Air Raid on the rise

Flock of students: Attendance figures show football games are growing in popularity

By Travis Feldhaus CONTRIBUTING WRITER

If a recent report from the UK Athletics is any indication, students are trading three-point shots and dunks for touchdown passes and fake field goals. From the 1994-95 season to the 1996-97 season, student attendance for men's basketball dropped steadily before leveling off during the 1997-98 season.

During the 1995-96 season, average student attendance at UK basketball games dropped 43 percent. Also, the 1996-97 average basketball attendance dropped another 30 percent.

Meanwhile, the average student attendance for football games dropped sharply in 1996 but rebounded considerably soon after.

After a 33 percent decline in student attendance at football games in 1996, the average student attendance increased 41 percent in 1997 with the arrival of Coach Hal Mumme, Mumme's his high-octane offense and the emergence of former quarterback

Tim Couch.

The average football student attendance increased by nearly 2 percent in 1998, a season in which UK made its first bowl appearance since 1993.

Sophomore fullback Derek Homer said student attendance at the games helps the team.

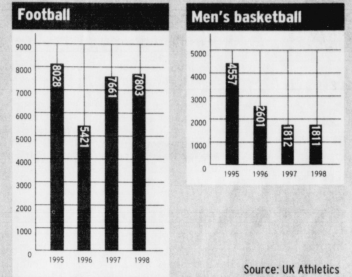

"It helps a lot when we hear all the students out there during the games," Homer said. "It's great to have all the other fans cheering for us, but when you have all those students supporting us in the stands, it means a little extra."

Powell calls for effort to save children

Build kids, not jails: Former chairman of Joint Chiefs brings advice to Rupp crowd

STAFF REPORT

Retired Gen. Colin Powell came to Rupp Arena last Thursday to talk about "The American Dream," and a better world for our children.

"Let's stop building jails and get back to building our children."

Children's futures was the theme of Powell's speech, which focused on deprived and misled children.

"(Children in the United States) need to have better things to do after school than to sit at home and watch 'Jerry Springer,'" he said. "We're working with the government to get more health care."

Powell noted that LensCrafters has offered one million free eye exams and eye glasses for children who cannot afford them. He said he is serious about reversing the current situation our children face.

"Mentors, plus safe places for our children to go equals community," he said, "and children need a sense of community."

He said the best part of his book, My American Journey, was how he told about the American dream story of community, family and a value system.

"Believe in God, hard work and education, and believe in yourself. These are universal ideas of the American dream."

Powell was one of 12 speakers who were part of the Peter Lowe International "The Success Authority" Conference. The organization seeks to make a positive impact on society by helping people of all backgrounds realize their potential for success.

The group provided a daylong seminar with several speakers, including Dick Vitale, Zig Ziglar, Larry King (via satellite), and former president and first lady George and Barbara Bush.

Audiences at both FirstStar Center in Cincinnati and in Lexington saw all speakers through a simulcast.

Most support NATO campaign

A solid majority: LCC students' poll shows Clinton, others on the slide

By Lisa L. Greg STAFF WRITER

Central Kentuckians, especially those in Fayette County, support the U.S. policy of leading NATO in the bombing campaign against Yugoslavia, according to a poll conducted by Lexington Community College students.

Forty-eight percent of frequent voters surveyed in Fayette and surrounding counties back the current effort, although they do not support the possible re-enactment of the draft.

LCC students helped poll 1,377 central Kentuckians from April 7 to 16. Those surveyed appeared on a list of frequent voters. Usually they had voted at least six times in the last 12 elections.

Although the U.S. Armed Forces have failed to meet its enlistment goals, 65 percent of those surveyed do not want to see the return of the draft.

"It seems that people would rather spend their money to help the military," said Tim Cantrell, a political science professor at LCC who has his students conduct the public survey each semester.

Cantrell's poll results supported this statement. In response to his questions about military budget cuts, 56 percent of those surveyed agreed that military spending should be increased.

Those polled were asked 13 questions dealing with their political views from international to local issues.

With the proposal to increase the Lexington-Fayette Urban-County Council terms from two to four years, the public is undecided with an equal split.

Although Cantrell doesn't consider the poll to be scientific, he has found that in the last 11 years, the results have been pretty accurate.

"Since we do poll frequent voters, we find that our results match closely with election turnouts," Cantrell said.

The poll also becomes an important teaching tool for the classroom.

Cantrell's students are able to examine the poll results and ponder the reasons behind them. In another poll by Cantrell, Clinton's ratings as an outstanding president have dropped 5 percent since last fall.

Cantrell's students linked the results to his involvement with Kosovo and the impeachment trial.

Cantrell said he believes polling also helps his students develop their political awareness, and see how informed the public may or may not be about current issues.

"I found most of the people that I talked to were informed especially about the NATO situation," said Michael Tims, a freshman at LCC.

Tims, who is taking a political science course for the first time, said he found the assignment enjoyable.

"I was having great political discussions with complete strangers."

Of those polled, 57 percent identified themselves as Democrats while 38 percent are affiliated with the Republican party. The other 5 percent chose different affiliations.

A permanent makeup trend

Older, younger people turning to cosmetic surgery for efficiency, beauty reasons

By Shauna Horn CONTRIBUTING WRITER

There are those with dolphins on their hips, the Cheshire cat on their stomachs and even butterflies on their backsides.

