Tickets Are to Be Placed on Sale Monday and Tuesday in Front of Administration Building

ADMISSION WILL BE $1.00 Play Is to Be Given at Lexington Opera House

The date for the Stroller spring production, "The Truth About Blayds" has been changed, owing to conflicting dates, from May 10 to May 12. The play will be given at the Lexington Opera House on this date.

This is the 18th production of the organization and is under the direction of Addison Yeaman, director of Strollers, and Professor Saxton of Transylvania College.

The story centers around the figure of Oliver Blayds, who is portrayed by Harry McChesney. Mr. McChesney has participated in several Romany productions as well as carrying the part of Henry Jordan in "Icebound," last year's Stroller play. He is a junior in the Arts and Sciences College and a member of Kappa Alpha social fraternity.

Henrietta Blackburn as Isabel Blayds carries realistically the role of heroine. Miss Blackburn was also (CONTINUED ON PAGE EIGHT)

Strollers, dramatic organization of the campus, was organized in 1909 by Leo J. Sandman. The faculty objected strenuously to the proposed formation saying that it would take too much time and interest. In studies, but despite these objections a small group of students interested in dramatics met to form the club. At the first meeting Professor Farquhar was elected faculty advisor.

The first play, "Brown of Harvard" was given in 1911, and was directed by Leo Sandman who carried a minor part in the cast as well. The next play, "The Virginian," from Owen Wister's famous novel, was given the following year, and Mr. Sandman again took part in the play. By this time, the organization began to receive recognition by the city newspapers as well as the Kernel (then The Idea) and the Kentuckian. Also, members were beginning to be called upon to help in entertainments, not only at the university but in the city as well.

The third production to be given was "The Lost Paradise," it was the most pretentious one that had been attempted. The play was such a success that it was put on at the Masonic Theater in Louisville thereby extending the fame and prestige of the Strollers. The College Widow" was the (CONTINUED ON PAGE EIGHT)

300 ATTEND CONFERENCE

The third annual Mother's Day Convention at the university, sponsored by the Woman's Administrative Council, begins today and will end Sunday. About three-hundred guests are expected for the activities.

The entertaining committee has worked out a most interesting program and has included many unusual features in it.

On Friday, May 6, a luncheon will be given for the mothers. It will be followed by the May Day parade and program. As this is so typically a representative scene of college life the committee has included it as its most important feature. On Friday evening the Glee Club is going to entertain with a program at the Romany theater.

Saturday morning will be taken up with a meeting at Dicker hall where the dean of women will preside. After luncheon an inspection trip of the university will be made and many places of interest in the surrounding country visited. Mrs. McVey will entertain with a tea at Maxwell Place at 4 o'clock.

On Sunday afternoon a musical is to be given in the honor of the guests in the Men's Gymnasium. It will be followed by a tea given by the Y. W. C. A. The convention will close at 5 o'clock with vesper services held there.

The entertaining committee is supplemented by a committee of transportation which is composed of Virginia Kelley, Amelia King and Josephine Skain. Mary Virginia Haisley and Josephine Lapsley have charge of the registration.

'SISTER BEATRICE' TO BE PRESENTED ALL NEXT WEEK

Romany's Second Production Is Drama by Masterlinck, With Story Similar to 'The Miracle'

MUSIC ACCOMPANIES PLAY

Play Directed by Sax Assisted by Jeanette Lampert and Mrs. Cave

The Romany theater will present for the week beginning next Monday, "Sister Beatrice," Masterlinck's great drama.

This is an event which should make history at the University of Kentucky. For a spectacle of such deep and moving beauty to be presented under university auspices and by a cast composed largely of university students is considered a decisive triumph for dramatics.

"Sister Beatrice" is a drama with a broad appeal. The directors of the production believe that the spirit of the great Belgian mystic has been captured in this magnificent allegory. The deep dramatic qualities of the play inspire reverence and breathless awe and the beauty of the setting together with the lyrical movement of the story complete an effect that is declared to be tremendous.

