LCC appoints new dean of Academic Affairs

Appointee chosen from more than 50 other applicants

By John Wampler
NEWS EDITOR

Lexington Community College has finished its search for a new dean of academic affairs. Leana Revell, previously of San Antonio College, was named to the position two weeks ago, and her appointment will be effective beginning this Monday.

Revell, who comes to LCC with 18 years of experience as a faculty member at San Antonio College, had just recently finished her doctorate in community college leadership at the University of Texas at Austin. She had been looking for a place at which to apply her skills, and set her sights on LCC.

"When the job was offered, I was just delighted to take the invitation," Revell said.

Revell had interviewed with a few other colleges, but she said that she was very impressed with LCC. She liked its connection to UK, and interaction between the two institutions. She also liked how the college paid tremendous attention to detail during its interview process.

more, she said, was the warmth of the faculty and staff at the college.

"There's some wonderful people to work with here at LCC," she said.

Revell was chosen out of more than 50 original applicants for the position. A search committee composed of faculty and administrators eliminated the applicants in a succession of evaluations until there were only two finalists. President Kerley then made the final decision, after making very thorough reference checks and other additional evaluations.

"The deciding factor was that (Revell) had a big picture view as far as community colleges go, and also a good grasp of national issues that concern community colleges," Kerley said. Also, there was the fact that Revell was so enthusiastic about LCC.

"I thought it was a good fit," Kerley said.

As dean of academic affairs, Revell will be responsible for various academic aspects of LCC, such as program review and curriculum coordination, that involve faculty and students in every program and department.

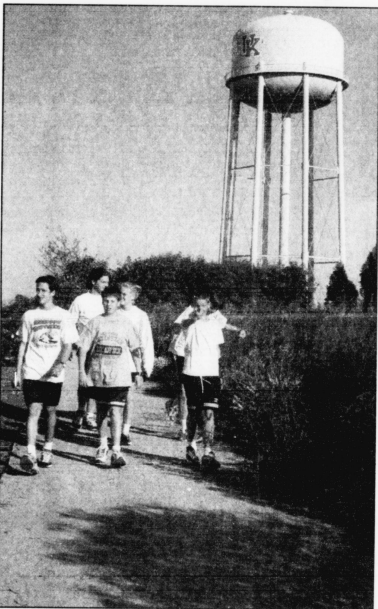

Revell

"I hope to represent all facets of LCC," Revell said.

Plant exchange Saturday

STAFF REPORT

The UK Arboretum will be seeing a lot of action this weekend as it hosts its sixth annual Fall Plant Exchange.

"It's part of the Arboretum's mission to promote horticulture to the community," said Lisa Mormon, president of Friends of the Arboretum, a non-profit auxiliary organization connected with the Arboretum.

Gardeners across Kentucky are invited to the event, which drew over 250 participants last year, Mormon said. She added that even more gardeners are expected to attend this year's event.

"The exchange is open to anything that's garden and landscape related, even tools and supplies," said Kelly Lawson, graduate student in English, and administrative assistant to the Arboretum.

The program was originated to help local gardeners diversify their plant selection, Mormon explained. Participants in the exchange bring excess plants from their gardens, and trade with others.

The plants are divided up into sections, depending on what variety they are. Accompanying garden tools are also divided into sections in a similar manner.

"The trade-off helps each other keep from having waste," said Lawson, adding that many people go away with more than they came with.

"It's absolutely one of my favorite events of the year," she said.

Walking to battle Sickle cell anemia

By Amanda York
ASSISTANT NEWS EDITOR

UK's Alpha Kappa Alpha service sorority encourages students to join in the fight against sickle cell anemia and participate in a 5K walk designed to raise awareness about the disease and money for research.

Kivon Moss, president of Alpha Kappa Alpha, said participating in the event could change someone's life.

"It's important to participate because sickle cell anemia is a disease that affects a great deal of African Americans. By walking or donating you are supporting a cause and your support could change someone's life," said Moss.

This is the first Sickle Cell Walk held by the sorority in five years, Moss said.

"The event gives students the opportunity to help in a way other than making a donation. It allows everyone to take a role in an important cause," said Moss.