Some people have even decided to tattoo their makeup on.

Dermal micropigmentation, or permanent cosmetic makeup, is a procedure that's been around for years. The technique involves applying tiny insertions of natural pigment to the top layer of skin.

Peggy Wells, an employee at the Cosmetic Surgery Center, performs these procedures and says they are safe and can be used for many different effects.

Cosmetic possibilities include darkening eyebrows, upper and lower eyeliner, lip liner and full lipstick. Other procedures, such as scar camouflage, cleft lip pigmentation, areola restoration and vitiligo correction, are more reconstructive uses.

"I'm really busy and need to be able to get up and go. Being a doctor and having two kids, it's just easier," said Jennie Mangun, a pediatrician from Indianapolis.

School shooting victims mourned

LITTLETON, Colo. — Teacher William "Dave" Sanders, killed in the Columbine High School massacre, was mourned yesterday by 2,500 people. Elsewhere, mourners remembered Cassie Bernall, the 17-year-old who professed her love of God just before she was shot dead, and Lauren Townsend, an 18-year-old honor student and captain of the volleyball team. A funeral was to be held later yesterday for Daniel Rohrbough, the 15-year-old boy shot while holding an exit door open for fleeing students.

SUPPORT TIBET: Hollywood star Richard Gere offered his support to a Tibetan hunger strike in Geneva Sunday and blasted China for sidestepping scrutiny of its human rights record. Gere, a prominent campaigner against Chinese rule in Tibet, visited three hunger strikers camping on a patch of grass outside the United Nations building.

Yugoslavia may OK peace pact

BELGRADE, Yugoslavia — Yugoslavia is ready to accept a peace deal calling for a U.N. presence, Deputy Premier Vuk Draskovic said yesterday. Although it was unclear if Draskovic was expressing President Slobodan Milosevic's views, his comments could represent a major step toward meeting conditions set down by NATO for ending the five-week air campaign. In a reflection of the political turmoil in Belgrade, the Yugoslav army later yesterday took over private television station Studio B, which aired Draskovic's initial comments.

Red Cross sees three U.S. POWs

BELGRADE, Yugoslavia — Nearly a month after Yugoslav forces captured three U.S. soldiers, the Red Cross was allowed to see them. International Committee of the Red Cross chief Cornelio Sommaruga gave no information about the soldiers' condition, but said a Red Cross doctor would visit the three tomorrow. After meeting Yugoslav President Slobodan Milosevic, though, he expressed pessimism that they would be freed before the war ends.

Chernobyl anniversary marked

KIEV, Ukraine — As Ukraine marked the 13th anniversary yesterday of the Chernobyl nuclear accident, one of the country's nuclear reactors shut down by mistake and another was taken offline for scheduled repairs. Nearly 400,000 adults and 1.1 million children are entitled to government aid for Chernobyl-related health problems.

FDA OKs fat-blocking diet drug

WASHINGTON — The Food and Drug Administration yesterday approved Xenical, a pill that blocks absorption of almost a third of the fat that people eat. Hoffman-La Roche Inc. first sought to sell the drug 2 1/2 years ago but it was delayed over questions about whether the new diet pill might contribute to breast cancer. But the FDA ultimately decided the pill was safe, approving it by prescription for the seriously obese.

G-7 members seek to boost growth

WASHINGTON — The Clinton administration, concerned about a soaring U.S. trade deficit, pressured Japan and major European allies yesterday to accelerate efforts to ensure a fragile global economic recovery remains on track. U.S. Treasury Secretary Robert Rubin enlisted the support of Federal Reserve Chairman Alan Greenspan to drive that point home during meetings with their counterparts from the world's seven largest industrial countries. The G-7 includes the United States, Japan, Germany, France, Britain, Italy and Canada.

NASDAQ jumps 61.44; Dow up

NEW YORK — Renewed strength in technology shares pushed the NASDAQ composite index to a record high yesterday, extending a rebound from last Monday's 5.6 percent plunge. Blue-chip stocks ended moderately higher. The NASDAQ was up 61.44 at 2,652.13, its first close above 2,600. The Dow Jones industrial average was up 29.92 at 10,715.59, within 9 points of a new high. On the NYSE, losers led gainers 1,583-1,407.

Redskins sale agreement reached

ASHBURN, Va. — Daniel Snyder, a communications executive, reached an agreement yesterday with trustees of Jack Kent Cooke's estate to buy the Washington Redskins for $800 million. The sale, which must be approved by NFL owners, includes Jack Kent Cooke Stadium. It would be a record price for a North American sports franchise. Coach Norv Turner and general manager Charley Casserly will keep their jobs if the deal goes through.

Academy wins Oscar tix battle

HOLLYWOOD — Oscar tickets really are "not for sale" and "nontransferable" — at least that's what a California judge has ruled. Superior Court Judge David Horowitz ruled last week in favor of the Academy of Motion Picture Arts & Sciences in a dispute with New York ticket broker Rey Olsen and his company, World Sports Group, regarding the sale of Oscar tickets.

Audiences killing Kenny

NEW YORK — The young males who made "South Park" a phenomenon last year have started to abandon the Comedy Central series, causing the show's ratings to plummet by a dizzying 46 percent in cable homes. For the first three weeks of the new season (April 7, 14 and 21 at 10 p.m.), "South Park" is averaging a 3.8 rating in cable homes. For the similar three weeks in 1998, the show averaged a 7.0 rating.

