative of the offense's lackluster performance.
On UK's first drive of the Auburn game, UK reached Auburn's 19-yard line. On thi-and-one, Rawls was tackled for a 2-yard loss. That was followed by Ken Willis' first missed field goal of the game.
On the Cats' first drive of the second half, UK marched 57 yards, reaching the Tiger 21-yard line. Then the UK offense went into its 20-yard ine self-destruct offense and Maggard threw an interception.

Five Wildcat drives reached the Auburn 21-yard line, but only two reached pay dirt.

The UK success rate for the season at or inside of the 20-yard line is higher than what was seen Saturday. But that is because in UK's first three games, the offense reached the opponent's 20-yard line is times. In the Indiana game, UK scored ouchdowns both times it reached the 20-yard line. Against North Carolina the Cats made it to the 20 only three times, scoring a touchdown and a field goal. At Alabama, UK could only muster one drive that reached the 20-yard line, which yielded a field goal. only muster one drive that reached the 20-yard line, which yielded a field goal.

Many UK fans had bowl game as pirations at the beginning of the season. But if the UK offense can't get inside of the opponen's 20-yard line three times a game (2.75 right now), don't expect them to be playing after the Tennessee game on Nov. 25.

If not for a pretty good scolding of the Tigers by their coach Pat Dye after the game, the Auburn plane would have wobbled back and forth on the way home. The wobbling would have resulted from the laugher of the Tiger players who realized that they just handed UK a victory that the Wildeat offense didn't take.

Keeneland has good crowd despite game

By DAVID A. HALL Contributing Writer

It was business as usual and a lot of fun at Keeneland Race Course Saturday, as 19,608 racing fans attended the opening day of the fall racing meet.

Many of those who came out on the opening day said Keeneland is an event they look forward to all year.

"It's a tradition for us," said UK senior Teresa Taylor, who came to Keeneland with her two roomates. "We always have a brunch and then come out (to Keeneland). Then after the races we'll go to Two Keys."

For a lot of racing fans, attending the first day of the fall meet would have been only one part of the day's festivities. In the past, Keeneland and UK had been successful in scheduling UK football arms at single in October so not Keeneland and UK had been suc-cessful in scheduling UK football games at night in October so not to conflict with the fall meet. But because of the Southeastern Conference's television contract with WTBS, UK was forced to move kickoff time of its game with Auburn up to 12:40 p.m. The game clashed with Keene-land's schedule, which scheduled its first post time at 1 p.m. its first post time at 1 p.m.

The conflict was a concern to many UK fans who had planned to attend both events. Patrick Schmidt, a first-year UK faw student, said he attends UK football games most of the time, but he left the Auburn game after the third quarter to go to the track.

"I have been waiting for this day for a long time," Schmidt said. "It ticked me off when they changed (the me of he game)."

Jim Williams, director of publicity for Keeneland, said attendance was down by about 4,000 because of the conflict.

"It's been a pretty good (opening) day," Williams said. "Last year, we had 21,658. But we expected (attendance) to be down because of the game."

Many racing fans said they came to Keeneland to watch people or to win big on the horses. But many said they came because of the beauty of the grounds. "We really love it up here," said D.L. Stovall, who drove up from Knoxville, Tenn, with his wife to see the races and tour Lexington's horse farms. "It's the quality of the personnel and the grounds are so clean. Keeneland is a higher class of nece course. It has a higher class of horses, and the people of Lexington are all class."

the people of Lexington are air class."

People-watching provided an interesting way to spend time between races and for those who weren't betting on the horses. Men wore clothes ranging from jeans and a sweater to tailored wool suits, while some women word suits, while some women cathy Cassidy, a UK real estate senior, said she liked to come to Keeneland to "watch the men in their suits."

"I usually dress-up, but today I went casual and had a lot more went casual and had a lot more fun," she said.

Although most of the patrons visiting Keeneland were from the Lexington area, a few had traveled a good distance to attend the event. Peter Maves, of Ontario, Canada, said he came to the track to mix a little business with pleasure

Canada, said he came to the track to mix a little business with pleasure.

"Really, we were down in Wheeling, W.Va., on some business and decided to drive over here on the way back home," he said.

Gary Buechell and his wife, Gina, had made the trip from Cincinnati on a tour bus with some friends.

