Fieldhouse Cornerstone Is Laid Founders Day By Gov. Clements, Dr. Donovan, And Coaches

Nearly everyone but the workmen building the UK memorial fieldhouse welded a trowel and applied mortar to the cornerstone of the new structure in a ceremony Tuesday morning at the site at Euclid and Lexington avenues.

The new building, the "Memorial Coliseum." "It is a worthy memorial to the 1945 Kentuckians who sacrificed their lives for their country in World War II," he stated. "In this building, when it is completed, will be inscribed the names of each of them. This memorial is evidence that a grateful state has not forgotten, and as a tribute to these honored dead, I shall recommend to the Board of Trustees at its next meeting that this building be officially named the Memorial Coliseum, and that it be dedicated to their memory."

"Just can't seem to find enough to do on this slow, easy semester system."

Letters To The Editor

Dear Editor: There is a certain existing condition that is causing a great deal of student (and, I believe, faculty) dissatisfaction, that I would like publicly discussed. I am speaking, of course, of having the semester broken up by the Christmas holidays. I have yet to hear a person favor finishing the term's work after the vacation. Too, they consider it rather senseless, having a second vacation, three weeks later, between the semesters. They complain the present system leaves everything in a state of turmoil and confusion from the middle of December to the first of February. Their study continuity is broken up and most of them spend a great deal of the Tule vacation worrying about term papers and exams that await them upon their return to school in January. Why can't we finish up the term before Christmas? And then start the second term in January? What is the sense in having two vacations, and things so broken up? I have talked to at least a dozen people and everyone of them had either scorn or amused contempt for the present system. The following sample solution was favored by everyone I questioned: 1) Open school the first week in September, cut out all minor holidays and complete the term before Christmas. 2) Then, either have a prolonged holiday of two additional weeks (a total of one month) and resume school in the middle of January, and get out the usual time in the spring. 3) Or, resume school, as usual the first of January, and then get out by the middle of May. I believe this plan would save time by eliminating the second vacation, or rather combining the two holidays into one. The administration would also be able to close out the old semester and be able to prepare for the second. It would mean a fresh start for everyone after Christmas. I am enclosing copies of this letter to Dr. Dawson, Dr. Chamberlain, and Dr. Seay for their comment and have requested that they answer through this column at their earliest convenience. In the meantime, Miss Deist, your comment will be greatly appreciated and anticipated. I would like to urge campus groups and students-at-large to make public their opinions on this matter. Unless there is some great financial reason why this plan would fail, I am sure the faculty would put it in force by next September, if they are convinced it is the desire of a greater portion of the student body. In hopes of student and faculty support, I remain, INTERESTED PARTY (Your idea seems practical and is most interesting. But since the present system has been found academically feasible at pre-war UK, since it is the system used at most colleges, and since next year's calendar has already been set, it would probably be impossible to effect the change. Moreover, were afraid there would be a wide difference of opinion among students about this, and that the more leisurely system might be favored.—Ed.)

Cokes, Poolrooms, WSSF

According to the YM-YW, students spent $12,000 for cokes in the bookstore alone last year, and $9,000 in the SUB billiard hall. The reason for their digging up these fantastic figures is not to urge students to give up cokes or shooting pool, but to show that with that much extra charge, students should be able to put a little of it into the WSSF. The World Student Service Fund drives Tuesday. The money it nets pays for some food, books, and clothing for students all over the world. UK has contributed generously in the past, and it is to be hoped that this year will be no exception.

Featuring Miss Dederling

Ingeborg Dederling, a German student who is now at the University, is writing a series of features for the Kernel. The first one, printed last week, was a most interesting comparison of German and American school life. In others, she will give her account of related topics. Miss Dederling writes very well indeed; she gives the reader insight into the viewpoint of a foreign student. Her articles should prove a valuable reading experience for all of us.

Can You Top This One?

When Groza sank that last basket that broke the Southern Conference scoring record Monday night, the crowd's terrific ovation showed what everyone was thinking: here is a great player, just possibly the greatest. And the same thought went for the UK. The chances to see it play are dwindling out, and every University student realizes that here is a team we may still be calling "the greatest" when we've all been alumni for many years.