YMCA, UK enter into partnership

By Mark Vanderhoff
CAMPUS EDITOR

A joint venture between UK and the High Street YMCA will expand fitness possibilities for students.

"Student rates are going to be lower as a result of the University putting up a half million dollars to allow more than 400 students to use the YMCA at a reduced rate," President Charles Wethington said during a news conference yesterday.

Starting next fall, UK students will only have to pay $12.50 per month to take advantage of exercise equipment, a basketball gym, racquetball court, pool and indoor walking track, among many other features, said Jan Brucato, vice president for YMCA of Central Kentucky.

"There is already 250 students who are members here," Wethington said. "This branch of the YMCA is very close to campus."

The venture is part of UK's plan to renovate the Seaton Center and build a new fitness facility for students, Wethington said.

By providing students with inexpensive access to a facility as close as High Street, UK will be able to satisfy the student demand for more recreation opportunities better, Wethington said.

The deal benefits the YMCA, too, he said.

"The YMCA is improving their facilities and is in the middle of a major capital campaign," he said.

UK's need for additional recreational facilities and the YMCA's own efforts to expand came about at the same time, said Dan Hecker, president and CEO of YMCA of Central Kentucky.

"We made a strategic alliance with the college, being so close to each other and seeing that we both have needs," he said.

The High Street YMCA, built in the '50s and '60s, has outgrown itself, Brucato said.

YMCA of Central Kentucky will invest $1 million in the High Street building to create more space and renovate the current facilities, she said.

The capital campaign will also raise money for new YMCA's in northern Lexington and at Beaumont Center, she said.

The High Street YMCA also offers several recreational fitness programs.

YMCA members receive a discount on the costs of classes and sessions such as scuba diving, shoin, tai-chi, karate, aerobics and hip hop aerobics.

"We have a variety of areas most students will appreciate," Brucato said.

“Each response would be a situational response based on the particular incident.”

— Rebecca Langston, UK Police chief

UK does have a plan for disaster

Keeping a vigilant eye out: Campus police, University officials say they'd rally all the troops in the event of a tragedy like Littleton

By Danah Cressy
CONTRIBUTING WRITER

The recent shootings and deaths at Columbine High School in Colorado have put worry and concern into the minds of many everywhere, and at UK as well.

Although UK Police Chief Rebecca Langston said the University has not received many threats over the last several years, that doesn't mean they don't occur.

In fact, the circulation desk at the William T. Young Library received a threatening phone call Sunday night.

“It was a phone threat, but it wasn't a specific phone threat,” Langston said. She refused further comment, saying police are continuing an investigation.

The University has established a protection plan known as the UK Campus-Wide Emergency Response Plan.

The plan, which was completed in the fall, includes every part of the campus, including the stadium.

And no one person on campus runs the program.

“Every component across campus is involved,” Langston said.

UK Police handles all calls and responds accordingly, she said.

Although there are criteria for determining when the plan is carried out, Langston said each response is based on the situation at hand.

“Each response would be a situational response based on the particular incident,” Langston said.

“We would notify the Lexington Police Department and the Lexington Fire Department and handle it depending on how bad the situation was. We would also notify any outside help if necessary.”

Joe Burch, vice president for University Relations, said the police chief would be the person making the decisions in the event of a tragedy like the one in Colorado, as well as a tornado, chemical spill or fire.

“We would be seeking assistance from local law officials as well,” Burch said. “The University administration would be involved if the situation was long-term, but mainly would be making decisions to assist students and/or the police in any way.”

Belle sidelined with a hole in system

ASSOCIATED PRESS

LOUISVILLE — A flooded hull didn't sideline the Belle of Louisville from its Derby-week race, but a tiny hole in the boiler system will.

The Belle will remain dockside for the Great Steamboat Race because of the mechanical flaw, but another riverfront mainstay will take its place Wednesday.

The Spirit of Jefferson will carry the community's banner against the Belle's rival, the Delta Queen, race organizers announced Sunday.

Mark Doty, the Spirit's captain, said he was ready for the challenge.

“My boat is in tiptop shape,” said Doty, who competed in plenty of steamboat races as a former Belle crew member.

The Belle will miss the race because of a pinhole underectable to the eye that was discovered recently in the ship's boiler system.

Mike Fitzgerald, the Belle's captain, said the slight flaw probably goes all the way back to when the steel was manufactured years ago.

“This is something that needs to be suitably repaired so it doesn't lead to more problems down the road,” he said. “It is repairable, it's just coming up with the right process for repair.”

Fitzgerald said he was comfortable with the decision to have the Belle sit out this year's race against its paddle-wheeling rival.

“We have a mechanical problem, and every year we've had the steamboat race we've always put safety first and winning second,” he said. “I feel good that we're doing the right thing that this boat is going to be properly repaired, and she'll be back out there.”

Not even the Belle's partial sinking into the Ohio River in August 1997 had kept it from competing in the race. A former crew member, Brandon Callan, was convicted of causing the sinking and faces up to 20 years in prison.

The ship was repaired in time to win last year's steamboat race, giving it 17 wins to the Delta Queen's 16. Two other boats also have won.