Moss also said she expects the event to be very worthwhile, not only to those suffering from the disease, but for those participating.

"Alpha Kappa Alpha has worked very hard," she said. "We are a service sorority and this is just one of the ways we are giving back to the community. Everyone should take a little time out of their day to help someone else."

Sickle cell anemia is an inherited chronic blood disease that primarily affects African Americans. Sickle cell anemia is caused by an abnormal type of hemoglobin and occurs in people who inherit the abnormal hemoglobin from both parents.

Symptoms of sickle cell anemia include fatigue, breathlessness, a rapid heart rate, increased susceptibility to infections, bone pain, fever and vomiting.

Currently there is no cure for the disease. Research is ongoing and proceeds from the event will go to the Sickle Cell Foundation, a foundation dedicated to researching sickle cell anemia.

Dr. Jeffrey Moscow, a pediatric hematologist/oncologist at the UK Medical Center, said there are a number of children and adults in Lexington and surrounding communities who are affected by the disease.

Moscow said that research about this disease is important and he was pleased to hear about the walk.

"I think it is a great idea. I'm happy the sorority is helping to support research in sickle cell disease," Moscow said.

To participate

When: Saturday at 1 p.m.
Where: The walk begins at Haggin Field.

Registration Fees: None. Participants are encouraged to give donations to promote research for the disease.

CAMPUS CHARITY

Group collects cans to help underprivileged

A new slant on Halloween spirit

By Brian Granger
STAFF WRITER

Fellowship of Christian Athletes members will trick-or-treat around Lexington Sunday night, collecting cans for the statewide charity God's Pantry.

"Participants will dress up in costumes, go in groups of three or four, and trick or treat through neighborhoods just like little kids do," said Natalie Harrison, a finance and management sophomore who is in charge of the event.

Members of the fellowship said they wanted to get more involved with the community and to have more charitable drives. This is one way to do so, Harrison said.

God's Pantry, which has eight centers in Lexington, serves 48 counties in Kentucky. The charity collected 6.3 million pounds of food last year, said Dennis Luing, the charity's office manager.

Lexington allows trick or treating from 6 p.m. to 8 p.m., and fellowship participants will move throughout the city between these hours.

"We aren't going to be too close to campus because those are mostly students' houses, and we don't want to take food from them," Harrison said. "Each group will have a driver and will go a few blocks to collect cans."

Residents might get scared seeing college students still trick-or-treating, so a press release has been sent to the police department notifying them of the situation. Prizes will also be given out to the students who collect the most cans and to the person with the best costume.

Tubby Smith to host scavenger hunt

By Jessica Stevens
STAFF WRITER

Coach Tubby Smith won't be found on the court Saturday afternoon.

Instead, he will award prizes to winners of a community-wide scavenger hunt to benefit UK Children's Hospital.

"I'm one of 17 children, so I understand how important it is to have healthy kids," said Smith, who coaches UK's men's basketball team. "I hope we have a great turnout and I really hope the community gets behind this great cause."

The Great Autumn Adventure on Oct. 30, is a joint effort between UK Hospital and CHA Health to raise money to buy new medical equipment, fund pediatric research and enhance programs at the hospital, said Susie Psimer, fund development coordinator for the hospital.

Teams of four are designated as corporate, individual, family or employees of the hospital and CHA Health, depending on who is involved. Each team will be given a list of 20 to 25 items not easily bought.

Laura Murdock, marketing manager for UK Hospital, said. "The groups can use any legal means of acquiring the items. Some may be found in their basement or their grandparent's attic."

Murdock said she expects anywhere from 200 to 400 individuals to participate. Being its first year, no financial goals have been set for the event. "We are more interested in getting the tradition started," Murdock said.

But whatever amount raised will help, said Psimer, fund development coordinator for the hospital. "Any money raised for the Children's Hospital is more than we had the day before," she said.

Participants in the Great Autumn Adventure will be eligible for a number of door prizes, including a Hal Mumme autographed football, a Tubby Smith autographed basketball and gift certificates to local restaurants and hotels.

