

THE UNIVERSITY OF KENTUCKY SCENE

Welcome to the Blue Grass, and to the University of Kentucky!

Dynamic center of one of the nation's most progressive educational institutions, the University's Lexington campus offers a fascinating cross-section of the multi-faceted process of educating today's youth for significant and responsible roles in the world of tomorrow.

Here you will see students from all walks of life, young people of all faiths and races. These young people represent not only the many layers of our own highly complex contemporary American society, but other countries and other cultures as well.

Students today are adult-serious-dedicated. They seek meaning for their lives. They strive to realize fully their own unique capabilities. They seek too, a responsible place in the world in which they live, a responsibility which will offer them in return, a sense of creative satisfaction.

The spirit of challenge and adventure which stems from the intellectual experience is very much alive at the University of Kentucky. It is this spirit which sparks the electric atmosphere, the intensity of purpose you see reflected in the faces of those you encounter as you visit the campus. You see it again and again, in the attitudes of those at work in classrooms and laboratories, in those so earnestly engaged in debate and discussion on campus walks and in the Student Center, and in those lost in study and thought as they mine the accumulated knowledge of mankind in the campus library. You sense it, too, in the constant expansion and updating of the University, in the new buildings under construction and in the never-ending expansion and revision of its academic program.

The University today is no longer the ivory tower of yesteryear, a sheltered island of learning in the stormy river of Time. Instead, it is involved as never before with the constantly increasing needs and demands of a rapidly developing society. It is concerned with preparing its students to understand those needs—concerned with equipping them to meet those demands.

Education in the true sense, it has been said, is an affirmation of life itself. It is this kind of education, this affirming of life, which is the scene at the University of Kentucky.

We hope your visit will be both pleasant and stimulating.

LIBRARIES

An important facet of the University is its library system composed of more than 1,330,000 volumes housed in the Margaret I. King Library and in the smaller, highly selective libraries of various colleges and departments.

These special libraries include the collections of the Agricultural Library and the Medical Center, as well as those of Architecture, Art and Music, the Biological Sciences, Chemistry and Physics, Education, Engineering, Geology, Law, Mathematics and Pharmacy.

Designated a regional depository for its documents by the United States government, the University of Kentucky library system offers an extensive collection of source materials, printed and manuscript, including complete runs of most major scientific serials. Among its special collections are a broad range of materials on Kentucky and Ohio Valley history, the works of numerous contemporary authors (including their original manuscripts), documents and literature on tobacco—a major factor in Kentucky's economy, and papers of such public figures as Henry Clay, Alben W. Barkley, A. O. Stanley and Jovett Shouse, records which provide a fascinating study of the details of political life in 19th and 20th Century America.

RESEARCH

The University of Kentucky Research Foundation received 391 awards during the fiscal year, 1967, its twenty-second year of service. These awards totaled more than 11 million dollars.

While research work during the Foundation's early years was primarily in the physical sciences, it now extends into education, the humanities and the social sciences as well. The Foundation presently administers funds for 763 different research projects, distributed between 78 departments or divisions of the University.

Its current projects range from an appropriation for assisting the development program of a local school to an annual award of almost $1,500,000 for the Tobacco and Health Research Program which now involves 31 UK Faculty Researchers from eight departments.

INSTITUTES AND CENTERS

An important part of the University's influence is evidenced by the work of its many institutes and centers.

Center for Developmental Change
Water Resources Institute
Institute of Theoretical and Applied Mechanics
Lexington Technical Institute
Tobacco and Health Research Program
Bureau of Business Research
Bureau of School Services
Kentucky Geological Survey

INTERNATIONAL PROGRAMS

THAILAND (AID)

The University recently began a cooperative project with Thailand in the development of a regional Agricultural Research Center in Tha Phra, Northeast Thailand.

PEACE CORPS

Peace Corps volunteers from several colleges and universities are now enrolled at UK for intensive training to prepare them for the strenuous demands of their work in rural India.

THE MUSEUM OF KENTUCKY LIFE

WAVELAND—The University of Kentucky's Museum of Kentucky Life is open Tuesday through Saturday, from 9 a.m. to 4 p.m., and on Sunday, from 1:30 to 4:30 p.m. Closed on Mondays and University holidays. Waveland is located on Higbee Mill Pike, a few hundred yards off Nicholasville Pike (Route 27).

A BRIEF HISTORY

Kentucky's concept of a state university dates back to the year 1865 when Kentucky University became one of the nation's first land grant institutions to be established under the Morrill Act.

Passed by both houses and Congress in June, 1862, the Morrill Act provided federal aid, in the form of land grants to the various states, to be used for the establishment of colleges which would, "without excluding other scientific and classical studies, and including military tactics, teach such branches of learning as are related to agriculture and the mechanic arts . . ."

In 1878, when the people of Kentucky decided to establish a "State institution, free from all ecclesiastical entanglements or control," the Agricultural and Mechanical College was separated from Kentucky University and reestablished on land given by Lexington and Fayette County.

In order to provide a separate campus for the new College, the City of Lexington donated its 50-acre fairground and park, an area which had been used as a bivouac area for Union troops during the Civil War. Lexington and Fayette County together contributed $60,000 for the construction of buildings, and James K. Patterson, first president of the University, even used his own personal savings to supplement the building fund.

Thirty years later, the State Legislature changed the name of the institution to State University, Lexington, Kentucky, and allocated additional funds for its support. In 1916, the name was changed to the one by which it is known today—The University of Kentucky.

PHYSICAL PLANT

The University of Kentucky is a small city in itself. It has its own post office, bookstore, radio station, newspaper, printing plant, cafeterias, theatre, library, police force and hospital. There are over 100 major buildings on the Lexington campus alone. The University community, including students, faculty and staff members and their families, numbers about 22,000.

PARKING

Visitors may park in those areas marked "Visitor" and in any areas with parking meters. Those parking in "Visitor" areas must display a properly validated guest pass in the left-front windshield of the locked vehicle. The guest pass may be obtained from the attendant at the main entrance to the University on South Limestone Street. Fees for use of parking meters are indicated on the meters themselves.

Parking areas designated as "A" areas are for the use of vehicles bearing "A" permits. Those areas designated as "B" areas may be used by vehicles displaying either "A" or "B" permits. "C" areas are for the use of "C" permit holders only, and may not be used by "A" and "B" permit holders.

Unless otherwise indicated, the maximum speed limit on University property is 15 miles per hour.

Any vehicular accidents on University property must be reported immediately to the Safety and Security Division of the University of Kentucky.