Engineers To Send Delegates To Meeting

Delegates from the College of Engineering will attend the district convention of the American Institute of Electrical Engineers at the University of Kentucky, Baton Rouge, March 2-6. Papers written by students of the southeastern district will be read at the convention. Three prizes, amounting to $50, will be awarded to the winning papers. Another phase of the convention program will be survey trips to various refining plants, power plants, TVA dams, and manufacturing centers of the area. Mr. J. B. Berry, Norfolk, Va., vice-president of the southeastern district, will preside at the convention assemblies. University of Kentucky delegates will leave Monday to attend the Mardi Gras at New Orleans before arriving at the convention. The delegates are Prof. E. A. Bureau, Prof. E. B. Barrett, Ken Reckenswald, John Cashman, Jack Bell, Fred Marcum, and Gene Durham. George Washington's Birthday is a custom which originated in B.C. on the island of Crete. Student Describes Life In Berlin Under Occupation By Allies, Reads

By Ingeborg Dederling
"But after all, isn't it very interesting to live in Berlin?"

Come on, dear American friend, let me show you this Eldorado and you will see.

But get your boots and your courage, so that you won't get lost in the mud.

We arrive at the airport in Berlin-Tempelhof. This is where the present heart of the city beats. This is the unique spot, where hope and confidence and new energies are unloaded with the cans and boxes from across the sea.

You are impressed, and you watch the arrival of planes the contents of which keep a city from starving.

We take a streetcar after we have left the airport. You glance through the window and do not seem to see anything in particular. This is American sector, as big posters on street corners tell you.

Over there, the huge building with the American flag on top is "Tele-Union." Something that was left over from Germany's industrial life is American headquarters here.

Hundreds of German employees walk through the doorway. Their faces look tired and worried, but not discontent. They have salaries. And they have daily noon meals without ration cards.

Enter Russian Sector
We proceed toward the center of the city, entering the Russian sector. And there it is suddenly, Berlin in ashes. Are you surprised? You have seen pictures. But this is reality.

Traffic noise echoes in window holes of empty houses at both sides of the street. The walls are cracked and turned black in fire. The sidewalks are covered with rubble that has become hard in rain and cold.

What is the matter? The streetcar has stopped. Electricity has gone. Never mind, this is not unusual. People get out and proceed on foot.

Let's have a look around. We find a store among the ruins. The display shows children's toys of thin metal and wood. We remove the piece of heavy cloth that serves as door sign.

Don't you want a souvenir of Berlin? The storekeeper brings a music box. He turns the key and plays "Du kannst nicht treu sein, or 'You CAN'T Be True, Dear.'"

Do you have eastern currency? The man asks. No, we have neither. "Sorry," the storekeeper says.

Afterwards we climb over a lamp post that lies flat on the ground. You look up and listen to the sudden sound of a piano that comes from behind us. We turn around and see nothing but the silhouettes of destroyed roofs and chimneys against the sky. But there comes life from the basement, where people live. There are garlands on the window board and tulips, planted in flower pots.

I want to show you something that is worthwhile seeing. We take a long walk and are right in the center of Berlin.

This is "Unter den Linden." Berlin's famous alley, where the Emperor had been cheered and — Hitler. Linden trees have gone. They were removed under the Nazi regime. You find nothing left of the glamorous opera houses, monuments, and museums. People walk along a dead street, poorly dressed Germans in ragged boots and dirty Russian soldiers.

And here we are. We stand in front of two Russian guards and read the golden letters over the entrance of the building, "House of Culture."

Take your gum out, American friend, these are sacred halls. We enter and immediately find ourselves opposite Stalin's huge portrait. He looks grim. In fact, he has nothing to smile about.

We walk through the reception room, the library, and the theater. We admire gilded furniture, pompous wall-paper, thousands of volumes on Soviet literature, and a picture of Ivan the Terrible. Do we, really?

Or do we see and hear something behind the glitter, faces that are motionless as cruel, hands that are dirty and blood-spotted, voices that are eager and noisy?

Let's get out of here, friend, I feel my breath taken away from me. When we come to Alexanderplatz, we get into a crowd of people. Black Market Center. Anything you want to buy? You won't need any ration cards, just a bit of both eastern and western currencies and a quick eye to catch the cop when he shows up.