Prizes will also be awarded for the groups who bring back the most items on the list. The prizes include season tickets to UK football games for the 2000 season, a fall package to Churchill Downs, a vacation package to the Caribbean, and more.

Accounting senior Rebecca Burkeen said she was excited about the event. "It sounds like a really fun activity to raise money," she said.

For some students, the chance to win stuff is reason enough to go. "The prizes sound good," said biology sophomore Richard Toss. "It would be worth it."

Gone huntin'

Registration for the event will be at 9 a.m. Saturday at the E.S. Goodbar field in front of Commonwealth Stadium.

Registration for corporate groups is $250. The fee for individual, family or employee groups is $50.

Students are considered individual groups. The scavenger hunt will start at 10 a.m.

Prizes for teams that collect the most items will be presented at 4 p.m.

Cool Cats keep rolling

By Nathan Hutchinson
STAFF WRITER

The wins just keep coming for the UK Cool Cats. Last weekend the Cats hit the road for the first time this season and swept a pair of games from Ohio State.

Friday, the Cats got two third-period goals en route to a 4-2 victory. Alex Derhoganessian's second goal of the game gave Kentucky a 3-2 lead early in the third period. Pasi Holopainen added some insurance later in the period to put the game out of reach.

"Friday night we wore them down. In the third period we won the game. Once again our conditioning is paying off for us," Graham said.

Saturday, the Cats came out flat but Graham got on his team during the first intermission. "I told them they weren't playing hockey at all, they were just going through motions out there. Second period, I don't know if it was something I said or if something clicked in their heads, but they realized they could beat this team," Graham said.

The result was a 10-2 victory for the Cats and four goals for Aaron Stephenson. "It was one of those days, every time I shot it went in," Stephenson said.

UK also got two goals each from Corey Callahan, Pasi Holopainen and Toni Haalapa Saturday night.

The Cats are 8-0 on the season.

ADVICE

Abbey can help you

Need help?: Safety, privacy, and office relationships under the 'scope

Dear Abbey,
I live in Donovan, and get late-night cravings for K-Lair's grilled cheese. The problem is no one wants to go with me, or it's too late and my roommate's already asleep. Why is that a problem? Well, the only way to get to K-Lair is either through a dark alley between the Food Services Building and two dumpsters, or between food services and Haggin Hall. Neither is well lit. After the scare with the escaped rapist and murderer that killed one of our own UK students, I get a little nervous walking through there by myself. Is there someone I could talk to about getting something done about this?

Creeper Out on Campus

Dear Creeper,

Well, I talked to a couple of helpful people and found out a few things I wish I had known when I lived in Donovan. UK Police Officer Stephanie Bastin takes care of all of UK's security. She's the one you can thank for RAD, the rape prevention class, and the emergency lights all over campus. If you have any questions, I'm sure she would not mind answering them for you or redirecting the phone call to someone who could. To reach her, call 257-5189.

If you're looking for immediate protection, you can always call the Campus Escort Service. No, not the kind you hire for an evening to impress all your sorority sisters at the annual formal. This free ROTC- and SGA-sponsored service provides an escort back to your dorm. The service is offered from 8:28 p.m.-1:31 a.m. Sunday through Thursday. Don't be afraid or embarrassed to call, it's better than the alternative.

Abbey

Dear Abbey,

I was looking through my girlfriend's desk drawer the other night, when I found a picture of a guy I'd never seen before and I knew was not one of her close guy friends. When I asked her about it she blew up. She said that all I ever did was accuse her of cheating and I acted like I couldn't trust her at all. This pretty much finalized my decision that she actually was cheating. My question then is "Do you have a date for Friday night?"

Dumped and Desperate

Dear Dumped and Desperate,

Listen, if this girl means the world to you, don't give up so soon. Speaking from experience, the saying "Once a cheater, always a cheater," does not always necessarily apply. Listen to what she has to say, talk about what you two have had so far in the relationship and decide if you want to continue this relationship. If you break off with her because you feel you can't trust her, then I am busy Friday. Abbey

Dear Abbey,

I have developed a crush on one of my cute co-workers. Our work environment is much looser in attitude than most professional offices, so everybody jokes around. But I hesitate to pursue a relationship with this cutie within the office. If something were to go sour, then it would be rather difficult to maintain a professional atmosphere. I have been enjoying activities with the lovely object of my desire outside the office as much as possible. But most of the time we spend together is at work. How can I maintain my pursuit without affecting the work atmosphere?