The Delta Queen towers over the Belle and will have an even bigger size advantage against the Spirit of Jefferson. The Spirit is 118 feet long and 32 feet wide; the Belle is 200 feet long and about 46 feet wide, Jewell said.

The Spirit is a diesel-powered, twin-engine excursion boat built in 1963 and purchased by Jefferson County in 1985. The Spirit has the charm of an authentic steamboat with modern touches, like two 42-inch propellers.

TATTOO

She was on her second visit to the center for her lips, but has also had her eyebrows and upper and lower eyeliner done.

Wells says the procedure is simple.

“It enhances what you already have or don't have.”

So you're wondering how much something like this costs? Eyeliner is $250, lips are $350 and eyebrows are $200-$300, depending on the extent of work.

Of course, there are advantages and disadvantages. As with any procedure of this nature, Wells says there has to be a period of healing.

Wells' post-care manual says you should see final results in about two weeks, but desired results may take more than one application. It also says the tattoos may scab, be sore or bruise.

Pam Woodrum, a registered nurse and health educator for UK, suggests some concerns for those considering the procedure.

“Remember if tattoos are removed, not all can be taken off and can cause possible scarring,” Woodrum said.

She also suggests the following guidelines:

- Ask for certification and what experience the tattooist has.

- See pictures of their work and, if possible, talk to someone who's had it done.

- Make sure the needles are autoclaved and changed with each client.

- Make sure gloves are changed with each client.

- Know how to take care of the area afterwards.

- Make sure a new container of ink is used each time.

- Know they are permanent and think about what age might do to them.

Wells said the age group she sees most is 45 and up. Her oldest client is 92, and her youngest was a young girl in high school.

Wells recalls the young girl to be her most rewarding experience, when she restored pigment to her lip after reconstructive surgery on a cleft palate.

“Those are the things that make the job so rewarding. I help people feel better about themselves,” Wells said.

But what do students here at UK think about it? When asked if they would have permanent makeup, most said no because of safety issues or the principle behind it.

“I wouldn't do it because it just seems too dangerous to tattoo places on your face, like your eyelids,” said Bridget Castle, a biology junior.

“I am appalled at the lengths to which women go to for beauty,” said Gwen McGolden, a merchandising, apparel and textiles junior. “I personally wouldn't do it, because beauty truly is more than skin deep.”

contributed to the increased average attendance at football games the last two seasons.

“I think the higher attendance figures are due in large part to the higher quality of the football program,” he said. “It's no secret that people are more likely to come out and support a successful football team rather than a team lacking in success, and the numbers reflect that.”

Several events, such as cookouts and contests, were held before UK home football games during the 1998 season to promote the games and get students involved.

As for basketball, Johnson said the athletics is looking into the ticket distribution procedures to help boost student attendance.

At the final student lottery in February, the athletics department distributed questionnaires asking for student input regarding the ticket distribution for men's basketball. Johnson said the students indicated a desire for a change of time and day of the lottery and also the site of the lottery.

“We plan to rearrange the ticket distribution by addressing the time and day issue and location of the distribution,” Johnson said.

Johnson said the lottery format will likely remain in place next season.

Attendance figures for the entire 1998-99 basketball season were not available.

Tennis bows in quarterfinals

Tournament time: Both the men's and women's tennis teams fail to make semifinals

By Michael Heppermann
ASSISTANT SPORTSDAILY EDITOR

Both the UK men's and women's tennis teams departed from the Southeastern Conference Tournament in the quarterfinals round of a tournament that saw the No. 1 seeds check out early.

The sixth-seeded UK women lost to third seed and eventual champion Ole Miss 5-0 on Friday.

The Cats won only one set, courtesy of senior Christy Sigurski, who beat Ivona Mihailova 9-5 in the first set of her match. But Sigurski lost the next two 6-3, 6-0. The rest of the UK squad lost in straight sets.

Despite the lopsided loss, Head Coach Mark Guibreau remained positive.

"You have to give Ole Miss all the credit in the world. That (performance) was unbelievable," he said. "They played really, really well. But I'm proud of our team and the direction we're heading."

The women reached the second round by beating Auburn 5-3 on Thursday. Kelly Brown, Carolina Mayorga, Brooke Skeen and Shannon Stafford picked up singles wins for the Cats and Mayorga and Stafford teamed up to earn an 8-2 doubles win.

The eighth-ranked Runnin' Rebels reached the championship game by defeating second-seeded Georgia.

That win meant they faced Florida, the No. 1 seed and the No. 1-ranked team in the country. This season marked the fourth consecutive unblemished regular season for the Gators, and UF was shooting for its 17th conference title in 20 years.

But Ole Miss proved it had other plans by beating UF 5-4. The No. 3 doubles team of Ivona and Irena Mihailova clinched the win on the sixth match point.

Ole Miss Head Coach Jerry Montgomery was elated.

"I really want to hand it to my No. 3 doubles team, they felt the weight of the world, and they showed tremendous poise and character to close it out."

On the men's side, No. 3 seed Georgia knocked out UK's men on Friday with a 4-3 win. The Cats went up 1-0 after winning the doubles point, but lost four of six singles matches to exit early.

The Cats reached the quarterfinals by beating Arkansas 4-1 on Thursday, but were overmatched by the Bulldogs, which eventually reached the championship game.