Child Has Hungry Eyes
A small child approaches us and asks for something to eat. Need or raffines? Anyway, give him something, he has so hungry eyes.

You look tired, my friend, and your shoes are all covered with dust. But let me show you one more thing before I take you home with me. We walk across the square to the railroad station. It is 6 p.m. and everybody comes from work who has any. We throw a glance at the mass that crowds around the ticket office.

We look into weary, unshaved faces and listen to unkind words when we are pushed up the steps with the stream. One woman makes a hysterical outcry. Her suitcase has opened and potatoes are rolling out which are immediately stepped on by the masses. She may have gotten them from relatives on the country.

The train takes us out of the Russian sector back to the western area. Slowly the picture changes. People that now walk in at the shops are better dressed, their conversation livelier. One man tells about his trouble.

"I am working in the Russian sector," he says, "and I live in the American sector. I am paid in eastern currency, but what can I do with it? Eastern money has no value, and there are items, food and others, which I have to buy and pay for in western money in the sector where I live. It only the Russians . . ."

Where Is End
The Russians, the Russians, the Russians . . . people clench their fists when they speak the word and press their lips together in bitterness and despair. Where and what is an end to all this.

We get out of the train in Berlin-Steglitz. I want you to meet a friend of mine. We go to her apartment and you will see something funny.

We knock and she opens with a candle in her hand. Her household is granted a two-hour electricity supply within 14 days.

We come into the living room and you look puzzled. What's all this about?

Pots and bowls are placed all over the floor. They catch thin streams of snow-water that is slowly dripping through the ceiling.

"We haven't got a roof," my friend explains.

After we have left I tell you about our bossess. Her brother was a student at the University of Berlin which is under Russian control. He did not want to pretend, no, he didn't.

And he said something, something against the Red regime which had made his mind work and his blood boil. And then he disappeared, just didn't come back one day. His mother and his sister, however, received a tiny postcard, months later.

It was printed and came all the way from Russia. It said that he was well, and working, and happy. Now they are waiting for his return.

Come in, American friend, you are welcome in our home. Mother will be back in an hour. She is standing in line across the street, where they have a special display of fish on our meat ration cards.

Pressure Broke Windows
Sit down and make yourself at home. But let me get you a blanket, it's draughty. Our windows were demolished by air pressure at an air

Why Join The American Legion?

Listen To What This UK Veteran Has To Say

" . . . I have always appreciated the part the American Legion has played in veterans' affairs, both on a national scale and in conjunction with veterans at UK. Those of us who have seen the American Legion in operation know that there would have been no GI Bill and that we would not be in school in all probability except for the role the Legion played.

I can also recall the many times during the period in which I was president of the UK Veterans Club that the local post came to our aid.

I am surprised that so few of the vets in school know about Man O'War Post No. 8 and the many advantages it offers, including the finest clubrooms in Central Kentucky

Two things every college man should know!

1. This is a nightshirt. A flannel channel. Made Grandfather sewed. But tickled Grandfather's fancy. He took it with a nightcap (or two). Only kind of sleepwear "Manhattan" doesn't make.

2. This is a hint . . . for really restful snoozing, slip into a pair of roomy "Manhattan" pajamas. Durable cotton, rayon, and cotton and rayon prints. Luxurious Jacquards and Paisleys. Many equipped with stretchy "Manumatic" drawstring. Also smart sleepcoats and sl-pajamas.

State Geological Survey Makes Comeback After Norwood Blaze

Its program badly crippled by a cozy fire just three months ago, the Kentucky Geological Survey now is engaged in making a comeback. Though virtually all of its properties were lost in the flames which destroyed Norwood Hall on the University of Kentucky campus last November, Survey authorities have announced a large scale research program to be undertaken as funds become available.

Survey Began Last Summer
The Survey came back into existence only last summer when the Geological Division of the Department of Mines and Minerals was transferred to the UK Department of Geology. The Department of Mines and Minerals is a division concerned with safety inspection, policing and administration, while the Geological Survey is an organization for research.

One of the primary functions of the Survey is to collect and make available to industries for suitable plant sites, information concerning Kentucky's natural resources.

McFarlan Is Head
The present program of the Survey, as announced by Dr. Arthur McFarlan, head of the UK Department of Geology, includes plans for the study of the state's petroleum, limestone, clay, coal, iron ore and natural brine reserves.