"I wouldn't miss this for the world, even with a bum leg," said Buechell, who was walking with a cane because he injured his foot prior to Saturday's trip.

There were a few patrons who said their first time at Keeneland most likely would be their last.

"This is my first time and it's not for me," said Debbie Doan of Frankfort, Ky. "I don't like to lose or to stand a lot, and I'm doing a lot of both."

Doan said, however, that Keeneland's environment was something everyone could enjoy. "The atmosphere is really nice," she said. "It seems like a lot of fun. Maybe if I had a box seat and a little more money, I'd be having a better time."

One of Keeneland's features that annoyed many of the patrons was not having a track announcer to call the races. Keeneland is the only track in the nation that still

"I'd like to see them get an announcer," and Kim Ward, a first-year UK dental student, "If you can get to where you can see the cape, it's not a problem. But if you can't, it can be."

UK volleyball loses first SEC match in 2 years

Executive Editor

The University of Georgia Bulldogs used maturity and consistency to do what no tother Southeastern Conference school has been able to do for the past two seasons: beat the Ux Volleyball team.

"It feels really good to beat this team," Georgia's coach Jim Iams said." Itold (my players going in) that this team has dominated the SEC the last two years. I told them that Kentucky was a quality team that would play well... Boy, I was impressed. UX played with heart and never gave up to day."

But to make things worse for the Wildcast, Georgia dethroned the two-time SEC

"We are not mentally mature enough yet at this point to deal with that kind of pressure of another team not giving you a lot of corrors but putting consistent pressure on on." UK coach Kathy DeBoer said. "At least, today, Georgia was definitely the better team."

The high point of the day for UK was a 15-8 win in the first game. The victory, however, was marred by a yellow card on the bench for a controversial net violation. Another yellow card was issued to the Wildcast for delaying the match early in the second game are controversial out-of-bounds call.

Stephanie Green said. "Georgia outplayed us. We just couldn't seem to get any kills at the right time."

DeBoer said the Bulldogs did everything that she expected them to do. "I knew coming in that Georgia was a very consistent team. The scouting reports were accurate. They're not going to come after you with a lot of pizazz but they 're very consistent."

The Bulldogs' offense was led by Christa Faris, who had 20 kills, and Christie Lord, who had 10 kills.

"Faris made some big plays for us," lams said. "But also made some big mistakess."

The Wildcats were led by Green with 19 kills. Yvette Moorehead and Katrina Airhart followed Green with 12 spikes each.

Those interested in performing perhaps the bard's most famous comedy had better not sleep through the next two days, lest they miss a golden opportunity. Auditions will be held tonight and tomorrow night for Shakespeare's "A Midsummer Night's Dream" and two other UK theater productions. "Dream," the second maistep production of the season, opens Nov. 16. "A Talk in the Park," a 20-minute five-and-dime production, opens Nov. 21. Auditions were also held for the third show, "A Day in the Life of Joe Egg," which opens Jan. 16. The "is the second pro-

"Joe Egg" is the second production of UK theater's "Second Season," a series of plays designed to complement the main-signed to complement the manuscratege season.

"Dream" will take precedence at the auditions, and most of the readings will be from that play. Director Russell Henderson's production, however, will be nothing like anything produced at the Globe Theater.

Handeron, an assertiate pro-at the Globe Theater.

Henderson, an associate professor in the theater department, said he plans to do a "totally hip, totally now" version of the bard's comedy.

"The setting will be New York or some large urban cen-ter." Henderson said.

Henderson said he envisions Theseus (the king) as a sort of Donald Trump, the young lov-ers as yuppies and the fairies as heavy metal rockers.
"We're using an '80s, al-most '90s, kind of setting," Henderson said.

Although Henderson said he lans to have a "totally con-temporary look" for the pro-duction, he said he does no-intend to rewrite Shakespear.
"There will be cutting, but you can't manipulate the text

"There will be clutting, but you can't manipulate the text or take it in ways that it was never intended," he said. Henderson said that those who audition should not bring prepared monologues. Rather, he will go over the audition scenes for meaning before the seriors take the stage.