In the final game, Georgia faced a hungry LSU team that won the tournament last year over the Bulldogs and was looking for its second straight title after knocking out top-seeded Ole Miss.

Not only did the fourth-seeded Tigers beat Georgia for the second straight year, they beat them by the same score: 4-3. Despite their win, LSU had to share the conference championship with Georgia after both schools tied in points accumulated during the regular season and the league tournament.

Both UK squads now await the NCAA Tournament, which begins May 8 for the women and May 14 for the men.

Both teams are assured of a spot in the dance, as the women finished ranked 20th in the nation with a 15-9 record and the men closed their season ranked 18th in the country with a 15-9 record.

Until then, men's Head Coach Dennis Emery can celebrate being named SEC Coach of the Year just before the tournament started.

This season marked the second time in his 15-year stint at UK that he earned the award. The Cats finished 14 spots higher in the polls than what they started the year, thanks in part to upset wins over No. 11 South Carolina, No. 9 Alabama and No. 2 Illinois.

"This is a great honor," Emery said. "(Assistant Coach) Ford Lankford has done a great job this year, and I consider this an award for both of us."

'Comeback John' will call it quits

ASSOCIATED PRESS

DENVER — Boasting two recently minted Super Bowl rings as well as the game's MVP award, John Elway is going out on top, much like Michael Jordan did four months earlier.

Elway, the master of improvisation and the late-game comeback, is leaving football after 16 NFL seasons.

Elway all but announced his retirement Saturday in an interview with Denver TV station KCNC in Pebble Beach, Calif., where he was playing in a golf tournament.

"For so many years, everything in my family has revolved around me. It's time for that to change," the 38-year-old quarterback said. "I really accomplished everything I wanted to. There's no real upside to coming back."

Later in the day, Elway told The Associated Press: "I know everybody wants to know, but I'm not going to talk about it right now. There'll be an announcement next week. That's all I have to say about it for now."

Sources close to Elway, speaking on condition of anonymity, said he has told friends he is leaving the game.

Elway reportedly considered announcing his decision two weeks ago, but owner Pat Bowlen was in Australia promoting the Broncos' preseason game there.

"We're shooting for a midweek press conference, most likely Wednesday," Broncos spokesman Jim Sacco said Sunday night.

While Elway earned his second straight Super Bowl title and the game's MVP honor last January with a 34-19 win over Atlanta, he missed all or part of six games with hamstring, back and rib injuries.

Denver Broncos quarterback John Elway will announce his retirement later this week. The soon-to-be Hall of Famer was known as the comeback king and has won two Super Bowl rings.

Couch survives first few days in Cleveland camp

ASSOCIATED PRESS

BEREA, Ohio — The first-day jitters didn't last. "I felt much more relaxed out there," said Tim Couch, the No. 1 overall pick in the 1999 NFL draft, after tossing passes Sunday in the third and closing day of a Cleveland Browns mini camp.

"I started out getting frustrated trying to pick up a new offense and stuff, but as time went on I really started getting comfortable," the former UK quarterback said.

"Today things started to click for me. I was making my reads and getting in and out of the huddle quick. I just had a better grasp of everything."

Coach Chris Palmer agreed with Couch's self-assessment Sunday.

"I thought he was much more relaxed," Palmer said.

"He threw one ball up the seam where everybody went ooh and aah. He's showing signs of improvement."

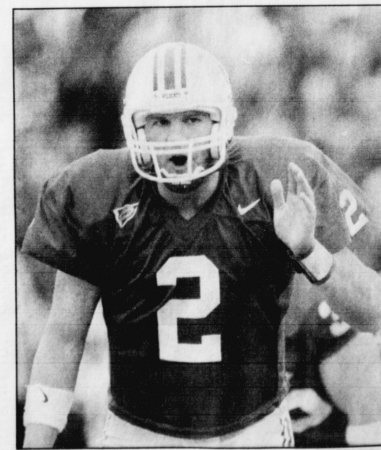

Couch also showed enthusiasm on one pass he had batted back at him by a defensive lineman. Couch battled a couple of other giant linemen for the ball.

"I've been pleased with our run game. Our people up front are doing a nice job there. And I thought the passing game showed little signs of improvement."

Couch will go home to Kentucky with considerably more luggage.

"I'm taking all the films from these three days back home," Couch said.

"I'm going to study them and now I'll actually know what I'm seeing. I'll see what I am doing wrong and just learn my assignments better."

Former UK star Tim Couch participated in a three-day mini-camp over the weekend for his new team, the NFL's expansion Cleveland Browns.

THEATER REVIEW

Memorable performances

Ahoy mates: Pirates of Penzance hits all the right notes to close out the UK Department of Theatre's year of shows

By Jim Scott
SENIOR STAFF CRITIC

My undergraduate degree is in theater, and we have an old saying about music majors. Undoubtedly, they have a similar one about theater majors.

Combined, the saying would go something like this: Music majors can't act, and theater majors can't sing.

It's not true, of course, but as generalizations go, it has its points.

You can't expect an excellent carpenter to lay bricks with equal skill. Hairdressers aren't tailors and bartenders aren't chefs.

So when UK's Pirates of Penzance opened, there was no telling what kind of voices would take the stage. Gilbert and Sullivan's Pirates is known as "light" opera, but that doesn't make it any easier to hit the high notes.