Gorgeous costumes are displayed by the various characters of the play with unusual magnificence. Accompaniment music adds to the effect. (CONTINUED ON PAGE EIGHT)

STUDENTS ASSIST FLOOD VICTIMS

Group of Girls Raise $260 of $1,000 Quota by Sale of Tags Campus

MEN'S COUNCIL ASSISTS

Approximately $260 was raised by University students Tuesday and Wednesday, to relieve suffering caused by the devastating floods in Mississippi. The Men's Student Council of the university promoted a general Tag Day on these two days.

Manifesting their desire to help and their sympathy for the almost inconceivable suffering of the unfortunate people in the devastated lands, the girls at the university volunteered their services in the selling of tags.

The annual Red Cross had for its quota $500, but as the disaster spread the Red Cross sent out a distress call for an increase in the quotas of all American communities. As a result the Lexington quota was doubled to $1,000.

The university movement will continue throughout the week and the total amount raised will be announced then. University students are asked to contribute something toward the fund and to give their donations to any of the girls selling tags on the campus. (CONTINUED ON PAGE EIGHT)

Madame Gray-Lévinne Delights Her Audiences

Noted Violinist Gives Two Concerts at University on May 3

Madame Etelle Gray-Lévinne, distinguished violinist, of San Francisco, and her charming six-year-old son, Laddie Gray, presented two excellent programs to appreciative audiences at the men's gymnasium Tuesday. The concerts were given in connection with Music Week, which is being observed in Lexington this week, and were attended by many people other than university students.

At the morning recital, the Madame Gray-Lévinne rendered a number of selections from old masters, explaining something of the history of each composition. She was introduced by Dr. Frank L. McVey. Laddie Gray, dressed as was Mozart when he played for the royalty of Europe at the age of six, appeared with his mother only at the afternoon concert. He immediately won the (CONTINUED ON PAGE EIGHT)

FIELD DAY TO BE MAY 25

Six full companies of cadets, consisting of 602 men, their officers and sponsors, led by the "high strutter" Blue and White band of the university, did their utmost to win the commendation of Colonel A. E. Harris, Lt. Col. W. S. Bowen and Capt. L. B. Gallagher, inspecting officers, in their review of the R. O. T. C. at the Stoll Field Monday afternoon.

The inspecting officers, accompanied by the staff of instructors in the university military department, put the cadets through all their paces. Regimental review, squad and platoon drills and sham battles were among the military exhibitions.

The Monday morning inspection was confined to class-room examinations in both the basic and advanced corps. The afternoon parade began at 2 o'clock, and the regiment went through drill and manual of arms. The visiting officers inspected the ground and military equipment Tuesday morning before their departure for Washington. They will inspect the other units of the Fifth Corps Area before making a report on the standings of the schools. Watch Out Girls

The University Burglar, Wearing a Striped Sweater and Carrying a Three-Foot Club Is Looking for New Sororities to Conquer

(By KATHLEEN PEFFLEY)

The university burglar is out seeking for new sororities to conquer. According to the report we have just received from a sorority house on Stone avenue. Some active lad made himself quite well-known in the winter by his back-window calls in fraternity neighborhoods. If the marauder of the house should be a real force in student affairs on the campus, he would be a real force in the house. He left no card.

It was decided by the police and the house mother, who chose Saturday night, 9:30 p. m., as a suitable time to crash into the house mother's room with a report of shattered glass that would catch her while she was lumbering fraternity men to block away.

The gentleman was very appropriately attired in a sweater with stripes and a three-foot club ornamented with nails. Yeggs are doing more of their jobs in sport clothes this season. He had previously removed a screen from another window for no apparent reason unless he wanted to see if it would come off.

The house mother, somewhat surprised at this unexpected interruption, immediately went upstairs to inquire if any of the girls were expecting callers. The burglar, perceiving that he could not get in, retreated, retired discreetly with his club which he usually carried on the lawn. He left no card.