Spader and McDowell excel in 'sex, lies'

Assistant Arts Editor

After seeing "sex, lies and videotape." you'll probably walk out the theater debating on whether the movie was actually good or not.
The acting is great and the characters are believable, but the subject matter and storyline are just weird.
The movie, which deals with the complexity of sexual relationships and monogamy, won the Grand Prize at the Cannes Film Festival.
Andie McDowell plays Anna Bishop, a housewife frustrated with her unfulfilling marriage to John, played by Peter Gallagher. John is having an affair with her sister Cynthia, Laura San Giacomo.
She feels trapped in the marriage and stagnant in her life, until she meets Graham, played by James Spader. Spader is John's best friend from the past. You might not recognize Spader's name but you will recognize his face. His previous films have been "Pretty in Pink," "Less Than Zero" and "Wall Street."

Spader's character is impotent and emotionally distraught. His only sexual release is through viewing videotaped sexual confessions from women. Spader preys on women who trust him and eventually depend on him.

McDowell starts to feel these less-than-imnocent feelings toward Spader. She feels guilty for feeling that way for her husband's best friend and tries to stop seeing him.

Meanwhile, San Giacomo also has been to Spader's confessional.

The movie tends to be absent of clear direction and you never really know where it's going.
Despite its shortcomings, the movie succeeds in being an intelligent, withy paradox to today's social mores, thanks to writer/director/editor Steven Soderberg.
McDowell gives a great performance. Previously, she seemed destined to go the model-turned-actress route, where she would be typecast to forever play a pretty accessory, not really contributing anything to the film. McDowell made her big screen debut as the object of Emilio Estevez's desire in "St. Elmo's Fire," in an unexciting role.

Spader plays his seedy character to the hilt with style. Gallagher is adequate in his role but he tends to be rather bland.

The real showstealer is Laura San Giacomo. She has a sexuality easily conveyed on film. Her deep Italian beauty and contrasting Southern chirp are worth the ticket price alone.

Kane contrasted Japan's lack of land space with the ample space most Americans are accustomed. Only about 20 percent of Japan's land is inhabited because of the volcanic mountains are too steep to farm or live on, he said.

"Japan has 800 people per square mile." Kane said. "That's like taking the people from Louisville and moving them to Versailles." Unlike the United States, education is a social force in Japan, Kane said. Kane said the basic difference between American and Japanese languages is that they are harder to learn in Japan.
"The Japanese have a much more complex system of writing," he said. "It takes nine years of compulsory education to be able to read enough Kanji characters to be able to read a newspaper."

Kane said the Japanese are concerned about the other person's feelings concerning family or business matters. The concept "ninjo" explains the concern of the Japanese.

Decision to use student tickets handled poorly

When UK hired C.M. Newton to replace Cliff Hagan as athletics director, one of Newton's strong assets, we were told, was his track record in dealing with students. But the decision to take away 56 prime basketball seats from the student body may very well have gotten Newton off on the wrong foot with many students.

About seven weeks ago, the University decided to offer season tickets to basketball games to boosters who kicked in several thousand dollars to help pay for the renovations of several thousand doll Memorial Coliseum.

The University had assumed there would be several fans who would not renew their season tickets, and those could be used to give to the boosters. The probation and the bleak futur the basketball program faces in the next few years led athletic officials to believe that many UK fans would not renew their season tickets.

But much to the officials' surprise, UK fans turned out not to be fair-weather supporters and decided to keep their season tickets. Consequently, the University had no choice but to take 56 prime seats – the first two rows in sections 31 and 32 at Rupp Arena – away from the student body.

When Newton told the UK Ticket Committee about the need for the tickets at a recent meeting he instructed the committee's members to keep quiet so as not to create a public disturbance

While the University should be commended for covering all of the renovation expenses with private funds, the way officials went about dealing with the student tickets leaves a lot to be desired.

Since the University expected that there would be enough some the University expected that there would be enough non-renewals to cover the number of tickets promised to boosters, officials did not see the need to go before the ticket committee and discuss what would have to be done if more people than expected renewed their season tickets. That is where Athletic officials made their first mistake by assuming that there would be enough non-renewals of season tickets to cover the promises made to boosters – sort of like planning a state budget on the expected proceeds from a lottery.

Counting on people not to renew UK season basketball tickets is not unlike counting on a 3-year-old to turn down chocolate cake. UK season basketball tickets are more valuable to many Kentuckians than a college degree, and athletic officials should have realized that sooner.

officials should have realized that sooner.

