Students may be able to get pizza on cards

By Brett Dawson
Managing Editor

You can get it fast, you can get it hot and soon, you may be able to pay for it with your meal card.

Sound too good to be true? It might not be — if we're talking about pizza.

Negotiations are underway to allow UK students to pay for pizza delivery with the use of their student meal cards this fall semester.

Vice Chancellor for Administration Jack Blanton said that UK currently is negotiating with several local pizza establishments, and that the University hopes to make a decision on a meal card payment plan sometime in July.

"It might be that we say in mid-July that we're going to do it, and it might be that we say there's not enough interest in it and that we can't do it," Blanton said.

"It's still in the planning stages right now."

While Blanton could not reveal the names of the stores UK is negotiating with, he said that the University would like to establish a set of rules for students paying with meal cards, then open that possibility to all local pizza companies.

"We'd have to open it up to whoever was interested and see what happens," Blanton said.

"It would only be the local places, the ones close to campus. Obviously a store out on Richmond Road isn't going to want to come all the way to campus to deliver."

The Papa John's on South Limestone is one of the stores interested in working with UK, said Kevin Duncan, the chain's district manager for Lexington. "Students are getting money from home to put on those meal cards, but they're being forced to eat the food UK offers," Duncan said.

"We've heard complaints from a lot of students who aren't real happy with the food or the service they're getting at UK."

Duncan said Papa John's would reap several rewards from the partnership with the University as well.

"(The South Limestone store) gets almost all its business from students," Duncan said.

He added that, to his understanding, only on-campus students would be eligible for the offer.

"Not only would this give them a chance to try something different, but I'm sure it would

Curd wants changes to system

By Jennifer Smith
Editor in Chief

A proposal from a member of the state's interim joint education committee to take the power over the state's 14 community colleges out of UK's hands is not the first and probably will not be the last.

Almost two weeks ago, state Rep. Freed Curd D-5th, said he thought a new state board should be created to oversee the state community college system instead of the University's Board of Trustees.

He added he will introduce legislation of that nature in the next session.

Curd's proposal stems from the research of Edward Hines, a professor of educational administration at Illinois University.

Hines' study suggests that removing the community colleges from UK would decrease duplication in programs.

He said the system does not work as effectively as it should the way it is set up now.

UK President Charles

Wethington said Tuesday that neither he nor Community College Chancellor Ben Carr are surprised by Curd's idea because proposals like this come up every few years.

"By no means is this the first proposal of this kind," Wethington said.

He said proposals of this nature are generated every so often because other regional universities are not "overly happy" with UK's control over the community colleges.

However, Wethington said the community colleges and UK have "no interest in a separation of any kind."

He added that Curd represents one of the regions that could directly benefit from a separation of this kind.

Curd is represents the district in which Murray State University is located.

"The community colleges feel they are being picked on," Wethington said.

"They believed they are being looked at in a false light."

Hines' study says that a community college should have three main objectives: to act as a feeder to students who eventually want to transfer to a four-year institution, to offer general adult education and to provide vocational and technical training to help people get jobs.

Although Hines said he recognizes the community colleges do work toward those goals.

However, he said they focus too much on being branches of UK.

Wethington said he does not believe there are enough facts to back up such a drastic change.

"My position is the one of the burden of proof," he said.

"Tell us why we are not working, explain to us how the union is not favorable."

"The burden of proof is on the people who have a problem with it."

Free tickets' days numbered

By Brett Dawson
Managing Editor

There's an old adage in sports that says "No pain, no gain."

And now, there's a new adage in UK basketball that says "No pay, no game."

Beginning this season, students will have to pay $5 each for tickets to UK basketball games. That proposal passed yesterday along with the rest of the Athletic Association's 1995-96 budget.

"We've been examining our ticket prices for the past year and a half," UK Athletics Director C.M. Newton said yesterday. "And one of the areas we've been looking at as far as increasing revenue is the student tickets."

Students are only part of the UK athletic department's plan to boost its revenue. Basketball ticket prices for the general public will increase from $15 to $17 for lower level seats and from $11 to $13 for upper level seats.

The plan, which was approved by the UK Ticket Board on Tuesday, will affect football beginning in the 1996 season, when student football tickets also will cost $5 apiece.

The decision to charge students for tickets was made in lieu of an increase in all students' student activities fees. Newton and Senior Associate Athletic Director Larry Ivy said they felt the $5 charge was the most fair way to increase the athletic department's student-generated funds.