Some may only know UK for loser decisions like plus-minus grading, but the College of Fine Arts breaks with University tradition and does something clever. Pirates is cooperative production presented by UK Theatre and UK Opera Theatre. The result is something special.

It is possible, perhaps even likely, that a better musical production has been mounted in the Guignol Theatre. But I've never seen one.

Pirates is seamless, a triumph. Director

Russell Henderson is blessed with a multi-talented cast and crew. The technical elements of production blend delightfully with a series of colorful performances.

Three of the main roles are doublecast, so you may see different faces depending on which night you go. The ones I saw were memorable. Judson Perry plays the young pirate Frederic, who seeks to mend his ways and go straight. Perry is vocally superb, and also brings out Frederic's noble naiveté with comic flourish. Perry seems at ease on stage, able to take focus or give it as the moment demands.

Michael Turay is equally strong as the Pirate King. Dashing yet deceitful, Turay makes the Pirate King both lovable and malevolent. And here is one guy who can hit the low notes.

Make way for Brad Stephenson as Major General Stanley. Stephenson has fun with the foppish Stanley and so do we. And again, the vocals are of high quality instead of merely adequate.

Speaking of vocals, Hadley Combs shows us how in her role as Mabel, Major General Stanley's prettiest daughter. Combs has rocked the Guignol many times before, but the operatic style of Pirates gives her a chance to spread her wings a bit. At one point, Henderson sends Combs downstage to play "dueling oboes" with flutist Jana Pope in the orchestra pit. When the song ended, the opening night audience gave Combs a rousing ovation.

Gion A. DeFrancesco's scenery and lighting design has just the right balance between cartoon and gothic adventure.

In the first act his set has a myriad of levels, among the best-designed sets I have seen.

The atmospheric moonlit chapel of the second act is almost a letdown by comparison. DeFrancesco's playful use of lighting works well in both acts, particularly the second.

Nelson Fields' costume design is another success story. The garish pirate costumes and the policemen's garb are the most engaging spectacles.

Conductor Joseph Judge directs a highly competent orchestra. University theater is not known for flawless orchestral accompaniment, but on opening night, there was not a sour note to be heard.

Judge and Musical Director Everett McCorvey have nailed down the timing and temperament of the production's many moods.

UK's Pirates is more than "university theater." In this show, the theater majors sing and the music majors act.

This is a professional production, combining impressive talent with polished direction to achieve fine art.

Lovers of excellent musical theater were truly blessed by this wonderful experience. Pirates was indeed one that stole your heart.

FILM THOUGHTS

'Lover' lacks in quality substance

Two peas in a pod: New film Goodbye, Lover lacks originality in both plot and performance

By Jennifer Sclantarelli
STAFF WRITER

If you like good movies, avoid Goodbye, Lover like the plague.

Thanks to ultimate confusion and ridiculous plot twists, the movie was more a comedy than the noir-esque film it was supposed to be.

The story begins with Sandra (Patricia Arquette), a nymphomaniac. She is having an affair with her husband's brother, Ben (Don Johnson). Ben and his brother, Jake (Dermot Mulroney), work at the same ad agency. Jake is an alcoholic and apparently isn't giving poor Sandra what she needs. So she seeks comfort in Ben.

Ben eventually loses interest in Sandra. He becomes fed up with her constant need for sex (imagine that). Sandra is highly upset over his rejection, so she creates trouble by telling her husband she and Ben have been getting it on all the time and everywhere, including the church organ loft). Jake calls Ben, who is on a weekend getaway with his secretary (Mary-Louise Parker). And then the real story begins.

Ben is thrown off of a balcony by Sandra and Jake. Because Ben isn't married and has no other family, Jake is entitled to his $4 million insurance money. Jake and Sandra pretend to be devastated by Ben's death, but the cynical police detective (Ellen DeGeneres) doesn't buy the act. And the plot thickens...

I won't go into more detail, but rest assured, there's another hour of plot to get through before the credits roll. This movie was terrible. There were way too many plot twists and eccentric characters.

Everyone over-acted with the exception of the suave and seemingly bored Johnson and the annoyed DeGeneres. The characters were contrived along with what little of the story the audience could piece together. There was a subplot concerning a serial killer, called The Doctor because he injects his victims with deadly drugs. He was mentioned once and a while, but there was no reason to complicate a murder plot with a secondary serial killer plot.

The story moved excruciatingly slow. The movie was only about two hours long, but each second seemed like days. I could have watched Titanic three times within the psychological time of Goodbye, Lover, Titanic, for God's sake.

The attempt at actual comedy in this film was pathetic. DeGeneres' usual dry humor didn't work.

Her jokes about life and her naive partner on the case were obvious and tired. She once asked her partner if he was gay and that became a continuous gag throughout the rest of the movie. Her partner responded with paranoia. "Why would you say that? Do I act gay? Do I look gay?" Who cares?

The real humor in the film came from the unrealistic situations and character traits.

Sandra constantly listens to the soundtrack from The Sound of Music. She sings along with Julie Andrews while she pushes a happy couple off a cliff to their death. I've never laughed so hard at a murder before.

Goodbye, Lover had some good actors playing potentially good roles in way too many deplorable plots. The movie would have worked with half the twists and half the character quirks.