MORE ABOUT STUDENT GOVERNMENT

(An Editorial)

Since the publication in last week's Kernel of an editorial concerning the student government problem at the university, the author has had an opportunity to discuss the question more fully with members of the faculty as well as student. Contrary to the general opinion of students there seems to be a considerable amount of interest on the part of the faculty and a sincere desire to obtain a working student council. Why then has student government at the university been a failure?

In last week's paper The Kernel pleaded for more power for the student council. It was the opinion of the paper that then and it is now that the Men's Student Council in cooperation with the university officials should have jurisdiction over all matters of discipline among men undergraduate students. But before students can expect this power from university officials they must show themselves worthy to receive it.

On next Monday there will be held on the campus an election of president and vice-president of the Men's Student Council for next year. In this election it is not only the privilege but the duty of every man student to vote. If students really want self government they must show it. Elsewhere in this issue appears a list of the candidates for these offices. Students owe it to themselves as well as to the university to study the qualifications of the various candidates and to vote for the man they believe best-fitted to head the most important student group.

This next year will be a critical one in the history of student self government at the University of Kentucky. The Kernel believes that this year will decide whether the university shall have a live, working council or whether student government will be abolished at the institution—there can be no midway point, no continuance of student government which exists in name only.

In nearly all of the leading institutions of the country, student self government has been a success. Is the University of Kentucky doomed to lag behind?

Again The Kernel pleads for every man student to vote in this election and afterwards to support the council in all its undertakings. To the officers who will be elected Monday The Kernel makes the plea to be true to their fellow-students and to their utmost endeavor to make something of the faculty. The Kernel asks to give every bit of encouragement and means of cooperation to the new council. By these means—through real cooperation of students, faculty, and student council, student government will be a success at the university. Without it, it is doomed to die.

Feminine Force Holds Full Sway This Week

Miss Willy King Is New Editor-in-Chief of Kernel

Miss Willy King supplants John R. Bullock as editor-in-chief of this week's issue of The Kentucky Kernel, student publication of the University of Kentucky. Theta Sigma Phi, women's honorary journalistic fraternity is in charge of the publication, following its usual custom of putting out one paper each year.

Miss Martha Connel assumes the important role of managing editor, taking the place of Niel Plummer. She is responsible for the makeup of the special edition. Miss Virginia Conroy, the regular news editor of The Kernel, retains her position, in directing the reporters for Theta Sigma Phi.

The sorority selected three of the most outstanding feature writers on the campus to write for the special edition. They are Misses Kathleen Peffley, Martha Connel and Lucille Poffey. (CONTINUED ON PAGE EIGHT)

Staff Selected

Colvin Rouse New Editor of Kentucky Law Journal

Mr. Colvin Rouse, junior in the College of Law, has been appointed editor-in-chief of the Kentucky Law Journal for the session of 1927-1928. On account of high scholastic standing, an invitation to submit case comments has been extended to him by the faculty. The Kernel asks to give every bit of encouragement and means of cooperation to the new council. By these means—through real cooperation of students, faculty, and student council, student government will be a success at the university. Without it, it is doomed to die.

The retiring members of the staff for this past year are: Woodson D. Scott, editor-in-chief, and Marion W. Moore, business manager. The following will be members of the staff for the coming year: Colvin Rouse, editor-in-chief, George Ragland, exchange editor, and in the case comment department will be E. C. Middleton, Joe S. Feather, Brent Dickson and Roy R. Bay. The Kentucky Law Journal is published four times a year by the College of Law at the University of Kentucky. It is issued in November, January, March and May. Theta Sigs Discover What "Freedom of Press" Means in Playing With Typewriters, Mercilessly Cutting Copy, Wrestling With Headlines

(By MARTHA CONNELL)

This week finds the Kernel office, the last stronghold on the frontier of the fast-retreating male invaded by women. Theta Sigma Phi holds forth in full sway. For the benefit of a few non-savants, it might be explained that Theta Sigma Phi is an honorary fraternity which binds those of us who use tears and smiles alternately as weapons with which to gain accession to our cabins more closely together in our journalistic pursuits.