"We thought that in a school with 24,000 students where only 6,000 go to basketball games, this would be the best solution," Ivy said.

The increase in student money has been necessitated by a number of factors, Newton said, including, but not limited to a push to comply with Title IX (gender equity) bylaws, the cost of maintaining athletic facilities such as the Downing Outdoor Tennis Complex, the Lancaster Aquatic Center and the Nutter Field House, all of which are open to students.

The Southeastern Conference dictates that, in order to comply with Title IX, its member institutions must sponsor two more women's varsity sports than men's. That helps compensate for the disproportionate amount of money spent on football programs.

UK's goal is to add women's sports rather than cut men's sports in order to meet the SEC's requirements. Currently, UK sponsors 21 varsity sports, more than any school in the SEC. And another one, women's softball, is on the way this spring.

"One thing I don't want to deal with as an athletic director is cutting any sports," Newton said. "I see that as a disservice to our student body. But some schools are doing that. Arkansas, for instance, had to cut men's swimming. I'd rather add women's sports."

Newton also said that UK plans to build a softball/soccer complex, which would open Cage Field for Campus Recreation activities.

The question isn't whether or not to increase the money the athletic department receives from students, but where the money will come from.

Currently, $12.25 of each student's activity fee goes to the athletic department. That is the same amount the department received in 1979, when the student activity fee was introduced.

"In 1979, the student fee represented about 10 percent of our operating budget," Ivy said. "Today it's about two percent."

Matthew Thomas, the chairman of the Student Government Association's Athletics Concerns Committee, said he supports an increase in the activity fee for all students instead of making students pay for tickets.

"Some students (would) say 'Why should I have to pay for other people to go to the basketball games when I don't go?'" said Thomas, who sits on the Ticket Board.

"But at the same time, they're running on the track or they're swimming in the pool — those services are open to all students, and if they don't use them that's their fault."

Newton said that if students asked for an increase in student fees, the budget could be changed for 1996-97.

"If students would rather increase the student fee, say $10 a semester or something like that, then I don't think that would be an issue," Newton said. "If students were to voice their opinions and they wanted it that way, then something probably could be done."

Students pay at Arkansas, U of L

By Brett Dawson
Managing Editor

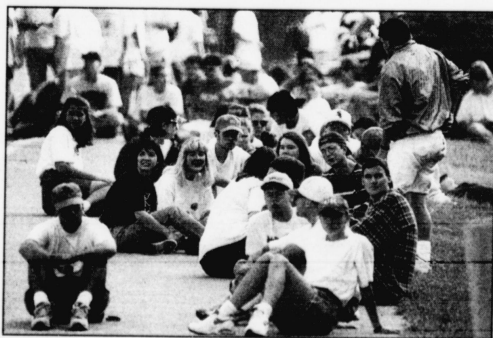

UK students won't be the only ones paying for their hot tickets this year. Some of the nation's top basketball powerhouses also make students shell out cash for passes.

At the University of Arkansas, students have to buy season ticket books for both football and basketball. Students pay half-price for those prized books. The books usually cost about $30 for football and $110 for basketball.

Students at Duke University get their tickets free.

"They pay a fee, but that has nothing to do with football and basketball," said Bobby Sorrell, the assistant ticket manager at Duke. "If they're a valid student with a valid ID, they can get in."

University of Louisville students have the option of purchasing a season book of basketball tickets — usually for about $150 — or of buying single-game tickets for games that don't sell out. Those tickets cost $16 a piece last season. "I like the season ticket deal because I know I've got my seat and everything, but it's too expensive," said Stacy Lauter, a business management senior at U of L. "Five bucks — that's dirt cheap. We're paying more than Arkansas or (UK), and (the basketball program is) shifty up here."

Change is routine at UKPD

By Matt Felice
News Editor

Making adjustments to new technology, tactics and training is a routine event at the UK Police Department.

Responsiveness to changing demands is essential, said UK Police Chief W.H. McComas, in maintaining a reputable law enforcement program.

UK police officers must continue their training every year not only to brush up on old skills but to be updated on the newest methods and research as well.

This year, for example, they must take a new class on Pressure Point Control Tactics, a method that reduces the amount of force needed to apprehend a resisting subject.

"If they get into a situation where they have to deal with an individual who is violent, they can use these techniques to prevent injury to themselves and to the individual," McComas said.