Smokin' in the courtroom

WASHINGTON — The Supreme Court agreed yesterday to decide whether the Food and Drug Administration can crack down on cigarette sales to minors.

The court will hear a Clinton administration appeal in which government lawyers say FDA's 1996 decision to start regulating tobacco as a drug was justified by new evidence that the tobacco industry intended its products to feed consumers' nicotine habits.

"Unless this court grants review, an unparalleled opportunity to curb tobacco use by children ... will be lost," the government's appeal said.

A federal appeals court ruled that Congress, not the FDA, has the authority to make the "major policy decision" of how to regulate cigarettes and chewing tobacco. The effect of the lower court's ruling was to leave no FDA role in regulating tobacco products.

IN OUR OPINION

Global domination
NATO has really overstepped its bounds

The new millennium is just around the corner, and we're all looking for ways to improve ourselves and our communities.

Many of us are pledging to do bigger and better things in Y2K. But remember the saying that one person's rights and space ends where another person's begins. It seems as if the member countries of the NATO forgot this adage when it developed its new objectives at NATO's 50th anniversary summit.

Last weekend, the NATO assembly pledged its goals for the year 2000 and beyond. The plans are a major shift from the organization's historic role as Western Europe's defense against the former Soviet Union.

The alliance agreed to a far more expansive agenda that includes combating terrorism; stopping the spread of nuclear, chemical and biological weapons; and policing internal conflicts such as the one in Yugoslavia, even if it means going beyond the borders of its 19 member nations.

Specifically, the NATO leaders (as always, dominated by American interests) want to impose an oil embargo against Serbia (not a member of NATO) by demanding that oil-producing countries (also, non-NATO countries) not to send its oil to Serbia.

OK, stop right there.

That's where the problem begins. NATO leaders believe they have the authority/right/privilege to dictate what happens in countries that are not part of their organization. That is like a sheriff of Town A trying to tell the citizens of Town B how they should behave. Sure, although that sheriff may have the best intentions in the world and heck, they may even be right in what they want to accomplish, things do not operate that way.

Even though NATO officials believe they are justified in making this decision because of an existing United Nations resolution barring the import of weapons and war-related materials, how can NATO possibly dictate what occurs between two countries, neither of which are members of their organization? NATO's intentions are noble, but legally, its methods are faulty.

In the early 19th century, former President James Monroe issued the Monroe Doctrine, after the British invasion in the War of 1812. The doctrine "advised" European nations to recognize the sovereignty of our newly founded country. It gave no promise of meddling in European affairs on behalf of our country.

To avoid using an old cliché, we'll simply say that it's rather hypocritical to demand a promise not to meddle in sovereign governing bodies when we can't uphold the same promise.

Strike that. Not can't. We won't.

I can't dance, but I sure can talk about it

Another morning, another rude awakening by my blasted alarm clock. I stumbled from my bed and hit the power button on my stereo, hoping some music would clear the sleep from my head.

"Do you love me?" the radio screamed out. "Now that I can dance?"

"Are you kidding?" I thought. "I hate everything first thing in the morning! Let me get a shower and have a cup of coffee first. Then maybe we'll talk."

Then, I remembered something. Unlike the faceless crooner who was somewhere doing the Mashed Potato, I cannot dance. I have no rhythm. I have no soul. I have two left feet.

Have you ever seen the movie The Jerk? Steve Martin plays a simple-minded man named Navin Johnson who is raised in a black family. He is also different from his parents and siblings in another significant respect. He can't dance. Try as he might, he's never able to grasp the groove of the hand-clapping, feet-stomping gospel music his family enjoys. One day, he discovers the rhythm in the likes of Frank Sinatra on the radio. But there is no competing Frank Sinatra with Chuck Berry, is there?

I am not saying the ability to dance is race-related. I am simply sharing the background of a classic Steve Martin comedy that makes me wonder what kind of boogey invention (like Navin's "Opti-Grab") I can come up with to earn millions of dollars and compensate for my own lack of talent. I have always been, to be politically correct, dancing impaired. I probably always will be.

My favorite time to dance is when the floor is packed with people. That way, all I have to do is find a cluster of friends, stay with them, move around a little and pretend like I know what I am doing, even though I have no idea what I should be doing.

When party-goers are packed together like sardines, there is little fear of looking like an idiot because there isn't enough room to show how incompetent I truly am.

Eventually, someone will start a conga line, and everyone will link together and mindlessly follow the lead of the person in front of them. That, I can do.

Once, I went line dancing with some girlfriends back home. We chose one of the places where those experienced in the "Boot Scootin' Boogie" could show those who weren't how it was supposed to be done.

No sweat, right? Wrong. Well, OK, there really wasn't any sweat involved, but that's because I wasn't out there long enough to work one up. My futile attempt reminded me, once again, that no amount of expert example was going to make up for my severe coordination deficiency. It took many well-intentioned friends two summers and a huge amount of patience to even teach me the Electric Slide!

At the University Fellows' dinner last November, I met my match: a well-known professor in the honors department (who shall remain nameless, but will probably e-mail me if he reads this). My date and I were wandering the perimeter of the dance floor when we spotted this faculty member and his date.