Bamboozled in the Basement

Dear Bamboozled,

Seems as if you're doing everything that you can. But listen, if he or she's worth it, then go for it. Yeah, it may not work out. But if you really like him or her, then tell this person how you feel. If he or she is willing to do stuff with you outside the office, that is a definite sign of interest, at least for a friendship. So tell him or her how you feel, and see what happens. If worse comes to worse, they may say no to a romantic relationship. But if this person is truly a good person, as you say, they will aim for a friendship.

FILM

Best Man a good movie

By Dave Gorman
SENIOR STAFF CRITIC

This is the best movie in 1999. No diggity, no doubt. I absolutely loved this movie.

Although Spike Lee has never had a No.1 blockbuster, his own family has now. Written and directed by Malcolm Lee, The Best Man opened number one at the box office last weekend. That's a huge ha to his cousin.

This movie truly has it all. The Best Man has all the messages: Stay faithful to your woman. If you're not, be prepared to reap what you sow. Also, the beauty of a truly whipped man and his dilemmas come through. The movie has great-looking women and I guess the men are all right looking, so everybody is happy.

It was well worth the money, and even to see it again. It is even worthy of note-taking of the wedding vows exchanged in the movie (be original in your own, though). The acting was all around Oscar-caliber performances. It was actually better than I even expected. The movie has so much more to it than meets the eye.

This is a safe movie to go to with a date, or your boys or girls. If you go on a date, you can say angelic things afterward, just fill in the blank, and the girl is yours. Or, if you go with members of the same sex, you can talk afterwards about what you would do if you were in the same situations.

This is by far the best I have ever seen from Morris Chestnut, who was last seen in Boyz in the Hood. He plays a football star once again, but this time he's actually acting. You heard it here first: He will win an Oscar. His supporting cast is terrific, containing rising stars like Nina Long and Taye Diggs. The cast also features one of the brothers from the late-night BET show Sparks. He plays a totally different part and is the one who literally keeps everything real. He's the insight, and the engine to the fast-paced, heart-filling, knee-slapper of a movie.

Grade: A

Taye Diggs and Nia Long share an intimate moment in the new film The Best Man.

Student will lose federal aid if using drugs

WASHINGTON - Students convicted of drug offenses will be barred from receiving federal college tuition aid for one year and, in some cases, permanently under rules taking effect next semester.

The regulations are based on a law enacted last year to reduce waste in the student loan system. They do not apply to juvenile records, and some students will be able to retain eligibility by completing drug rehabilitation or by having their convictions overturned.

Some student groups complain that the new rules are counterproductive. "It's kind of backward to deal with a drug policy by denying people an education," said Jamie Puschel, a 1998 college graduate who is now legislative director of the Washington-based U.S. Student Association.

Justice Department officials say there's no database designating student drug offenses, but a statement released by Sen. Judd Gregg, R-N.H., cites a University of Michigan study that said 33.5 percent of college students had used illegal drugs in 1995.

A recent nationwide survey indicated that drug use among young adults ages 18 to 25 has risen in the last five years, with 16.1 percent, or 4.5 million, saying they were current users of an illegal drug, meaning they had used the drug in the month before they were surveyed.

Under the regulations, which were released last Friday, a first possession conviction will block aid for a year, while a sales conviction will bar aid for two years.

Students convicted of possessing drugs for a second time will lose aid for two years; a third time, permanently. A student convicted twice of selling drugs will lose aid permanently.

Colleges won't have to police their students. Instead, students will be asked to report their own criminal records on aid forms subject to review by federal officials.

Students must complete forms in each year of eligibility with other self-reported information such as income and academic status, Neta said.

Convictions occurring after students apply for aid but before July 1, when the rules take effect, may result in the loss of eligibility. For example, a first drug-possession conviction Feb. 1 would make a student ineligible for aid from July 1, 2000, until Feb. 1, 2001.