Also, since UK Police officers will now be carrying pepper spray canisters, they must be trained in their correct usage because, if improperly used, these otherwise harmless but incapacitating devices could be simply ineffective and in such cases have been known to irritate rather than to defuse a situation.

McComas said part of the training requires officers to take one full shot of the spray in the face so they can fully comprehend its potency and learn the proper way to clean it up once it's used.

Officers are trained to treat the spray like any other weapon and fill out a full report if they remove it from its case.

Regarding these and other innovations, McComas said, "we're just bringing everyone up to the same standard as what's taught in the academy."

But the academy isn't the only thing they have to keep up with. After all, this is the information age.

Last August, the Department was wired with fibre-optic cables to accommodate the new computer system which was installed two months ago.

With it, the police can post crime-prevention messages on on-line bulletin boards as well as communicate with students via e-mail.

Included in the new system is a computer-aided dispatch program which can automate certain reports to state and federal agencies that before had to be hand-typed.

The overall advantage, McComas said, is that "it's so quick." Dispatchers who once had to memorize key-in codes and monitor two screens of raw text and numbers now get to use a mouse and visualize everything on one screen with windows.

The greatest advantage the new system provides for the general public is a quicker response, McComas said.

"We have a responsibility not only to the officer but to everybody else in the community we serve to provide a responsive and professional police department."

Taking steps to improve STEPS

By Matt Felice
News Editor

Anyone who wants to use the Student and Temporary Employee Placement program (STEPS) must go all the way to the far end of North Campus to find the office's East Maxwell Street location.

But that's soon to change.

STEPS, as well as a number of other human resources (personnel) offices, is scheduled to move June 30 to a more central location at Scovell Hall on Washington Avenue.

Because of the move, STEPS will not be conducting interviews on June 28 and 29.

"I think it will be an advantage for students," said STEPS Manager Lillian Downing.

"We're more on the center part of campus. Students will be able to walk to us before and after class."

The current location is hardly within walking distance of the main campus, Downing said.

"You have to drive to get to us now," she said. "Foot traffic will increase with the centralization."

Downing said the new location also will make the program run more efficiently by making communication with other offices less difficult.

STEPS frequently contacts other offices like Financial Aid or the Registrar's Office to check student records and verify eligibility for certain programs, like the Federal Work-Study program. They also communicate with other human resources offices to conduct employment services that benefit non-students as well.

The concentration of human resources into one building will affect more than a few offices, said Bill George, manager of administrative services and records.

"Faculty and staff should also find us more customer-oriented," he said. "All sectors, colleges, divisions and departments would be served equally and consistently."

All of human resources will move to Scovell Hall within the next year, said George.

Those immediately scheduled to move include the benefits offices, regular and temporary employment, training, human resources administration, community college human resources, wage and salary, and employee records.

The new human resources telephone number, effective June 28, is 257-9555.

Chancellor to be appointed

University of Idaho president expected to get board's approval

By Jennifer Smith
Editor in Chief

New students are not going to be the only new faces on campus this fall.

An advisory committee to choose a new Lexington Campus chancellor has selected Elisabeth Zinser, president of the University of Idaho.

Zinser

Zinser will go before the University's Board of Trustees Tuesday for approval.

If appointed, Zinser will begin her tenure at UK July 1.

The chancellor is responsible for overseeing the academic affairs of UK's 11 colleges and graduate school.

Also, she will oversee more than 1,000 faculty and staff.

President Charles Wethington said although all of the candidates were qualified, Zinser was a top choice of the committee and of many of the groups she met with during her April visit to campus.

"She is just a very personable individual," Wethington said. "The advisory committee and I were impressed with her energy and enthusiasm. I think students will be as well."

He said he predicts no problem receiving board approval.

Zinser is not completely a new face at UK. She served as an assistant professor of behavioral sciences here in the mid-1970s. In conjunction with that position, she was the coordinator of the Kentucky Area Health Education Systems. "I'm very fond of Kentucky," she said.

"I spent a little time there in the '70s, and I came to respect the culture and beauty of the area."

Most would not characterize Zinser as an ordinary administrator. Not only will she be the highest-ranked female official at UK, she also has unusual approaches for getting to know students.

In Idaho, Zinser worked with the student affairs office to begin an annual retreat with student leaders at the University.

"We go out for three days and just camp out," she said in a telephone interview last month. "And I'm right there in the thick of things with my sleeping bags talking about leadership."