"One of our greatest needs is to take a real inventory of what we have, through complete county-by-county studies, so we can supply basic data to operating and prospective operating companies," Dr. McFarlan stated.

State Commitment
Industries planning to establish a plant near the source of their required raw materials are unwilling to wait long for information which they seek. For example, if a firm were considering both Illinois and Kentucky cities as a possible factory site, and the former were prompt to submit satisfactory data, the factory would almost certainly go to Illinois.

Unfortunately, however, detailed county-by-county studies must await the appropriation of its work on the provincial sheeting, supplementing its full-time staff of just two men, most of whose time is taken up in answering routine inquiries by assigning research projects to members of the Department of Geology staff.

Letcher County Studied
Indicative of the need for increased appropriations is the situation in Letcher county, where the United States Geological Survey recently has begun a two-year study of the county's geologic and mineral resources. The annual budget of the U.S.G.S. for work in this one county exceeds considerably the funds granted the Kentucky Geological Survey for all its work throughout the state, Dr. McFarlan explained.

To carry out the vast research program needed in Kentucky, the permanent full-time Survey staff should include, Dr. McFarlan estimated, four or five experienced geologists, a similar number of younger men, and additional part-time employees for the summer field season.

Five Years' Work Lost
The fire that leveled Norwood hall set back the work of the Survey by at least five years, according to Dr. McFarlan. Most damaging was the loss of records containing data supplying the basis for conclusions the Survey is called upon to make almost daily.

Plans New Work
Despite the fire loss and the extremely limited budget, the Survey staff by no means has relaxed its efforts. It is planning a study of all gas and oil pools in western Kentucky and hopes eventually to extend this program to every section of the state.

Research is also underway on the Commonwealth's limestone resources which never have been fully utilized. In many areas of the state, there are high calcium limestone beds of such satisfactory thickness and purity as to make them well adapted for industrial use. Compilation of complete reports on these deposits, Dr. McFarlan said, will constitute an important step in Kentucky's industrial growth.

Future in Brick And Tile
Though it will have to await the completion of more urgent work, study of the state's clay beds offers many possibilities. It is certain, however, that the establishment of small brick and tile industries is possible in many Kentucky counties, the UK geologist stated.

The Survey is also cooperating with the U.S.G.S. in research work on the state's most important mineral resource, coal, and is conducting a study of western Kentucky iron ore deposits from the standpoint of occurrence, distribution and quantity.

Iron Ore Limited
Though the quality of Kentucky's iron ore is satisfactory, Dr. McFarlan believes that the quantity is too limited to warrant much hope for the establishment of the industry in the state.

Another important research project scheduled by the survey is a study of the state's natural brine resources. In addition to common salt, these brines — often found in gas pools — yield such valuable industrial and pharmaceutical materials as chlorine, soda ash, and caustic soda.

Official To Address Social Work Classes
Mr. Aaron Paul, director of the Department of Economic Security division of public assistance in the state at Frankfort, will speak to social work classes at UK Wednesday.

First General Highway Conference To Convene On Campus March 3

The first general Kentucky Highway conference will be held at the University on March 3-4. Invitations have been extended to members of the State Highway Department, county officials, city engineers, members of the Kentucky Society of Road Engineers, and those interested in road equipment. An estimated 400 delegates are expected to attend.

Purpose of Conference
The purpose of the Conference is to unite highway and state officials and engineers for the interchange of ideas on the design, construction, and maintenance of streets.

Registration will be held in Anderson Hall. Several of the speakers scheduled to address the assembly are Earle C. Clements, governor

Wildcats Whip Georgia And Tech; Groza Scores 38 To Regain Record

By Kent Hollingsworth

Urged on by his teammates, the mophead real of excited and his own personal desire to stamp his name in the conference record book, Captain Alex Groza scored 38 points against four University of Georgia centers last Monday night. Six minutes and fifty seconds remained of the game, one-tired Kentucky's center lifted up a pivot shot; it hit the rim and bounced back to him, standing near the foul line; he flipped it back for the 27th time and 28th score was Big A break Adcock's scoring mark.

The record wasn't one shared on him, Groza worked for it. His 20 foul shots give small indication of the beating he took in the 33rd minutes he played.

