

Foreign Student Influx Slower, Book Says

By BOBBIE MASON

More foreign students studied in the United States during 1959-60 than ever before, according to "Open Doors 1960," an annual report by the Institute of International Education.

The report said this year's increase is actually the smallest rise in the last six years, a possible indication that the heavy influx of foreign students is leveling off.

Assistant Dean of Men Ken E. Harper said that UK, in spite of this report, seems to have shown a steady gain in the 15 years that foreign students have been accepted.

"There were 115 foreign students at UK last semester," he said. "This does not include about 75 special short-term students."

Of the foreign students at UK, 65 percent are graduate students.

The 48,486 foreign students in the United States this year came from 141 different countries and political areas and studied at 1,712 institutions in every state of the Union, the District of Columbia, and Puerto Rico.

Canada continued to be the single country sending the largest number of students.

"There are approximately 40 countries represented at UK," Dr. Harper said. "Most of the students are from Indonesia, Latin America, South America, and India."

The favorite field of study for foreign students has been engineering, which claimed 11,279. The humanities, with 9,246, was again second.

At UK the students are scattered in the four main colleges, Engineering, Agriculture, Arts and Sciences, and Education, said Dr. Harper.

The movement of foreign faculty members who came to teach or do research and foreign doctors who served as interns and residents in the United States accelerated last year, according to "Open Doors."

The only decrease in any of the exchange categories surveyed was a 3.9 percent drop in the number of American faculty teaching or conducting research abroad.

There are approximately a dozen foreign faculty members at UK, according to Dr. Harper.

"Open Doors" reported that the 2,539 foreign faculty members affiliated with 278 U. S. colleges and universities this year represent a 31 percent increase over last year's figures.

The largest group—1,146—was in the natural and

Student Picnic Over, Governor Tells PTA

"The time is coming when all will have to work to stay in school," Gov. Bert Combs said Tuesday night.

The governor spoke at a banquet opening a three-day leadership conference sponsored by the Kentucky Congress of Parents and Teachers.

Gov. Combs said "the picnic is over" for students who look at Kentucky's colleges and universities for one "final youthful fling."

He explained that the number of students and the cost per student have risen.

"In a very short time there may be no room in colleges for young people who take their responsibilities lightly."

The governor pointed out that salary increases for teachers will bring Kentucky from 49th to 38th in the United States by the end of this year, and to 36th by the end of next year.

Combs attributed the "end to neglect" of education in Kentucky to two reasons—the Communist threat to America and the state's need to become economically sound.

"Perhaps Russia has done more to emphasize the crisis in education in the United States and in Kentucky than any other nation," he said.

Combs emphasized that good schools help a state attract the great amount of diversified industry needed to make it economically sound.

He cited the need for support of limited constitutional revision and the approval of the highway bond issue.

Dr. Lyman V. Ginger, dean of the College of Education and program chairman for the conference, also appeared on the banquet program.

Dean Ginger cited three pressing problems in Kentucky education—the quality of teachers, the quality of curriculum, and adequate school facilities.

One out of every eight children this year will have an emergency teacher and one out of four students will have emergency teachers before graduating, he said.

Larger school units are needed to provide a wider curriculum for every student and to give greater help to special students, Dean Ginger added.

He urged that the local PTAs work with school groups to stimulate the development of ability in all children.

Nearly 300 conference delegates were welcomed to UK by Frank D. Peterson, vice president for business administration, and Leo Chamberlain, vice president of the University.

The leadership course is offered annually. Morning and afternoon classes were offered on each of the three days.

A panel discussion on juvenile delinquency and presentation of diplomas closed the conference yesterday.

Dr. Ryland, French Prof, Dies At 59

Dr. Hobart Ryland, 59, professor of French at UK, died Wednesday afternoon at Central Baptist Hospital.

Dr. Ryland suffered a heart attack at his home Tuesday night. The French professor joined the University faculty in 1935 as head of the Romance Language Department. In 1942 he entered the military service.

He wrote numerous books and articles in his field of study and several articles for the Lexington newspapers.

The funeral will be held at 2 p.m. today at the W. R. Millward Southland Chapel.