Also, around her Idaho campus she is known for helping students out of jams.

On several occasions, she said, she has loaned students money out of her own pocket when they were in "a legitimate financial crunch." She also likes to visit with student groups over dinner.

She said her administrative styles should not change when she gets to Lexington.

"The first year I'm at UK," she said, "I'll be doing a lot of studying and listening. I want to get a sense of the culture and get a closer look at things."

Sean Wilson, the student body president at Idaho, said Zinser is the ideal administrator.

"If you ever need anything, she's always more than willing to take time out and help whether it be on weekends or coming over to your house or whatever," Wilson said.

If appointed, Zinser will replace Robert Hemenway who left to take the top position at Kansas University.

Senior Staff Writer Brian Bennett contributed to this article.

Campus construction's hot

By Jennifer Smith
 Editor in Chief

As the summer heats up, some of UK's physical plant division employees are helping the campus strip down.

The most important stripping is taking place on the walkways leading up to South Campus' Kirwan/Blanding Complex and on the front pillars of Memorial Hall.

The Complex walkways are being taken up and replaced, said Bill Collins, manager of maintenance for the UK PPD.

"Once (the sidewalks) fail or wear out they have to be replaced," Collins said.

Collins expects the project to last longer than many of the usual campus sidewalk repairs, however he said he expects there to be enough time to complete it before students move in.

"We must finish (the project) by August 1," he said. "We made our other summer project last year a day or two late."

Crews have been working for more than a month on Memorial Hall, trying to finish up work that was started on the building last summer.

A contractor is working to strip the paint off of the four front pillars. Collins said normally they paint the outside pillars every four years or so and don't strip the paint completely.

Other construction students should be aware of, Collins said, are several blacktop resurfacing projects.

Once the blacktop projects are started, the minor ones usually take about three or four days, Collins said.

The main resurfacing work PPD is completing is at the north end of Hospital Drive, Donovan Drive, the corner of Graham and Gladstone Avenues, Huguely Drive and Singletary Drive at the Otis A. Singletary Center.

Former Cats coming home

By Kip Perkins
Sports Editor

There are two words that drive nearly anyone native to the Bluegrass into a frenzy of nostalgic reflections on the past and glimpses toward the future.

Wildcat Basketball.

Here are three different words that will let crazed fans of the Blue & White relive their nostalgic reflections while helping to build a showcase of such reflections for future generations to enjoy.

Wildcat Reunion Weekend.

Sixty-five Wildcats former Wildcats plan to revisit their Old Kentucky Home this weekend as part of the first-ever Wildcat Reunion Weekend.

The Reunion Weekend will begin Friday evening and conclude on Sunday evening in hopes of raising money for the much-awaited UK Basketball Museum.

Jane Vimont, the fund raising coordinator for the Basketball Museum, said fund raising efforts to date have gone "very well."

The majority of money collected thus far has come in the form of generous individual and corporate donations. Organizers hope this weekend will provide the general public with more exposure to the project and a chance to support the museum financially, Vimont said.

Stars from several of UK's storied basketball teams are expected to be in Lexington this weekend, including Ralph Beard and "Wah Wah" Jones of the "Fabulous Five," Vernon Hatton of the "Fiddlin' Five," Louie Dampier and Jim LeMaster of "Rupp's Runts," and, of course, members of the "Unforgettables."

"(My teammates and I) see each other from time to time, but it'll be exciting to see the older and younger (players)," said Jim LeMaster, who lettered as a Wildcat from 1966-68.

Friday evening will tip off the weekend with a reception and tribute dinner in Rupp Arena. Tickets are being sold at $100 a person, which includes the chance to sit with a former Wildcat.

The proceeds from the dinner and the UK Basketball Museum FUNDathon on Sunday will benefit the UK Basketball Museum.

"We hope that after this weekend we will be one-third of the way to our goal," Vimont said.

Saturday's events are geared away from fund raising for the museum and toward the fans. Several former players will compete in a public golf tournament at Kearney Hill Links, and fans can play a game of C-A-T against their favorite Wildcat in the Rupp Arena lobby from 10 a.m. to 2 p.m.

LeMaster said he is looking forward to seeing the Wildcat faithful, whose devotion and knowledge of the game as a whole is refreshing.

"Kentucky fans have an immense love for the game," LeMaster said, "They're so knowledgeable about the game."