Guarding him were 6'8" Bob Schloss, 6'5" Al Fabian, 6'7" Jesse Fox, and 6'1" John Davis.

His teammates began feeding him the ball only after he registered his 24th point with 16 minutes left in the game and the score, 62-24.

In the next nine minutes he hit a rebound pivot, three fouls, a crap, and three more fouls to the Vanderbilt's Billy Joe Adcock's 36 point record. His one hander from the foul line turned the page.

After Groza went out, some noticed the score was 80-38, and when the buzzer sounded, a few more realized Kentucky had won their 73rd consecutive home game, 95-40.

Dag Barnstable played one of his best games of the year, scoring all but one of his 13 points on crap shots. Groza hit 12 of 27 shots from the field and 14 of 23 free through. Cats hit 40 percent of their shots during the first half.

Marathons Have 2-1 Record In IM Division Two

The Marathons, a team of eight men entered in division one of the independent branch of the Intramural basketball round-robin play, is sponsored by the Marathon Gas Company.

"Up to last Tuesday, the record of this organization was two wins and only one defeat in their division. They rolled over BSTU, 40-12, beat the Panthers, 30-22, but were tripped by the Law School 20-17.

The height of the team average, 5'11", with four men standing 5'10" to 5'11", and two measuring 6' and 2' 4".

The forwards are: Ross Ecklar, who played three years for Bourbon County High School; R. O. Stapleton, three years at Maytown High School; and Patrick Hall, who was two years in action at M.M.I.

At center is Dan Clark, the captain, who played two years at Inglewood, Cal. High School and two years in the Inglewood Men's League; and Leonard Paul, three years at Orangeburg High.

Guards are: Robert Reed, three years at M.M.I.; Patrick Lynch, two years at St. Xavier; and Emery

Cats Seeded No. 1 In SEC Cage Tourney

Kentucky's Champion Wildcat basketball team, flourishing a 12-0 conference seasonal record, was seeded No. 1 in the Southeastern Conference Tournament, which starts Thursday.

Tulane, Tennessee and Louisiana State were seeded in that order, following the Big Blue.

Basketball bouncing starts at 1:30 p.m. Thursday, in the Louisville Armory, when L.S.U. meets Georgia Tech in the first game of the year.

Picking an All Conference honor five is going to be a great deal more difficult than in 1947, when five native Kentuckians were selected.

Individual stars in the running for the honor are Tennessee's Paul Walker, Tech's Jim Nolan and Colin Anderson, Vandy's Billy Joe Adcock, Georgia's Joe Jordan, Tulane's Jim Ruffey and Warren Perkins, and Kentucky's Barker, Beard, Groza, Barnstable and Jones.

Barring the biggest upset: Southern basketball has ever known, the Kentucky Wildcats should stroll to their sixth consecutive Southeastern basketball crown.

Sixty ballots were submitted by coaches, officials and Southern sportswriters with Groza barely nosing out Beard for the highest number of votes.

Last year, Jones, Beard and Ken-ny Rollins made the All-SEC team; and in 1947, five Kentuckians, Jones, Beard, Jack Tingle, Joe Holland, and Rollins were selected on the first five.

DisKintucky Sports Review

By Tom Diskin, Sports Editor

Coach Adolph Rupp informed us this week that 18 basketball games have already been scheduled for the 1948-50 season.

"We won't be running all over the country like we're doing now," the famed mentor stated. He went on to say that the Wildcats will play "22 or 23 games at the most" next year.

Home and home games have been carded with the following teams: DePaul of Chicago; Vanderbilt, Georgia Tech, Xavier; Tennessee; Alabama; Mississippi; and Georgia.

Site of the away game with Mississippi will probably be Memphis. The Cats will meet Xavier again next winter in the Cincinnati Gardens.

In addition, Coach Rupp stated that St. John's College of Brooklyn and the University of Arkansas have been scheduled, Madison Square Garden will be the scene of the Kentucky-St. John's clash, while the Arkansas tilt will be played at Fayetteville, Arkansas.

The Baron said that he hoped to have St. John's play here each season after the UK fieldhouse is finally completed.

Negotiations are underway now for carding Notre Dame at South Bend, Ind.