Yes, by hook or crook, we Theta Sigs tried to invade "The Kernel's" fostering editor and managing editor into believing that the regular staff needed a rest, and that we would make perfectly good substitutes as campus journalists. They were dubious. Then we happened to mention that it would be possible for them to take an afternoon off to go to the races if they but consented to give us a chance to get into print, and they being mere men, at last succumbed. Johnny was nearly reduced to tears when he saw in his mind's eye the policy of his beloved paper ruthlessly overthrown in the short space of a week by a contingent of captivating co-eds. And Niel had visions of no paper at all appearing at the usual hour on Friday. But we fooled him. Really, we girls have been having a wonderful time expressing ourselves. Never before have we known that "freedom of the press" means. We have played with protesting typewriters to our heart's content. We have mercilessly cut copy, hoping in that way to avenge our wrongs against some hazy malefactor who has, in the dim past, done the same thing to our own cherished journalistic attempts. CINCINNATI CLUB HOST TO JUNIORS

Dinner-Dance is Given in Honor of Student Engineers on Annual Inspection Trip in North

PROGRAM IS BROADCAST

The Alumni Club of Cincinnati was host at a dinner-dance for the Junior Engineering students of the University of Kentucky when they visited Cincinnati, April 27, on their annual inspection trip.

"Forty-one persons, junior engineering students and members of the engineering faculty of the University of Kentucky, comprising the group of Blue Grass students who are on the school's annual tour of major industries in the Ohio valley, were guests of the Cincinnati Alumni Club of the University of Kentucky at a dinner-dance at the Hotel Almay last night.

An interesting program of specialty dances and vocal numbers culminated in a program which was broadcast through WKRC to thousands of former students and alumni of the University of Kentucky who were listening in.

Prof. John T. Paig, of Ohio Mechanics Institute, was toastmaster and introduced a number of alumni and members of the junior engineering group. Novelty numbers by the students, including a cornet solo and a piano number, completed the special program.

"The students, who are under the direction of Prof. Robert Dawson Hawkins, professor of hydraulics, yesterday morning visited the Lunkenheimer Company's two plants and were guests of the company at luncheon. Yesterday afternoon they inspected the Allis Chalmers plant.

"At 8 o'clock this morning they will leave Cincinnati for Middletown. From that city they will go to Dayton for a visit to the plant of the National Cash Register Company and a visit to McCook Field. The tour will end Saturday.

"The group is making the trip to two special buses, chartered for the entire week."

THE THETA SIG EDITION

It's out! The Kernetale.

With women, women everywhere

And not a man in sight!

Of course it isn't the first time; Theta Sigma Phi has an annual habit of snatching the reins and running away with the Kernel but we feel as gloriously wicked each time. True, too, today's Kernel doesn't break any previous record. Delving in old musty archives, we find the Kernel, during the war, in the hands of a completely feminine staff who carried on the work while their brothers drilled in khaki. Most of those girls are veteran newspaper women on big dailies today.

Back in 1922, when the lords of creation were again entrenched in their prior rights, Irene McNamara was elected editor-in-chief. The next year's managing editor, Margaret Lavin, proved so efficient that she had to graduate and leave school to get fired from the job two years later.

The brilliant array of associate editors of the following years has added attraction to various papers throughout this state and sister states: Helen King and Edith Minihan, of The Lexington Herald; Betty Bonbour, of a New York Magazine and Frances Kane, assistant editor of the "Chase." It is not strange, with such examples to emulate, that we dare set the pace with the Kernel today.

But, though we boast of an Admired Eden in the office, though we disclaim the tiniest particle of masculine influence, we gladly acknowledge there is a man in it. A man who is, as he has always been, the motivating power of our publication; a man with the brain and nerve and the sense of humor to devise, to help, to create, then cast the glory upon others. A man whose loyalty to the university overreaches his personal or departmental interest. A man loved and honored by every student in journalism yet a man so modest, witty, that, lest our editorial head fall into the basket, he must be left nameless.

THE STROLLERS

One of the best known and most interesting organizations on the campus is "The Strollers." It fosters an interest in the drama, and encourages those who feel the urge of historic and dramatic activities.