Another disturbing action by officials was Newton's instructions to the ticket committee not to talk about the matter until after it was announced at last week's Athletics Association Board of Directors.

Whenever the University is contemplates taking away student seats or reducing the number of prime seats, students should get sufficient notice in order to respond to a proposal. The purpose of having a student member of the ticket committee is to ensure that students are not forgotten by the monstrous athletic department. Ignoring that is to, in essence, subvert the process.

Athletic officials said they will replace the prime seats lost with ones in the upper deck or possibly take some away from the UK Pep Band. That move, however, would be of little consolation to many students.

Taking away the students' prime seats without sufficient notice or warning was an insult to those loyal students who wait in the cold on Sunday mornings for a chance to sti in the lower section of Rupp Arena. Alumni are important to the University and their contributions should not be forgotten, but UK's ultimate purpose is to serve the students.

Those in the student body are the ones who have consistently shown the most spirit at UK basketball games. While some alumni and boosters have cheered for the Wildcats in proportion to the success of the Blue and White, the students are the ones who have stuck with the program through the good and bad times.

Many students have resented that the first few rows of their sections have been occupied by what they perceive to be as country-club fans who show as much emotion as those at a chess tournament. And by putting 56 more ostentatious fans in front of the student body, students can only wonder who the athletic department cares more about. Following last week's Athletics Association Board meeting,

Newton said he hoped that the students will understand that losing the 56 prime seats is in the basketball program's best interest. And perhaps the state's lawmakers will realize that a tax increase is in the state's best interest, but that probably won't happen either.

Recycling could clean-up our campus

The next time you're outside either wandering around campus, walking to your next class or runnibling back from a party, look down. Look at the area around poles, gutters, under bushes, etc. See all that trash there? That McDonald's wrapper? That cigarette butt? That piece of plastie?

Ever wonder where it all comes from?

from?

Ever wonder where it goes?

Too often we're too busy walking to class, chatting with a friend or just too lazy to take the wrapper we've got in our hand to a garbage can, usually just an extra four or five steps. Or even less likely, have you ever picked up someone else's garbage?

"Why are? Why whould Lide it? I

"Why me? Why should I do it? I didn't put it the Well, sure, you didn't, but some-one did. And the only way we can keep the garbage from under our boots is to make sure that the garboots is to make sure that the garbage isn't on the ground.

The next time you've got a free moment or two, reach down and pick up two pieces of trash. It can't possibly take you more than 15 seconds to kneel, grab, walk to a can and toss it.

In fact, while you're at it, ask the person standing next to you to do the same.

As long as we're becoming environmentally conscious – don't stop at picking the trash up off the ground.

Take your glass to get recycled.

go somewhere to think that just because I'm writing this here makes it so. But I think it's important enough to do; I think it's important enough to do; I think it's important just to get it done.
Here it comes: Why doesn: UK's Student Government Association organize a "Make Our Campus Beautiful Week?" What a great idea! (Hey, Sean Lohman, that was a comment from a student.)
They could print up filers on recycled paper and post them all over campus (they are pretty good at putting up filers).

They could declare our campus a

"Trash-Free School Zone." (You've seen the "Drug-Free School Zones.")

Maybe they could give an award to the person who shows check stubs from the recycling center with the largest amount of garbage recycled.

with the largest amount of garbage recycled.

Maybe they could arrange to give the money produced from the recycling/beautification effort to the homeless or hungry.

And maybe we'll actually accomplish a worthwhile goal. Oh, sure, it's not as glamorous as taking a trip to Florida to go to an alcohol conference, but I'll bet more people will get more out of it.

At least I think I will. A trashfree campus certainly would be more beautiful. Don't you think?

Cultural diversity can be good learning tool

Dear Counselor: This is merst semester in the U.S. Before first semester in the U.S. Before leaving my country I was imagining all sorts of possible pleasant and unpleasant things I could encounter in America. Indeed I have so far had many different experiences – both happy and unpleasant. Am I taking myself too seriously? I wonder whether I am the only one going through these emotions.