"We don't know for sure about the Notre Dame game, but we'll probably be playing there again next season," said Rupp.

Alex Groza, Ralph Beard, Walt Jones and Cliff Barker will make their grand finale on the home court tomorrow night when the Wildcats play Vanderbilt at the Commodore from Nashville.

These four players have been the big stars for Kentucky since 1946. During their time with Coach Rupp and the Big Blue, the Wildcats have been generally recognized as "the greatest team in the history of college basketball."

For many students, this will be the last time they will see Messers, Groza, Beard, Jones and Barker in action. They have earned the University of Kentucky national and international fame as a result of the amazing skill in the roundball game.

As everyone knows, these four, along with Kenny Rollins, now starring for the Chicago Stags pro players, teamed up with the Phillips Oilers, and four other chosen hoop standouts, to win the Olympic basketball championship of the United States last summer in London, England.

The four Kentucky basketballers have helped UK win numerous titles and championships. They have been highly praised in newspapers, magazines, books, and on the radio. They have appeared in movies. In fact, their experience has at Kentucky even outdone a Frank Merriwell fiction story.

The Big Four are known from Los Angeles to London for their sensational basketball ability.

They have earned a million dollars worth of publicity for our institution and have always been a credit to the University by their conduct and their play.

Tomorrow is a day that Coach Adolph Rupp and the many thousands of Kentucky followers hate to see. It means the end of an unforgettable era is drawing to a close.

For after the Vanderbilt game, only the post-season tournament remain. Then Father Time will beckon the boys and the younger Wildcats will move in and attempt to replace these four greats.

During the time that Beard and Jones have been playing for Kentucky, the Cats have won 151 games, while losing only nine.

Groza has seen the UK's Dixiecat cap 103 wins in 110 encounters.

Barker, while on the squad, has helped the Lexington Lynx capture 93 victories in 106 skirmishes.

The Associated Press, in an early poll, named three Kentucky Wildcats to the All-Southeastern Conference first team this week. Another Kentucky player was placed on the second team, while the fifth UK starlet was nominated for the third quintet.

On the first team were Alex Groza, Ralph Beard and Walt Jones. Cliff Barker was on the second squad, and Dale Barnstable was named in team No. 3.

Paul Walker, of Tennessee, and Virgil Eisner, of Tulane, were the others to make the first-team selections.

Many SEC followers will differ with the AP writers in their nomination of Eisner over the Cats' versatile Barker, who has often been called.

ing. Then against Tennessee three nights later he played, although slowed up by the injury, which prompted one writer to make a classic remark that The Little Man was about to be replaced on the starting five by a reserve.

A few nights later, Beard made the scribe eat these words by turning in his usual hangup game against Xavier as he hit eight baskets while still handicapped by his injury. He has continued to play outstanding all stars.

One factor that has been overlooked by sportswriters is the scarcity of standout guards.

Ofhand we can name only two really great collegiate guards in the entire nation. Next to Beard, only Notre Dame's O'Shea even comes close with the possible exception of UK's own Cliff Barker.

Good centers are not too rare. Behind Groza come Easy Ed Macaulay (St. Louis), Bob Harris (Oklahoma A & M), Bob McIntyre (Minnesota), Vern Gardner (Utah) among others.

At forward, there are Walt Jones, Tony Lavell (Yale), Vince Boryla (Denver), Dick Eddleman (Illinois), Dick Dickey (North Carolina State) and Bob Cousy (Holy Cross).

But at guard, there are only the aforementioned two who are nationally recognized as All-Americans.

Beard, in the last 130 games that Kentucky has played has been sidelined only for one game—that being after the Cincinnati game when he injured his right leg at the ancient Music Hall.

And while on Beard, we were glad to see that Ed Fitzgerald gave a very good writeup on The Little Man in the current issue of SPORT magazine.

In this article, it is related how the Phi Kappa Psi nearly left UK for the University of Louisville in his freshman year. Another interesting feature is that Beard played pro ball over a career with the Phillips Oilers.

It stands to reason that Beard will do very well with the professional team that he does choose, despite some comment to the otherwise because of his size.

He is only one inch shorter than Ken Rollins, who is now doing quite well for the Chicago Stags at the present time.