IN OUR OPINION

Soften up, Mitch
Soft campaign money isn't free speech

The Republicans did it again. They successfully blocked efforts last week in the Senate to prohibit the unlimited amount of special-interest contributions given to political parties — also known as "soft money."

The official GOP stance is that prohibiting soft money is a violation of the First Amendment right to free speech. We believe the campaign finance system needs to be overhauled so that everyone has an equal voice.

The main opposition to campaign-finance reform is being led by Mitch McConnell, the Republican senator from Kentucky. Sen. McConnell is a staunch opponent of any effort to limit soft money.

McConnell's scare tactic only heightened the awareness of real need for reform. Several of the CED members worked for companies that had legislation pending before Congress. This "coincidental" smacked of commentary on McConnell's part — ante up or forget about doing business with the United States Congress.

If free speech is equivoacted with the ability to give money, then the poor (including college students) have very little right to free speech. How much money can you afford to give in order to do "business" with the Congress? In a Gallup Organization poll conducted in the first part of October, sixty-four percent of Americans polled felt that the campaign finance system needed to be fixed. Unfortunately, only 31% of Americans under the age of 30 believe reform is needed.

Why do so many young people not care about an issue so important to the rest of the country? Perhaps it is because young people do not see the impact that big money has on our political system. If that is the case, we need to wake up. Young people need to realize our importance in the political process is measured in the proportion of money we are able to give.

We believe Congress should prohibit soft money and raise the individual contribution to $3,000. By doing so, all Americans will have a more equal voice in the political process.

Decision to stop Rich for quality, sensitivity

Some decisions will never rest peacefully. Take my decision to never again run an opinion column by Ben Rich, perhaps one of the most infamous and talented writers to grace the pages of the Kentucky Kernel in recent years.

Rich's columns will no longer appear on the Dialogue page because their content doesn't flow in the same direction I would like to take the Kernel. And guess what: I'm the editor in chief. I'm the driver.

So I like to guide the Kernel as if it were the newspaper of Utopia. In this mythical place that will never exist on this God-forsaken earth, people would be cool.

Women wouldn't be degraded. Beauty would be soul-deep. No gays would be made fun of. Racism wouldn't exist either. Everyone would have equal opportunities. There'd be no pollution, no war, no... Hmmm, that world is beginning to sound a little too perfect. The imperfection of this world will remain.

And letters to the editor will continue to pour in when my columnists decide to make fun of the plethora of people, places and ideas that are so open to criticism.

Ideally, the Dialogue page of the Kernel would contain entertaining, well-written persuasive pieces filled with facts to back up opinions and enlightening points of view to challenge the mind.

As many readers have said in letters to the editor, that is not always the reality.

To those readers who were offended by Ben Rich's column, I sincerely apologize for the poor judgement on my behalf in allowing it to run.

To those readers who are angry that I relieved Rich of his privilege as a Kernel columnist, I sincerely apologize that UK does not have a mass-produced forum to serve as a bastion of the First Amendment without standard or principle.

As a newspaper serving a diverse audience, the Kernel strives to be sensitive to the feelings of our readers. The pen really is quite mighty. So if we have to cause some pain, we're going to do it for a good reason, not a good laugh or a pointless knee-jerk reaction.

If the Dialogue page isn't making people angry, we're not doing our job. If it's a dull read, we're not doing our job. We will draw the line at making fun of people without presenting solid reasons for the criticism.

We will also continue to print columns that challenge readers' ideas on the myriad of complex issues that make life interesting.

If you don't like it, write a letter to the editor.

PARTING SHOTS

The Question:

According to a report published in the Archives of Internal Medicine, doctors will lie to managed health care programs in order to provide the best care for their patients. Doctors indicate that if a patient were in a critical condition, over 50 percent would lie or manipulate data in order to help the patient. Although doctors may have just cause for their reasoning, the act is dishonest. Should doctors be held up to their word, or is their actions justified?

What They Said:

The fact that doctors are having to lie to keep their patients in good health just goes to show what happens when the almighty dollar becomes the deciding factor in who stays sick and who gets well."