I teased him about the fact that they weren't dancing, and he said they were waiting for a slower song. Then, quite unexpectedly, he invited me to dance. As we made our way onto the floor, he warned me that he had no soul. I told him it wasn't a problem, seeing as how I had no rhythm. And so, we proceeded to shake it down to "Brick House" — much to the amusement of my date and his.

If the truth be told, I can often be found dancing around my room with the radio at top volume. In fact, when I am in a particularly good mood, I may even lip sync into a non-existent microphone. For the most part, though, I am not big on displaying my lack of talent. Give this twinkle-toes a simple Macarena any day.

I can't do the Mashed Potato. I can't do the twist.

So the question remains, do you love me? Even though I still can't dance?

Bhatia's piece about scoring strikes out

To the editor:

This is in regards to the Manish Bhatia column that everyone is talking about.

I thought you had enough sense about you. I thought maybe you would be smart enough to hold back such an extremist view. Yet now, I look back, and I guess I was dead wrong. Manish, you're a damned fool. Your attempt at an article closely resembled Hitler's Mein Kampf in its mass stereotypes and generalizations. Your belief that all women are a legal form of prostitution was bad enough, but then you had to group them into several "hilarious" categories. Well, Manish, who's laughing now?

It can't be you. You're probably being drowned in phone calls, letters, and other not-so-pleasant encounters with the opposite sex. And Manish, it still looks like you're not getting laid.

I hope you straighten up your act. Maybe you should move to a isolated island way from the masses, or maybe change your name. Maybe you should learn to respect others.

LSU members need to see the real world

To the editor:

It sickens my stomach to see the exotic concerns of some groups. Most recently, I saw that a band of Hollywood stars and Jay Leno are raising money to fight female apartheid in Afghanistan.

Please! The same can be said about UK students parading around against Nike labor laws in a country a world away. Kids are growing up in extreme poverty without parents, hopes and dreams looted from Hollywood, but those stars are thinking about Afghanistan. We have a countless number of abused children, underpaid teachers and homeless people walking around in a schizophrenic daze, but we are campaigning against a multimillion-dollar company that gives job opportunities to impoverished countries in hopes of improving conditions.

It is obvious Americans are drunk off of their own exotic concerns and opinions. Why can't we clean up our own backyard before tackling concerns in another country?

Leftist Student Union members need to spend three weeks in inner city Kingston, Jamaica, like I did while visiting my brother, who works for the Peace Corps. Then you will see what relevant concerns and poor conditions are like.

True concern is when you are a 22-year-old ghetto youth with a burning pain in your gut. The cornmeal porridge you ate the night before was only temporary relief for the stinging that's making you weaker by the hour.

Being unemployed because of an economy that's in shambles, you would give your left hand for a legal job. Hopes of your next meal will have to come from the 9-inch steel nail in your back pocket and a stray tourist. No job, no opportunities, no food, no attention, love or home are true concerns, so find out what true struggle is before you waste more time on your petty concerns.

Are you scared to fight our fight or the big fight? Is the right to live not our primary human right? Maybe you guys should write Phil Knight a thank you note for employing the hungry and urge him to offer job opportunity to other countries that are starving for them.

Don't blame Columbine on weak gun laws

To the editor:

Once again, in light of a gross disregard for human life, people condemn the tools that produced the mildest necessary for a tragedy. In seeking to pin blame for the terrible loss of life at Columbine High School on the weapons used, and thus seeking to restrict further the Second Amendment rights of law-abiding, responsible gun owners nationwide, they do a great disservice to millions of Americans.

Guns have been widely available in America for decades. This country was founded on privately-owned firearms, and guns have been a staple in millions of American homes throughout the years. Yet the gross disregard for human life that has recently infected the nation is particularly because of the young age of the assailants, is a new development.

Why do they seek to blame guns? Why not look instead to a culture that proudly proclaims mankind is nothing more than an evolved ape. Why not look to a culture that says humanity answers only to itself, that right and wrong are relative and culturally defined, and that the sanctity of human life is a misguided, old-fashioned notion?

About one-third of the generation to whom these young killers belong has been destroyed before birth by abortion. The reason? Because they were "inconvenient" for their mothers at that time.

In light of this, why should the shooters believe each human life has intrinsic value, including their own? The culture has destroyed the traditional basis of self-esteem: that each person is uniquely created and therefore valuable. In its place is a mish-mash of "self-esteem" teachings that create a narcissistic generation convinced their feelings mean more than others' lives, and in some cases, that even their lives are less important than getting revenge on those who have mocked them.

We should take a harder look at what we are filling our children's minds with. Twenty years ago, it was no problem for a parent to have a gun in a home. The guns and their accessibility haven't changed nearly as much as the culture. The children raised in that culture have. Where, then, should we look for solutions?

Students, please remember this week: TAKE a few minutes to TAKE teacher evaluations seriously.

We know filling out evaluations is not fun. Many times we ask, "Do they really effect anything?"

YES, THEY DO!

Last year, SGA promoted in the University Senate to include student evaluations of both teaching and advising in the updated Faculty Promotion and Tenure Review Guidelines and teaching portfolio.

What you say partly determines your professor's pay.

REWARD GREAT TEACHING AND GIVE CONSTRUCTIVE CRITICISM TO HELP ALL FACULTY IMPROVE.

For suggestions on improving teaching evaluation forms, e-mail Dr. Bill Maloney, maloney@pop.engr.uky.edu