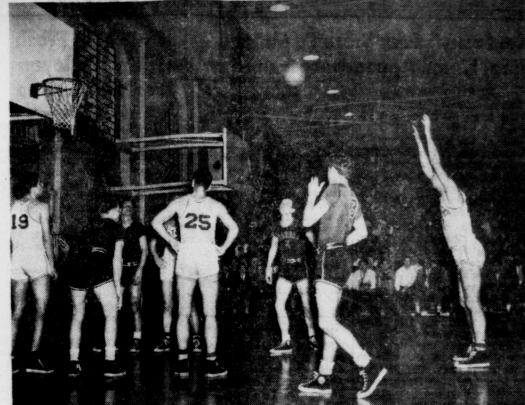

Another thing is that he hit for 23 seasonal points against the Phillips Oilers last March in the finals of the Olympic Trials when the big chips were really on the table. He was the only UK player to score over 10 points that night. Bob Kurland, giant center of the Oilers, tallies 20.

This Phillips quiet, had two guards that were 5' 10", one-half inch shorter than Beard, who states that "every team seems to have at least one short player."

Pathfinder News Magazine has a four-page spread on the Kentucky Wildcats in the current issue, written by its sports editor, Watson Pennington, who spent several days here gathering material and pictures of the team. A color photo of Kentucky's Groza in action appears on the cover.

In the March 5 issue of Colliers, which goes on sale today, Bill Fay, sports editor of that magazine, has a series of seven questions and answers with Kentucky's widely-known Coach Adolph Rupp.

Fay who interviewed Rupp while the New York Times was founded in 1851.

Alex Groza Sets New Conference Scoring Record Against Georgia

As a result of hitting 13 shots in 27 attempts, for an average of 44.4 percent, Kentucky's Alex Groza established a new Southeastern Conference individual scoring record as he pushed in 38 points against the Georgia Bulldogs in Alumni gym last Monday night before an excited all-student audience.

The huge Hungarian garnered 12 fielders and 14 of 20 free throws for his total in the 33 1/2 minutes that he played.

The big boy from Martin's ferry, Ohio, had 21 markers in the first half of this tilt and when the public address announced the individual scoring at intermission most of the students were sure that he would go on to break Billy Joe Adcock's mark of 36, which the Vanderbilt star just set on Feb. 14 in Nashville against the Mississippi State Maroons.

Lipscomb Head Record Coming into this season, the record was held by Pinky Lipscomb who scored 31 tallies in one game back in 1939. Then Groza tied this mark last Jan. 31 when UK played Vanderbilt in Nashville.

On Feb. 8, the All-American center the Wildcats were down in New Orleans for the Sugar Bowl games, asked the Baron "how do the percentages run?"

"If you make 22 percent of your shots, you lose," replied Rupp. "If you make 23 to 28 percent, you're in for a tight game. If you make 30 percent, you win. Last year we averaged 31.2 percent for 29 games."

The New York Times was founded in 1851.

WILDCAT SCORING FOR SEASON. Table with 3 columns: Player, Games, Scoring. Rows include Team Record (23 wins, one loss), Al Solomon (3 wins, 1 lost), Doug Brown (2 wins, 1 lost), Sidney Neal (2 wins, 1 lost), P. Haagenston (1 lost), Steve Marimes (1 lost).

UK Fencers Beat Vanderbilt U., 10-6

The University fencing team defeated Vanderbilt University, 10-6 here last Saturday afternoon.

Only the foil team participated because Vandy has not opted of sabre men.

The individual scoring for UK were as follows: Charles Legette 3 won, 1 lost; Al Solomon 3 won, 1 lost; Doug Brown 2 won, 1 lost; Sidney Neal 2 won, 1 lost; P. Haagenston 1 lost; Steve Marimes 1 lost.

The next match for the UK fencers will be Mar. 5, when they will meet the University of Cincinnati there.

Long Is Named Head Of Service Fraternity

Dr. N. O. Long, professor of chemistry, has been named state chairman of Alpha Phi Omega, national service fraternity.

The appointment was made by Dean Arno Nowitzki, national president of the organization.

TRACK TEAM TO MEET

All candidates for the University track team are asked to report Monday at 3 p.m. to Coach Don Seaton in the physical education department in Alumni gym.

Equipment will be issued to the eligible members next week.