- Candice Jackson, Contributing Columnist

No act of lying is justified when it comes to a person's health, for it could certainly backfire. A better alternative to finding the care need, such as an appeal to the HMO, should be sought out by the physician."

- Rebecca Burke, Contributing Cartoonist

This wouldn't be a problem if health care was a national service instead of a privatized business. Socialized medicine is not the answer, but doctors shouldn't be forced to lie to save lives."

- Christopher Emmick, Dialogue Editor

Lying should not be tolerated because it will only cause health insurance companies to increase their premiums and scrutinize all future medical procedures."

- Natalie Johnson, Contributing Columnist

When you're dealing with Beelzebub, sometimes you have to do a little wrong to get the greater good."

- Scott Marchand, Kernel Columnist

In the real world of social work, routine manipulation of diagnoses to satisfy payers is not an ethical dilemma. We are taught to focus on what's best for our clients. What's best for the managed health-care programs never comes up."

- Jim Scott, Senior Kernel Columnist

Making UK great requires prestige

We all know how desperately our university is attempting to emulate its so-called "benchmark institutions." To spur us on towards this noble goal, I have outlined a series of steps intended to make UK rank up there with the other "great" members of American academia.

We, as a university, simply have to raise tuition. A cheap school financially is obviously synonymous with a cheap school in quality. Besides adding prestige, this carries the additional benefit of blocking access to all the poor people of this state, who tarnish our image. UK will no longer be a school full of the disadvantaged or students working their way through as they study part-time — no, we will have a quality student body of yuppie SUV-and-cell-phone suburbanites, as do all the other "great" schools.

Secondly, we must homogenize the university racially. After all, Harvard isn't exactly teeming with Hispanic students. Of course we must let in a few "token" ethnic minorities, just to keep the NAACP and the ACLU off our backs and avoid nasty little "Bisexual Zulu Studies" and "Peoples of the Lower Andes." If Caltech (who was recently ranked first in the nation) is 1% African-American according to US News and World Report, then we should be too, right?

Agriculture, well, ties with professions as lowly and non-intellectual as farming will soon be irrevocably severed as we and our departmental officers march towards a brighter future. Remember: image, not content, is everything.

Perhaps our alumni giving rates and endowments will finally be respectable so we can build even more red-brick-and-white-columned symbols of hegemonic intellectual isolationism and snobbery.

Athletics will be restricted to civilized sports (non-scholarship of course; otherwise we could be letting in and even worse-paying for underprivileged students) such as fencing, or perhaps archery. Students will have lower-arena tickets, but everyone will be cramming for that quantum mechanics exam, and who wants to see 5 short, slow, 0-32 white guys anyway?

We will teach our students well. They will learn to value the name on their degree more than the education they received. They will manipulate UK connections into landing them plum jobs on Madison Avenue and Wall Street. They will realize that you can do anything if you're rich and white and a free-market capitalist whose daddy knows everybody worth knowing. They will work their alumni status to get their children (who will all be named something like "Victoria Huntington Buffington Witherington III," but called "Buffy") into Kentucky.

Who exactly set these standards anyway? Yes, UK will improve, and imitating the Ivy League isn't entirely a bad idea. But perhaps in the process we can challenge convention and hold ourselves to a different set of standards, since those we have now don't really seem to be all that "great."

Center for Clinical Research
-Lexington, Kentucky, LLC
If you have symptoms of headaches, dizziness or lightheadedness, you may be experiencing high blood pressure, or hypertension. Many people have high blood pressure and do not have symptoms. If you have a family member who is being treated for hypertension, it is a good idea to have your blood pressure checked.
THE CENTER FOR CLINICAL RESEARCH - LEXINGTON, KENTUCKY is conducting a research study to evaluate an investigational medication for the treatment of hypertension. Participants will receive free study-related material evaluations, study procedures and study medication for the duration of the 8 to 10 week trial.
We are looking for individuals with a history of high blood pressure and who are currently either untreated or taking a calcium channel blocker or an ACE inhibitor for their hypertension.
Study participants will be paid up to $240.00 upon completion.
If you have an interest in this important research project or would like more information, please contact:
