

© 1943 BY LYNN SKEELS

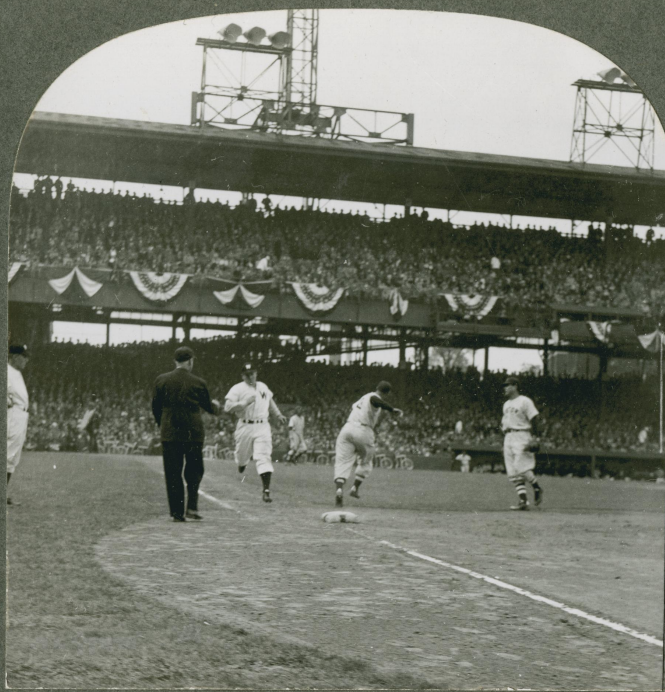

© 1943 BY LYNN SKEELS

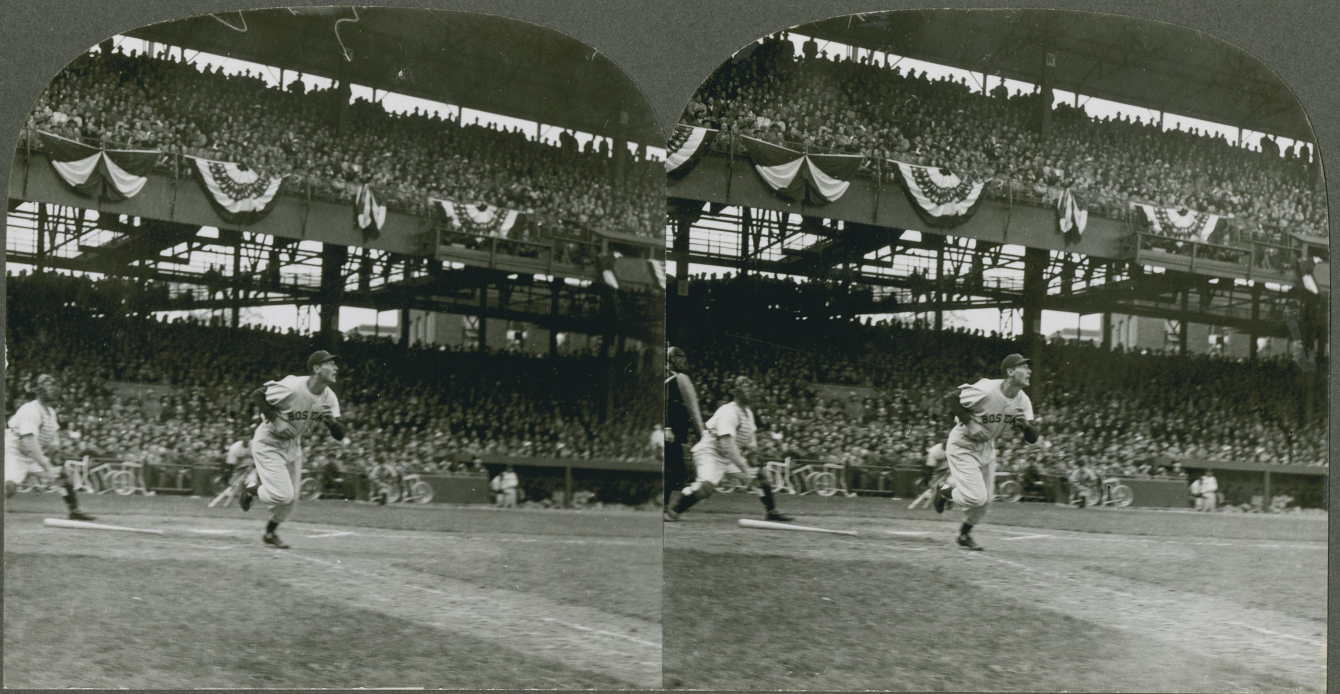

27

We leave the Capitol for the ball park.

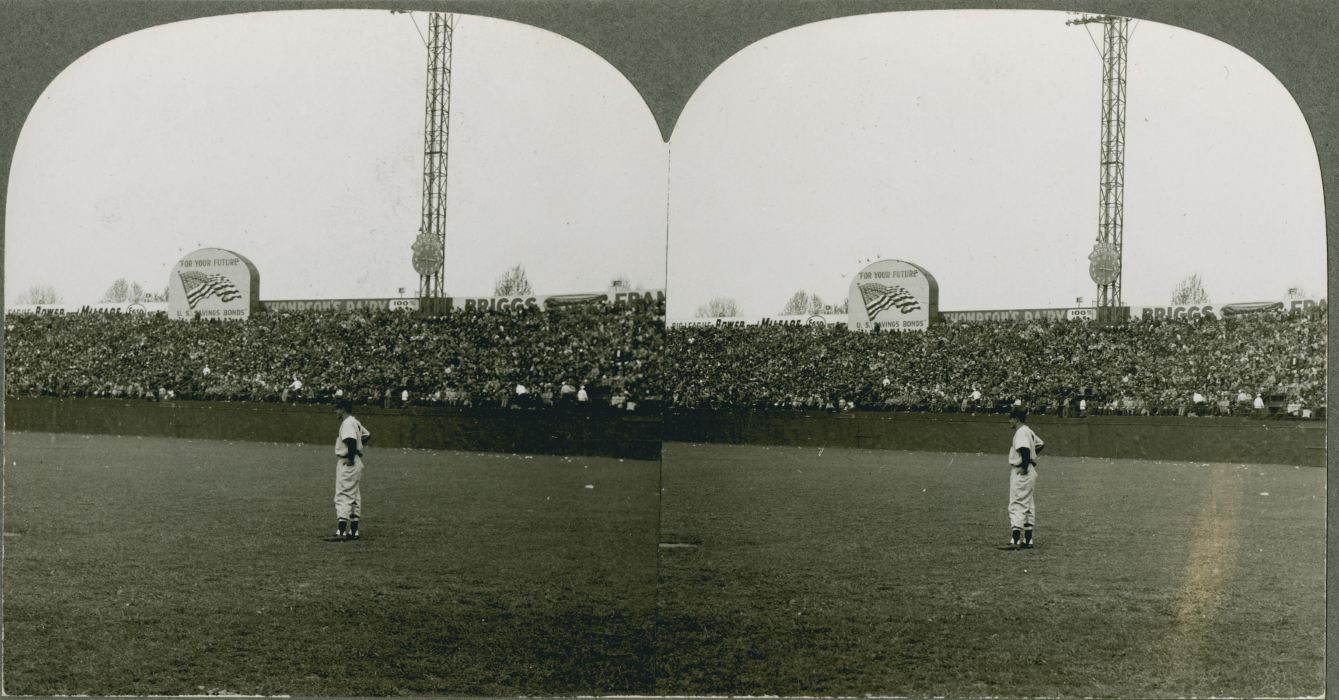

11
As one sportsman to another—The Secretary of the Treasury and Buck O'Neil, sports writer of the Times-Herald.

12

While waiting for the President to arrive, the Secretary of the Treasury feels his pocket to see if the finances of the country are safe.

14

That distinguished looking man in the third row is the Secretary of the Treasury.

15

Mrs. Truman laughed when the President tried to collect the three dollars Bob LaFollette borrowed from him last week.

16

Say, "Happy", why don't you look where you're shaking, or shake where you're looking.

17

The President:

"What's that guy in the black glasses selling?"

©.1943 BY LYNN SKEELS

©.1943 BY LYNN SKEELS

18

Mrs. Truman and the Board of Deacons watch the President sign up.

© 1945 BY LYNN SKEELS

© 1945 BY LYNN SKEELS

19

When the President shakes hands, it takes two men to keep the other fellow's arm from falling off.