Dear Counselor: I have been away from home for over a year now. During the fall of 1988 I joined the International Support Group. It helped me to make more friends. It was most interesting to friends. It was most interesting to realize that other international stu-dents were at times facing similar challenges like mine—for example, missing home, coping with the in-teresting and at times puzzling American English and its various regional accents! Although I have now adjusted in many ways at UK, I think I can still benefit from the friendship the support group offers friendship the support group offers i can still benefit from the nip the support group offers.

Are there other services available for international students?

Dear friends: Moving away from familiar homes and work places to new places, especially in a different country, can be an en-riching, pleasant, and yet at times, stressful experience. It may take some time and effort for intera-tional students to develop new sets of support systems and coping strategies.

New experiences may range from facing a sudden change in climate, getting used to the general American scenario, missing home, coping with the news about families and friends left behind, understanding the American institutional sys-tem (i.e., education, legal, health, social), and experiencing new foods social), and experiencing new foods and eating habits.

It is enlightening to note that not all challenges related to moving away from home to college are restricted to international students.

An American freshman or student away from home for the first time may face some of the same concerns as those faced by foreign students, e.g., getting acquainted with a new city, overcoming the feeling of being lost in a crowd of about 22,000 other students, feeling lonely and missing home, adjusting to changes in the work load between high school and college, and getting used to doing things for themselves.

Common as some of these re pus life are to all students, ir pus life are to all students, interna-tional students are more likely to feel isolated. It can make things easier to know what others are go-ing through and how they face things. It can be informative and in-teresting to interact with students of different cultural and academic backgrounds.

Women deserve choice

This month the Supreme Court will hear two cases that involve allowing a woman the right to choose an abortion. It is time to ask what part our right of choice plays in our lives. Is it important? Can we do without it?

Can we do without it?

What would your life mean without choice? Imagine someone else making decisions that have to do with your life. A person other than yourself telling you when to eat, sleep, what career you are to choose, what religion you are to live by, and when you are to give birth. No consideration is given to your needs, wants, situation, beliefs and health.

Would you feel imprisemed and away? Would you feel that a funda-mental right you have as a person was taken from you? That is pre-cisely why I believe persons in-volved in the "pro-life" movement are confused as to what life means.

They are fighting for the rights of a fetus, but once that fetus is re moved from the mother they are taking away its right to life. I have every respect for a woman who claims she would never have an abortion. That is her choice. I believe in allowing her her choice, as it is her right as a person.

However, neither she, nor any one else has the right to take away my choice. Can you let them take away your right to make your own decisions, your right to life?

It is time to defend your rights and the rights of other individuals. Protecting a woman's choice is in-credibly important for she can not truly live without it.

Student fee not needed

The recent imposition of an international student fee is completely uncalled for when compared to the services which are actually used by these students. After viewing the list of services which are provided by the International Student and Scholars Office, I was left with the question: "How many students use each of those services."
The ISSO was not able to answer my question since they do not keep a count of how many students use each service. How then is it possible to justify a charge for four pages of services when it is not known whether these services are actually used?

I found the answer in themselves. There are some services which are helpful, such as immigration services and the host family program; however, many of the other services (pregnancy counseling, tours of Lexington, meeting the mayor, etc.) are either unused or would definitely be sacrificed for a smaller fee – or none at all.

A one-time fee for the services may be more appropriate since many of the services are used only when the students first arrive in the United States.

I realize that the ISSO has undergone a budget reduction this past

I realize that the ISSO has under-gone a budget reduction this past year, but I also realize that $125 more per year is an unreasonable budget reduction for any student – international or American!

Brinkman previously had been working with Liss Stofer out of the Dean of Students Office and Stu-dent Health Center, compiling health information materials, writ-ing informational columns for the Kernel and providing one-on-one counseling with students.

Since last May, however, Brink-man has been working full-time out of the Student Health Center, and Stofer has been health educa-tion coordinator, working out of the Dean of Students Office.

2 full-time positions created to meet students' demands

Brinkman said one of her main responsibilities is to be available to students for information on health issues such as women's health, sexually transmitted diseases, and physical and mental stress.

For instance, Brinkman said students can get information from her about safe sex, or the effects of self-esteem on social behavior and academic performance.

"I think there are a lot of people

While Brinkman said the need for a strong student health program has always existed, she said she hopes the expanded program will "encourage students to take more responsibility for their health and let them know they have choices ... in every one of these health issues."

Stofer is in charge of programs on substance abuse, acquaintance rape awareness and prevention, and the Peer Assistant Leaders program. She serves as an adviser to Students Against Drunken Driving and Boost Alcohol Consciousness Concerning the Health of University Students.

Brinkman also is initiating a new health education program for inter-national students, who she said sometimes don't fully understand certain aspects of the American health care system, such as insu-rance or costs.

Six days of activities scheduled for homecoming

By CYNTHIA SCHREMLY Contributing Writer

The Student Activities Board Homecoming Committee has planned six days of activities for this year's homecoming week, which runs today through Saturday. "It's something we're excited about," homecoming chairperson Beth Gorin sigolig to be the best student-planned activities that we've done in a while," said SAB President Michael Bowling.

The homecoming fashion show, which will be hosted by Louise Roselle, wife of UK president David Roselle, is scheduled for tomorates and the sense of th for the pizza party. Door prizes will be given away and a reception will follow at Memorial Hall.

Also on Wednesday homecoming banners will be displayed on campus buildings.
Thursday will be a busy night beginning with the homecoming parade, followed by the traditional Wildcar Roar and the Big Blue Boogie dance.
The parade will begin at Memorial Coliseum at 7 p.m., immediately followed by the Wildcar Roar pep rally at 7:30 at Commonwealth Stadium.
The five homecoming finalists will be announced after the rally.

Thursday's festivities don't end at the stadium. The traditional Big Blue Boogie dance will be held at the E.S. Good Barn field following the pep rally. Entertainment will include Nervous Melvin and the Mistakes and Nast-Melvin and the Mistakes and Nast-er. There also will be a bonfire, said shelley Kestner, special events chairperson. UK Day at Keeneland and Blue/ White Day is Friday. A new homecoming festivity this year, a drive-in movie, called "Wildcats," starting Goldie Hawn, will be shown Friday at 8 p.m. in the Student Center Parking Lot A.

Saturday's agenda includes a contest for the best homecoming floats displayed on campus buildings and student housing yards. Floats will be judged beginning at 9 a.m. Winners will be announced during half-time of Saturday's game.
A luncheon for Community College princesses also is scheduled for Saturday at the Student Center Small Ballroom at 12:30 p.m.
Other homecoming activities include Saturday's President's Dinart. Alba Commonwealth Stadium.

Versa Card offers credit for copiers

BY LAURA KUCZERA Contributing Writer

Do you ever get frustrated when you run out of change while trying to make copies? Students don't have to worry any more because the UK Versa Card is here.

The Versa Card is here.

The Versa Card, which can be used in copy machines on campus in place of change. Monetary increments of $1, $5, $10 and $20 may be added to A Versa Card account as often as needed.

"I think the cards are a great often as needed. "It think the cards are a great idea," said accounting junior Kristi Horn. "I never have change and mow I don't have to worry about trying to make copies." The cards may be used at 10 locations on campus, including the music library, the Complex-Commons library, McVey Hall, the biological sciences library, Chemistry/Physics building, the engineering library, the aducation library, the agricultural library, and Holmes Hall.

The cards were implemented dur-

Holmes Hall.

The cards were implemented during the summer and have been used a lot this semester, said Jim Isaacs of duplicating services.

"They are really becoming popular all over campus; the students have accepted the new system and use it regularly." Isaacs said.

Cards may be purchased at the Margaret 1. King Library, the Chemistry/Physics library and McVey Hall.

"THE DASE CO-OP PROGRAM IS LIKE A COURSE IN REAL LIFE."

"The big thing it offers is experience, and that's what companies look for There are things I've learned on the job that I couldn't learn in school:

The Department of Army Scientific and Engineering (DASE) Co-op Program provides ROTC students the opportunity to work in a Department of the Army facility while still in college, Each is paid while getting practical work experience in a high-tech facility. Selected students also receive up to $5,000 tution assistance per year and the opportunity for continued employment after graduation. To be eligible, you must be a freshman in a baccalaureate program leading to

To be eignise, you must be a trestiman in a baccalauteaue pur-a degree in science or engineering. For more information on app cedures, contact the Chairman of the Co-op Department, or the F Military Science.

Students are selected on a competitive basis.