Harden claims two titles

By Kip Perkins
Sports Editor

UK has a new national champion. Wildcat sprinting standout Tim Harden captured the first-ever national championship for UK track and field, coasting to victory at the recent NCAA Championships in the 100 meter sprint.

Harden won titles in the 100 meter sprint and in the 4 x100 meter relay at the Southeastern Conference Championships in Tuscaloosa.

The relay team, consisting of Harden, Marcum Lindsey, Chris Jackson and Ronnie Williams, placed third at nationals as well.

The track and field teams aren't the only ones who had a busy schedule during May. Here's a wrapup of some of the other sports who played on after finals:

Baseball

The UK baseball went into the SEC tournament on fire led by Jay Tedesco, who earned SEC Player of the Week honors during the season's final week.

The SEC Eastern Division tournament in Knoxville was a bright spot in the Cats' dim season as they just missed a trip to the Big Dance of college baseball.

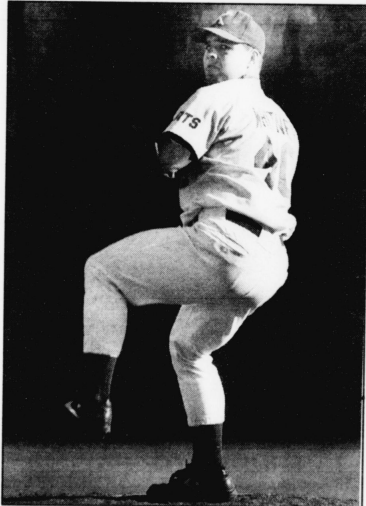

The Cats beat South Carolina, Georgia and Vandy en route to the finals, where Tennessee defeated UK twice, denying the Cats the automatic NCAA bid.

Junior pitcher Greg Reid pitched a complete game against South Carolina, whiffing 12.

Offensively, the Cats were led by junior catcher Todd Young and sophomore centerfielder Chad Green, both of whom were All-SEC and All-Tournament selections.

Tennis

The UK men's and women's tennis teams also were represented in their respective national tournaments.

File photo
COMING UP SHORT The UK baseball team missed out on a chance to advance to the NCAA Tournament by losing to Tennessee in the SEC Tournament.

The men's team finished its season among the nation's best teams with a record of 16-12.

Ludvig Sundin lost his first-round match in the NCAA tournament and the doubles team of Ford Lankford and Jason Thompson bowed out of the tournament in the second round.

Sheri Bash represented the women's team in the the NCAA Championships, where she was defeated in the second round.

UK planning new tennis facility

By Kip Perkins
Sports Editor

If you have passed by the Downing Outdoor Tennis Complex lately, you may have noticed that it is undergoing a slight facelift.

Older courts are being destroyed and rebuilt, while those courts in better condition are being repainted.

The construction may not stop there, though.

If the University's plans go according to schedule, crews should be putting the finishing touches on a new outdoor tennis stadium around this time next year.

The new stadium is expected to be built on the west side of the existing Boone Indoor Tennis Facility, where the current varsity soccer field sits.

Funding for the $1 million stadium is not completed yet, but it recently received a major surge of energy.

The funds still needed before construction begins total an estimated $425,000, to be raised by the Ryan C. Holder Memorial Tennis Fund.

Holder was a standout tennis player at Paul Laurence Dunbar High School who died in an auto accident earlier this year.

As a tribute to Holder's tremendous spirit and aspirations to play Division I tennis, his friends have established a fund in his name to raise the needed money to finish the project.

"Previous contributions had stalled," said Mary Lee Kerr, the fund chair, "and this just seemed like the right thing to do."

Kerr, along with UK Athletics Director C.M. Newton, kicked off the fund raising campaign three weeks ago in conjunction with the high school regional tournament that was taking place at the Boone facility.

Newton is very excited about the prospects of an outdoor tennis stadium, adding that it would give UK a first-class tennis facility, while being "a tremendous asset to junior tennis and tennis statewide."

Kerr said the final funding will come from "special friends" of the University, as well as through direct mail donations and a T-shirt campaign.

The stadium will consist of eight courts and accommodations to seat 1,000 spectators.

The facility will serve as the home of UK's varsity tennis programs, while hosting the Kentucky State High School Tennis Tournament and the Bluegrass State Games.

Holder's friends hope to name center court after him.

Construction on the new stadium is expected to start this January and should be completed by next summer.

The use of the stadium will not be limited to special tournaments and clinics but will be open for use by everyone.

Students salute Broadway

By Claire Johnston
Senior Staff Writer

The UK College of Fine Arts and School of Music will pay tribute to legendary Broadway composers Stephen Sondheim and Leonard Bernstein this Saturday at 8 p.m. at the Otis A. Singletary Center for the Arts.

This third annual salute, titled "It's a Grand Night for Singing," will feature classic songs from "West Side Story," "Candide," "A Little Night Music," "Sunday In the Park With George," "Sweeney Todd," "Follies" and "Make My Garden Grow."

"Grand Night" is not only a chance to hear classic show tunes, but is an opportunity for the UK vocal department to highlight its roster of talent.

In the past, the department has produced such stars as Gregory Turay, who recently won the Metropolitan Opera Company national auditions; Annette Silver-Betts, who is touring with the Houston Opera Company; and Anesia Buntun, who is sharing the lead in the off-Broadway play, "Mama I Want to Sing."

Everett McCorvey, director of the Broadway salute and head of UK's vocal program, believes the current and past success of the vocal program have impacted recent recruiting classes.

"Our vocal program is very high caliber, probably the highest it's ever been," he said.

In the past four years, the program has doubled from 40 vocal majors to more than 80, which includes 12 grad students.

Along with recruiting success and growing interest, last year was UK's most successful season at the box office to date.

McCorvey hopes the salute will mirror such success.

"People will be amazed to hear the quality of some of Broadway's best music and they don't even have to go to New York," he said. "Hopefully people will leave humming the music."

Tickets for the salute — which cost $8 for students, $12 for the general public and $10 for senior citizens — are available at the Singletary Center ticket office. To order tickets, call 257-4929.

Festival celebrates Bluegrass

By Claire Johnston
Senior Staff Writer

With plenty of barbecue and banjos, the Kentucky Horse Park will kick off summertime by hosting the 22nd annual Festival of the Bluegrass this Friday through Monday.

The four-day event will feature a roster of the top names in Bluegrass music with over 28 hours of music and workshops on acoustic instruments and on vocal harmonization.

The featured performer for the festival is Bluegrass star Alison Krauss.

Also scheduled to perform are Union Station, Seldom Scene from Washington D.C., Austin Lounge Lizards, Peter Rowan, Jerry Douglas from Nashville and Chubby Wise, the fiddler and composer of "Orange Blossom Special."

Joining those performers will be Charlie Waller, Quicksilver with Doyle Lawson, Traditional Grass with Moon and Joe Mullins and Del McCoury and his award-winning family group.

In addition to the many performers, a new addition to the festival, "Memories Tent," will trace the history of Bluegrass music and the clubs, such as Martins in Lexington, the Store Front in Louisville and Aunt Maudies in Cincinnati, that supported the genre.

James Cornett, producer of the festival, described the event as a traditional family fun.

"My family began producing the festival 22 years ago," Cornett said. "They had always gone to festivals around the country and decided they could do a better job."

Cornett believes that Bluegrass music has its roots in Kentucky and is a artifact of the Appalachian lifestyle.

"Since Bluegrass music originated in the mountains, it is about as Kentucky as it gets," Cornett said.

"That is what people did in the hollers for entertainment since they couldn't go to town every Saturday night."

Cornett said he expects the event to draw more than 20,000 people.

Cornett has seen the popularity of bluegrass grow, especially among young adults.

"It is a blast — my friends used to turn their nose up to bluegrass music, but now it is the cool thing to do to like bluegrass music," Cornett said. "The 10- to 35-year-olds are our biggest group."

Even if you are not a fan of bluegrass music, Cornett thinks that the festival is a good way to spend an afternoon or evening.

"People that don't even like bluegrass music will have a good time," Cornett said.

"It is a family time. On a sunny day you can sit out and listen to good music."

Tickets are $40 for a four-day set or $38 for a three-day set. One-day tickets are $10 for Thursday, $20 each for Friday and Saturday and $7 for Sunday. For more information, call (606) 846-4995.

ViewPOINT

Students left out of the game — again

Hello. Is anybody out there? This is the only student voice right now. The administration knows it, and they are probably capitalizing on it even as you are reading this.

Of course, it's not like this is a special occasion. It's not unusual for the administration to not care what you think — what any student thinks for that matter.