© 1945 BY LYNN SKEELS

© 1945 BY LYNN SKEELS

20

None of those cold fish finger tip handshakes from this man.

© 1945 BY LYNN SKEELS

© 1945 BY LYNN SKEELS

21

Matt Connelly adjusts his upper plate.

Clark Griffith:

"And then, Mr. President, the farmer's daughter said to the traveling salesman . . ."

© 1945 BY LYNN SKEELS

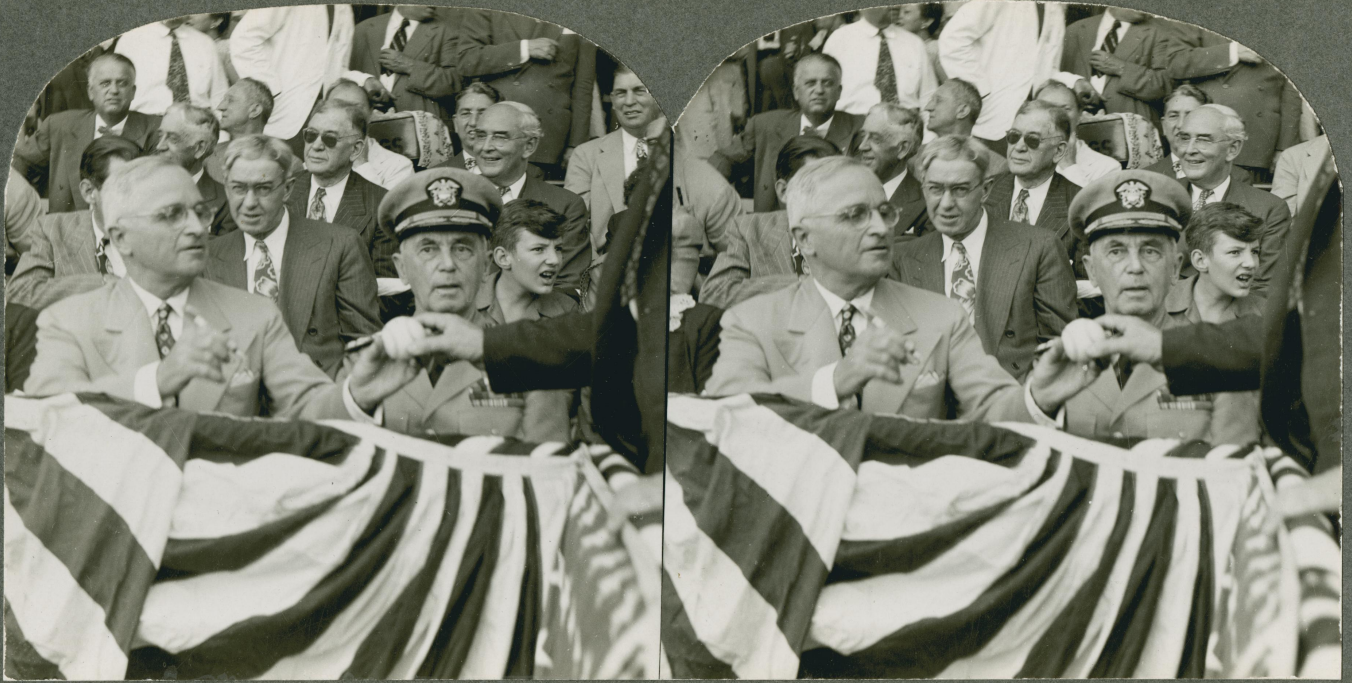

© 1945 BY LYNN SKEELS

22

Mrs. Truman thinks he will make it.

© 1945 BY LYNN SKEELS

© 1945 BY LYNN SKEELS

23

The President gets ready to sign an important document.

© 1945 BY LYNN SKEELS

© 1945 BY LYNN SKEELS

24

The National Anthem.

© 1943 BY LYNN SKEELS

© 1943 BY LYNN SKEELS

24
Wallace White, pleased.

Alben Barkley, inquisitive.

Arthur Vandenberg, relaxed.

Fred Vinson, helpful.

(Tom Clark and Lowell Mason try to light their cigars.
Yes, that's Ed Johnson behind the Secretary of the Treasury.)

26

Now lets everybody set our watch.

27

We leave the Capitol for the ball park.

31

Fred Vinson, Chairman, and his Board of Deacons waiting for their Pastor to arrive.