300 In Television Workshop

Approximately 300 Kentucky school teachers and administrators attended the first University Television Workshop which closes today, according to Dr. O. E. Bissmeyer of the College of Education.

The workshop which opened Monday was designed to teach classroom teachers how to utilize educational television, Dr. Bissmeyer said.

"The purpose of the program is to show the teacher what must be done after the television set is off," he said.

Dr. Bissmeyer is area coordinator for the Midwest Program on Airborne Television Instruction, which sponsored the workshop this week.

Financed by an appropriation Ford Foundation and contributions by private industry, MPATI will begin educational telecasting in September of 1961 for a one year experimental period.

The programs will be beamed into six Midwestern states, including Kentucky, from a plane flying at 23,000 feet over southern Indiana.

The teachers for the educational television experiment are being chosen this summer. One Kentucky teacher, John E. Dickey of Valley Station, was among the first 16 teachers selected last week.

The one-year experimental phase will be concluded in June of 1962, Dr. Bissmeyer explained. If it proves successful, it may serve as a pilot project for similar regional undertakings in other sections of the country, he said.

During the workshop this past week, teachers participated in panel discussions concerning such subjects as the purpose and use of television in school programs, plans for airborne telecasting, and cost of equipment needed by the school.

Schools participating in the MPATI experiment must equip themselves at their own expense and participation is on a voluntary basis.

Consultants for the program this week were Mrs. Elizabeth Marshall, assistant director of radio and television in the Chicago public schools, and Miss Vera W. Hopping, director of elementary instruction in the Indianapolis public schools.

Dr. Charles E. Snow, UK professor of anthropology, will conduct a live telecast of a college class at 1:30 p.m. today from WLEX-TV. Dr. Snow taught the anthropology class by television during the past school year.

Local television stations and the Department of Radio, Films, and Television at UK demonstrated the use of television equipment during the workshop.

New Social Editor Comments On Parties

By HAP CAWOOD

The campus has been perforated with parties the past month, and Lambda Chi is holding a party tomorrow night. There is talk of someone holding a party next month.

The Student Union Cafeteria workers held a party last Tuesday celebrating tax exemption. Fee slips, pennies, and refreshments were served.

The visiting PTA members held a sock hop in the ditch in front of Buell Armory. An impromptu affair, milk was served.

Jazz enthusiasts can now bring their record albums or listen to furnished music in the SUB Music Room 2-4 p.m. Mondays.

The UK Philosophy Department is holding a tent revival tonight on Stoll Field. Conferences will be held afterwards to discuss the problem of whether the sky is big or medium-sized.

Happy birthday, Gurney.

Professor Discusses Democratic Convention

By CAROLE MARTIN

"One thing the Democratic National Convention proved is the lack of importance in demonstrations."

Dr. Malcolm E. Jewell, instructor in political science, said that from his visit to the convention in Los Angeles last week he learned that the demonstrations serve only to stir up interest for visitors and those citizens watching the proceedings on television.

A "Convention Fellow," Dr. Jewell attended the convention under the sponsorship of the Citizenship Clearing House of New York and Eagleton Institute of Rutgers University.

The purpose of sending the fellows, he explained, is to afford them a first hand knowledge of practical politics. Dr. Jewell studied the convention process and especially the working of the Kentucky delegation.

Dr. Jewell said that although there were probably some members of the Kentucky delegation who were in favor of revising the civil rights plank of the platform, there seemed to be little or no interest on the part of the delegation in signing the minority report.

"The (Kentucky) delegation was very skillfully conducted with a minimum of pressure and friction, seemingly a deliberate attempt to avoid splits in factions," the political science professor continued.

The Kentucky delegation traditionally votes by unit rule, but this year by-passed that action.

Dr. Jewell felt that the state delegation did not play a major role in the convention this year, but that they were quite pleased with the vice presidential choice and were very optimistic about a Kennedy-Johnson ticket carrying the Blue Grass State.

"After this convention," Dr. Jewell offered, "I think there will be more of an attempt to make the convention less unwieldy." There were close to 3,000 people on the floor of the Sports Arena, not all delegates, and it was near impossible for large delegations, such as Pennsylvania's with close to 160 delegates and alternates, to hold floor caucuses."

Although the demonstrations took up more than the time allotted for them and in some cases were little spectaculars in themselves, Dr. Jewell said, they had little effect on the delegates, most of whom had made up their minds before the candidates were placed in nomination.

Dr. Jewell allowed that the Kennedy organization was very skillfully handled, "probably the best organized campaign we have seen in a long time and probably will be the best organized this fall."

"The men who organized Mr. Kennedy's campaign were not old pros when they started, but became such when they won," he added.

To prove the point of a tightly knit organization Dr. Jewell explained that the Kennedy workers had two women whose sole jobs were to keep track of the members of the Kennedy entourage. In theory any one person could be found within minutes. "One thing I did not realize

Trustees Grant Dr. Clark Leave

The UK board of trustees has granted Dr. Thomas D. Clark, head of the History Department, a semester's leave to serve as visiting professor at the University of Wisconsin.

Dr. Clark will spend the spring semester of 1961 lecturing from his most recent book, "Frontier America."

Dr. Carl B. Cone, professor of history, will be acting head of the department during Dr. Clark's absence.

The executive committee also accepted gifts to the University before attending the conventions was that they could make or break men on the state level. Neither California's Gov. Brown nor New Jersey's Meyner came out ahead," Dr. Jewell said.

"The things I learned while attending the convention were more complicated than just observing the highlights, but I thought Senator McCarthy's speech in nominating Adlai Stevenson was one of the best that week and the senator came away with increased prestige. Jack Kennedy's acceptance speech was also well received."

When asked if he thought there was any possibility of a rigged convention, Dr. Jewell said that there was such a thing as placing sympathetic men in key positions, but that was common practice not rigging.

The convention can be open when there are no front running candidates, but it is a mistake to read Machiavellian tactics into these things, Dr. Jewell stated.

The UK instructor said he didn't know that as a delegate you learn as much, but that he certainly would like to be one.

Episcopal Chaplain Discusses Ethics

Man—not God—is the focal point of Reinhold Niebuhr's teachings.

This observation was made Monday night by the Rev. Charles Lawrence, UK Episcopal chaplain, at an All-Campus Forum currently concerned with "Religious Voices of Our Day."

"Niebuhr's field is Ethics," Mr. Lawrence said, "but his perspective of man's relationship to God has made people call him a theologian. Niebuhr believes man acts under the influence of sin. He has little faith in sanctification, but recently he has put more emphasis on the grace of God."

The speaker said Niebuhr "represents a synthesis between Luther and Marx talking to one another in an industrial society."

However, Niebuhr teaches "we must not take Marx's solution of social problems only, or take Luther's of them and become quietists."

He said Niebuhr believes there is "no corrective in Communism, because Communism subverts the Christian doctrine of man, as a free and finite spirit."

"In fact," Mr. Lawrence said, "he thinks Marxism is a profound threat."

"The hard fact of sin in the human heart lies at the heart of his doctrine," Mr. Lawrence said. Niebuhr believes man is especially guilty of pride and sensuality. By sensuality he lowers himself to an animal level, and by pride he seeks "to be as God," which is an "inversion of our status" as human beings.

Niebuhr, Mr. Lawrence said, is physical sciences, a 26.4 percent increase over those in these fields last year. More than half of the 1,777 U.S. faculty members abroad this year continued to concentrate in Europe, largely England.

These findings were disclosed in the sixth edition of "Open Doors," IIE's annual statistical report on educational exchange.

The 41-year-old Institute is the world's oldest and largest multinational exchange organization which itself administers programs involving more than 6,000 American and foreign persons each year.

Governor Combs To Address Convocation

Gov. Bert T. Combs will speak at a convocation in Memorial Hall at 10:30 a.m., Monday. The convocation was originally scheduled for Monday, Aug. 1.

He will discuss a proposed convention for the limited revision of the Kentucky constitution.

Speaking on the same subject at another convocation earlier this summer, UK President Frank

G. Dickey said that if the constitution is not revised the University "will be set back a half century."

Kentucky school teachers attending a series of courses on the teaching of citizenship will be special guests at the convocation.

Prof. J. E. Reeves, associate professor of political science, will be chairman of the program. Fourth hour classes (10:30-11:30) will be dismissed so that students can attend the program.