Of course we could go through and cite at least a million times when they didn't bother asking students' opinions on issues that directly affect them.

But that would take too long. And if there's one thing that can be said about a lot of UK students: they love their Wildcat basketball.

And even if you despise that sport with the orange and black bouncing ball, it's a pretty safe bet that you like to have a say in how the University spends your money.

But it's happened again. The UK Ticket Board has determined that students now need to pay $5 for basketball tickets this season and $5 for football tickets next season.

The board's reasons are pretty cut and dried: there has been a push for UK to comply with Title IX (gender equity) and the need to maintain the campus sports facilities.

We don't deny the athletic department needs more revenue. It costs money to support 21 varsity sports.

And let's face it — the department hasn't given us a hike in our athletic fees in 16 years. That's more than we can say for our tuition.

Although it seems like students having to pay for basketball tickets is the most pressing issue, there is another important one that has to be noticed.

UK Athletics Director C.M. Newton said the board has been kicking this proposal around for more than a year and a half. That's more than 547 days they could have given students some notice and some say in the matter.

They could have allowed students to choose between a $10 activities fee increase each semester or a $5 charge for each basketball ticket.

Although one can only speculate the result of that, it is safe to say the students who cared would have been heard.

Although the vote on this one has already been counted and it shows Ticket Board 1 and Students 0, that doesn't mean that's where it should stop.

Newton said if students asked for an increase in student fees, his department could likely be persuaded to make a change in its next budget.

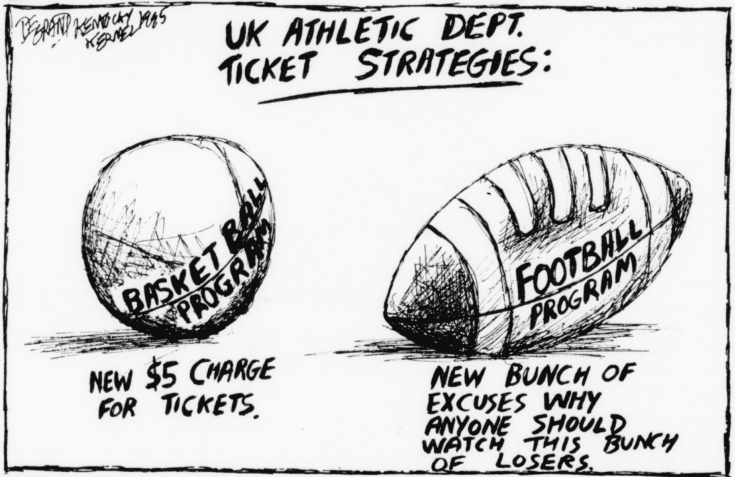

So, here you go administration — Ticket Board included — we're waiting. Ask us what we think; ask us where we want the increase.

It's not hard. Take a vote. Put a referendum out on the next Student Government Association poll.

And if the administration can't or won't do it, then SGA should take the ball into its own court, do the referendum itself and then dish it back to the administration.

At least give students a chance to play in the game.

IN OUR OPINION

Ethnic hang-ups pointless

Objectivity: to treat as or cause to have objective reality: to give expression to in a form that can be experienced by others. —Webster's Collegiate Dictionary

For a number of years it has been en vogue to refer to the media's portrayal of various groups in society as "objectification." In light of the above definition, it seems rather odd that people would think this was a bad thing. Shouldn't a group with legitimate complaints want others to be able to experience what they go through?

More suspect than this is the accepted and politically correct trend in which people moan about sports teams which utilize Native American imagery for their mascots. Teams such as the Atlanta Braves, Cleveland Indians and Florida State Seminoles have been accused of "objectifying" Native Americans and somehow denigrating their image.

One of the worst hangers-on within this movement is the pseudo-rapper D-Knowledge. He's decided that people shouldn't buy Jeep Cherokees because the name is disgraceful and that calling a team the Golden State Warriors is the equivalent of a conspicuously derogatory and hateful name like the "Seattle Speechuckers" (his words, not mine).

D-Knowledge says it's wrong to name a team after Native Americans because, "that's objectifying."

This kind of blatant whining has got to stop. First, the entertainment industry's portrayal of women as sex objects, Native Americans as alcoholics, Mexican-Americans as illegal immigrants and African-Americans as crack addicts is obviously wrong. But when a woman appears naked in a magazine, she is no more caused to have objective reality than the Marlboro Man is when he shows up on the back cover of that same issue.

Second, the people who criticize baseball teams in Atlanta and Cleveland for their mascots are hypocrites. None of them ever say that the Notre Dame Fighting Irish should change their name because it lowers the self-esteem of Irish Americans. Never do you hear the hundreds of thousands of Irish Americans in Boston complain that they have been objectified because their basketball team is called the "Celtics."

This is not just because the Irish have a good sense of humor about themselves and often make their own race the butt of their jokes. It's also not because they are, without exception, white. It's because the armies of the politically correct have nothing better to do than try to find silly reasons to explain the horrible plight of many "minorities" within our society.

The fact is, Native Americans are, for the most part, poor and undereducated because the United States government screwed them over by breaking dozens of treaties, took their lands and plied them with liquor. Not one of them ever lost a shot at a job, got insulted by members of another ethnic group or failed to learn how to read because someone in Atlanta at the turn of the century decided to name a baseball team "the Braves."

These same guardians of political correctness have good points to make.

One could argue that a derogatory nickname like "Redskins," which is on the same level as "Hymie" or "Spic," should be abolished. But a nickname is just a name after all, and you will never hear the steelworkers' unions complain about the Pittsburgh Steelers, nor the Massachusetts National Guard moan about the New England Patriots.

Hypersensitivity has no place in the public dialogue of a nation as ethnically diverse as ours. People have a right to be aware of their ethnicity and gender, but they should not wear either as a chip on their shoulder.

If you wear shoes that are too big for you, then obviously, someone is bound to step on your toes everywhere you go.

A sense of humor and a foot on solid ground will go a long way in making life easier for everyone. When my friends whistle the Irish Spring jingle or make potato jokes around me because my parents are Irish immigrants, I laugh.

Is this too much to expect from other people?

Chaney, SGA staying busy

By Sara Spears
Campus Editor

Most students look forward to their summer break — a time when they can relax and recuperate from two hard semesters — but there is one student organization on campus that works throughout the summer to ensure students a better year to come.

That is UK's Student Government Association.

SGA President Shea Chaney said that he and his administration are busy at work trying to create new student services and update older ones in order to serve students better.

One project Chaney said SGA hopes to have implemented by the fall semester is a tuition payment plan. SGA is working with the Student Billings Office to create a plan that would allow students to pay their tuition in a series of payments rather than paying the entire amount at once.

Chaney said SGA also is working on getting a local bank to offer student loans so that students would pay back the bank over a certain time period after the tuition is already paid.

"With students having to pay this bulk amount all at once," Chaney said, "the current payment plan is driving students to financial aid."

Chaney

Chaney said that he is also working on SGA's budget for next year.

"Last year SGA went over all of their budget allocations except for Senate allocations," Chaney said.

"This year we plan to monitor spending a lot more closely to ensure that that doesn't happen again."

Chaney said that SGA has also added more to the budget for the Student Legal Service, as well as adding a fund for student lobbying and possibly a student fax service.

The Senate plans to pass the temporary summer budget at its meeting next Wednesday.

According to Chaney, SGA also is working on the possibility of students taking personal safety and defense classes for college credit. Though he says they aren't sure whether or not this idea will make it through all the niches, they hope to have it available for students by the spring semester.

SGA is also working on next year's student directory, as well as trying to expand some of the services already in existence and working out the kinks in newly created services.

"We have a very wide variety of student services, but students just don't know enough about them," Chaney said.

"There is no reason a student shouldn't take advantage of the services we offer. Besides, the students are the ones who pay for them."

Scholarships wrong

The U.S. Supreme Court let stand May 22 a lower court decision that ruled minority scholarships reserved for blacks were discriminatory against non-blacks.

Daniel Podberesky, a Hispanic student, sued the University of Maryland when he learned he didn't qualify for the scholarships reserved for black students.

The decision of the 4th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals does not immediately affect scholarship programs at UK since Kentucky falls under the jurisdiction of the 6th Circuit Court.

New trustees appointed

The University's Board of Trustees has two new members.

Merwin Grayson, Jr., of Crescent Springs, Ky., will be replacing William Sturgill; and Billy Joe Miles, of Owensboro, Ky., will be replacing Daniel Ulmer.

The new trustees will be serving until June 30, 2001 and will be sworn in at the board's next meeting on Tuesday.

Former Gov. Edward T. "Ned" Breathitt was reappointed as chairman.