It is a tradition that the Stroller plays be cast and directed by Stroller members, who are students of the university. The Strollers have presented admirably such plays as "Lady Windermere's Fan," "The Thirteenth Chair," "The Admirable Mr. Critcham," "Fifty-Fifty" and others. This year they are presenting an English comedy of dignity and force, "The Truth About Blayds."

This play is a departure from the frivolous musical comedies offered incessantly lately.

This play has a motive back of it, its people are real, and their efforts and alibis to escape their dilemmas are very human. In fact, the Strollers and their play deserve the united support of the university and university's friends at their performance at the Lexington Opera House, May 12.

With the cooperation and interest of the students, the Strollers will succeed in their efforts to find and develop the latent talents for drama among the students.

VOCATIONAL GUIDANCE

BIG BUSINESS-AND THE UNIVERSITY GRADUATE

By Edward E. Duckworth, Graduate in Science, Liverpool University, Assistant Secretary Sun Life Assurance Company of Canada

Since the beginning of this century many changes have taken place in the structure of business. The organization of the United States Steel Corporation of America in 1901 and its subsequent success showed the economic value of the "trust" idea, which today no one questions. A tremendous impulse was given to industry, and consolidations have since been effected on an increasing scale.

This new order of things, however, has brought other problems in its train, and one of the most serious is the lack of men of administrative capacity, required on account of the greater complexity of the industrial machine. Technical schools and universities have in consequence been developed and have extended their courses of instruction to meet that demand.

Notwithstanding the greater attention that has been given to developing and training men competent to cope with the increased responsibility, business continues to advance apace, calling for still higher qualifications on the part of its servants, and the supply is not equal to the demand.

In this situation business executives are depending more and more on university graduates as a source from which to obtain men who with training and experience will provide them with future leaders in their respective industries, and there are therefore splendid opportunities available at the present time for graduating students.

These embryo executives, however, must be equipped with other qualities in addition to those which have contributed to their success in the academic world. In the university the student lives in a more or less artificial atmosphere. His courses of instruction are set out for him and he works along well defined lines, under the guidance of his professors. The qualities which make for his success are intellectual ability combined with working capacity. In the business world other qualities are required as well. The personality of the individual is an important factor, and the possession of a practical mind (common sense) and initiative, as well as the ability to control and supervise the work of others. Without these qualities the value of a man is very much limited no matter how high his intellectual ability may be. Many brilliant men have not measured up to what was expected of them, simply because they lacked the ability to cooperate with others. Team work is absolutely essential in a large organization.

In preparing for the legal or medical profession the student is required to spend six or seven years taking the courses prescribed for him by the governing bodies before he can obtain his degree. When he has at last successfully passed these barriers his real struggle commences. He is then at liberty to engage in practice and his success or failure depends entirely on his own efforts. Usually he struggles along many years gaining experience with little recompense before he can hope to obtain any standard financial reward. The same is true of graduates entering business. The moment the graduate enters the ranks of industry his real task commences, for which all his previous work has been merely preparation.

Many graduates before leaving the university have made their choice of the business which they desire to engage in and have adapted their course of study with it in view. One thought however, that should be kept constantly in mind is that the business the graduate intends to follow is one in which he can take an intense interest; otherwise, work becomes a drudge instead of a pleasure. The most successful and happy men have been those whose whole lives have been submerged in their work.

The choice of a business having been made and an appointment secured, the graduate on entering his new career is very soon apt to question the amount of remuneration he has been given. He sees around him other men of approximately the same age receiving about the same salary although they have not had the advantages of a university education. He is prone, therefore, to think he is not being justly dealt with. From the employer's viewpoint, this is not so. To the employer, both classes are worth the value of their services, and at the start, at any rate the man without the university education is probably worth more on account of his greater experience. The graduate must realize that it is the value of the man himself that counts, and if he is a better man his progress will be that much the more rapid. Time will adjust any discrepancy, if there is one.

In a business where the numbers employed are large it might be thought that an individual may be overlooked. As a matter of fact, this fear is unfounded. Among a large number of young men, here and there will be found those who stand out among their fellows. No management can afford to neglect such, for they are the very life-blood of the organization.

After the graduate has gained experience and made some progress, it is probably that he will receive some measure of responsibility. Being made responsible for some definite part of the Company's activities and being conscious of the fact that responsibility with ease often has a very stimulating effect on the individual. As soon as familiarity with his duties has lightened his task, he inevitably compares the amount of money involved in the transactions coming under his direction with the amount of the salary he receives and he soon convinces himself to his own satisfaction that he is worth more than he earns.

This is a very human trait. One young man made this discovery and made application to the official in charge of the staff of a large company for an increase in salary. This officer thereupon asked him "Why?" The young man in question replied "Because I believe I am worth more than I am getting." The official then told the young man that he was in good company, that the President, Vice-President and the other officers of the organization all thought that they, too, were worth more than they received. He further went on to explain that this was quite natural, for when any man thought he was being paid an adequate salary for his labors, from that moment he was on the down grade, his progress was at an end.

On another occasion a second young graduate in the company appealed to his officer to tell him what his prospects for the future were. The official thereupon pointed out to him the rate of growth of the company and showed him how in the not too distant future many new positions of responsibility would be created which would be occupied by a source from the company's employ. He also told him that the question could better be answered by himself, for he must have a sufficiently accurate idea from his work and experience in the time he had been connected with the company of how the increased responsibility and effectiveness with his fellow workers. The officer did not tell him, however, that that very visit and question was a condition of death for him. He demonstrated that the young graduate had already faced that question in his own mind and had not been content with the result. The man who has made good has not needed to ask what his future prospects were. He had been able to form his own judgment and had had the confidence to stand or fall by it.

Another disturbing element which often affects the young graduate who has joined the ranks of a big business organization is also a question of salary. Probably he hears of some friend or acquaintance employed in a small firm or business house who is making much more rapid progress than himself, judging by a comparison of salaries received. Apparently, therefore, it would seem to be a positive disadvantage to join a large instead of a small organization.

No one questions, however, the advisability of investing money in a Dominion of Canada bond where the rate of interest is less than four and three quarters per cent compared with six per cent or even more which might be secured by investing in some industrial or other bonds. One readily recognizes that the lower interest return is the sacrifice made for the assurance that both principal and interest will be paid when due. Putting this in another way, it may be said that the extra interest return on the non-government bonds is an insurance premium received against the possible loss of either the principal or interest involved or both. Exactly the same principle applies in employment. In times when business is good, very little risk is run, no matter who the employer may be, but in the periodical depressions which have occurred in the past many men holding responsible positions and in receipt of good salaries have suddenly lost both at the very worst time in which to seek employment.

Big business needs men of administrative caliber as never before. These it expects to obtain from the university, for its graduates are the result of a highly selective process. Big business offers advantages to the men it needs that they cannot afford to neglect. Every man who enters the ranks of big business can rise as fast as his ability will carry him, and the organization will always be bigger than the man.

AUTO-INTOXICATION VS. OUR FLOAT

I tell you, I just don't know what's coming over Akkie, I guess she's got religion. You've heard the campus gossip, about her being up to the May Queen honor to Martha Minihan. Well, that was the first blow! Then she reads that article in The Kernel about "Get in the game, do your bit," so she sez to me, "I feel that it is my duty to uplift the university and do something worthy for I Tappa Keg, so you and me are gonna fix a float."

"Well, let's hear the grand idea. Are we going to be rosebuds in the garden of youth, or are we going to be 'Thou shalt not's,' for the woman's self government?" "Now, do you think that would get a prize? (Oh, ho—so this was the reason for the high-mindedness!) That's staid; we're going to be yeast advertisements."

PROBLEM Average Student is the Chief Worry at Northwestern University, According to Professor

"The problem of the average student, not the student who heads his class, is the most difficult of all our problems at Northwestern University," said Professor Delton T. Howard, director of personnel of that university, in a recent lecture.

"THE TERM 'COLLEGIATE'" What is the vision that is reflected in the mind's eye of the average American when he hears the term "Collegiate?" It is a boy who is dressed in the extreme style of the day, goes to college for a good time, owns a sporty-looking eight-cylinder roadster, and has "dates" about eight nights out of every seven.

ROUND THE WORLD Second Year COLLEGE CRUISE

"I have talked with many such students and after considering his traits and tendencies, I feel that basically this student lacks idealism. He is apparently the victim of a wrong conception characteristic of today's social standards. He says, 'Well, what's the use? Everybody seems to be after money and pleasure; why should I drudge and save and deny myself? Why should I study to obtain high classroom averages? Money talks and I do not think that my college standing makes a great deal of difference.'"

CHARACTER OF THE SUITS AND TOPCOATS

"We believe that the average student of the American colleges of this era knows more about what is going on in the world today than the average student could tell him things about politics that he never dreamed about. We believe that the student could tell him things about the situation in China that would amaze him. The student could probably tell him how to raise his hogs more profitably, his corn in greater abundance, his wheat of better quality, or how to do his plowing quicker and with less effort. The so-called "collegiate" youth of America would welcome a chance to refute this criticism by long-faced pessimists. A challenge is issued to these "wise ones" to prove their charges or "pipe down."—Exchange.

Coach Pribble's Freshman Nine Clash With du Pont Manual High Saturday

PRIBBLE'S MEN CLASH WITH MANUAL

More meet will be thrown to Coach Pribble's diamond artists tomorrow afternoon when Louisville Manual will furnish the opposition on the home lot. Hostilities will begin at 3 o'clock.

Last Saturday afternoon the young cats got the better end of a 4-3 score, the victims being the Peacode high school nine.

Although little is known concerning the strength of the Louisville pastimes, they always put a skilled and fast aggregation of ball players on the diamond every year. Manual is noted for the prowess of her football and basketball teams, and her baseball aspirations have not resulted in failures.

Coach Pribble will probably start the same line-up against Manual as he used to subdue the Peacode boys. Major, who concentrates his attention on first base, is an Illinois protégé and a brother of next year's coach of the varsity nine. Major has been going in faultless style, and if his good work continues, fans will probably see him wearing a Wildcat uniform next season. Covington and Pope will occupy the shortstop and second base positions respectively. Rhodes will be stationed at the hot corner. Brunell, Torok, and Dunn will look after the outfield duties for the freshmen tomorrow.

Not to let the Kitten go stale because of lack of practice a game with M. M. I. has been carded for Monday afternoon on Stoll field.

Kentucky Frosh Track Team Scores Big Over Tennessee in Recent Telegraphic Meet

The freshman track team of the University of Kentucky defeated the University of Tennessee frosh by a score of 78 points to 36 in a telegraphic meet held Saturday afternoon. Each team ran its events on its own field and the results were telegraphed to the other.

Elrod, of the University of Kentucky won the 100-yard dash in 10 seconds flat, while Sisk tied with Tennessee for second place with 11-3-5 seconds. Elrod also won the 220-yard dash in 22-2-5 seconds, while Sisk again came first in 22-3-5. The Kittens also came first and second in the 440-yard dash with Inman in 55 seconds and Johnstone 55-2-5.

The 880-yard dash was won by another Kentucky man, Owens, in 2:10-2-4. Tennessee came second with 2:14. Tennessee took the mile run in 16 minutes, 50 seconds, while Fields, of the Kitten squad, ran second in 16:54-1-5. Rhodomyre, of Kentucky, was the only entry in the two mile run. His time was 10:58-1-5. Rhodomyre also took first place in the pole vault, clearing the bar at 10 feet, 3 inches. Hill, of Kentucky, and a Tennessee man tied for second place in the event with 9 feet vaulted.

Williams, of Kentucky, took first place in the 120-yard high hurdles. His time was 17 seconds flat. Tennessee ran second with their best time 19 seconds. Williams also took the 220-yard low hurdles in 28-2-5 seconds.

CARDINAL NINE DEFEATS 'CATS

The Wildcat team was defeated by the Cardinals of the University of Louisville Tuesday afternoon on Parkway field in Louisville by a score of 12 to 2.

Red Bach replaced McGary for pitcher in the second half of the sixth, but the Cardinals greeted him with just as warm a reception as that given to McGary.

This victory puts the Cardinals still another notch closer to the Kentucky title. They meet Georgetown Saturday, and a victory over the Tigers would give them an almost clear claim to the state championship.

WILDCATS MEET TENNESSEE TODAY

In the baseball game this afternoon against the strong Tennessee Nine on the Stoll Field at 3 o'clock the probable line-up will be:

First base—Cole.
Second base—Blasingame.
Third base—Crouch.
Center field—Layman.
Right field—Francesway.
Catcher—Erierson, captain.
Pitcher—West or McGary.
Shortstop—Gibb.

This is the second game this season with Tennessee team, which was one of the best teams in the South last year, and which has already set sail for another good season. Though he met the Cardinals in the Wildcat on their trip South last week, with Captain Erierson catching, the cats hope for better luck today, and expect to cope on equal terms with the Tennessee aggregation.

TRACK MEN GO TO SEWANEE FRIDAY

The track team of the University of Kentucky will leave Friday morning for Sewanee, where it will meet the strong track team of Sewanee, Saturday afternoon, May 7th. The Kentucky team has not been to a meet since it was defeated by Tennessee two weeks ago, but Coach Brady has had his men on the cinder paths every day, and the Kentuckians are at the top of their form.

A meet was scheduled with Centre College last week, but Coach Mountjoy, of the Colonels, felt reluctant about meeting the flying Wildcats before the State meet and cancelled the match.

Kentucky showed real strength in the Tennessee meet of two weeks ago, and the meet was only decided in the final event, the relay. The score in this meet was 60-1-2 to 56-1-2 with the valiant Bill Gess winning two first places and coming close to winning relay after making up a long gap in a terrific burst of speed.

The trackmen whom Coach Brady will take to Sewanee are: Captain Creech, Kirkendall, Blasingame, Gess, Hicklin, Griffin, Cochran, West, Ring, R. I. McIntosh, Elliot, Kavanaugh, and Kentz.

WANTED — Students' stenographic work. Reasonable charge. Call evenings at 4985. Susie Johns. —Adv.

The boys of the Jamestown University have set aside three days in which they will have no dates unless the expense is borne by the maker. It seems that the co-eds were courageous date makers, and the event is unusually successful.

FRESHMEN MEET TECH TRACK TEAM

The Kentucky freshmen will have another track meet by telegraph, next Saturday with the freshmen of Georgia Tech. Last Saturday the Kittens ran away with the Tennessee Frosh by a score of 70-36.

It is understood that Georgia Tech has a fast team which means that the local frosh will have to work harder than they have in previous meets this year, although McLane should win the high jump. Elrod will probably win the 100-yard dash as his time Saturday was 10 flat. D. Williams should win the hurdle races again and Owens is making good time in the half mile run. Rhodomyre is a very good two-miler, and should win the event. The freshmen are weakest in the weight events.

Last Saturday, the Varsity men ran against the freshmen and it happened that the Kittens won most of the events from them.

It looks as if the Wildcat team should be strengthened by this year's freshmen.

Poets of the University of Alabama have their manuscripts now in the hands of the publishers at New York. This is the fourth volume of poetry which has been published from this institution, and the former volumes have received favorable criticism from John V. Weaver, James Sax Childers, Carl Sandburg, and others.

MODEL HIGH NOSES OUT MASSIE

At a dual track meet held on Saturday morning the University High school defeated Massie school and, at the same time, was given a silver cup.

George Whitlow, of University High, was awarded a medal for high point honors. He was victor in the 100-yard dash, 220-yard low hurdles and 120-yard high hurdles and was commended for his speed in all the events. He is held to be one of the best prospects for the state meet to be held at Georgetown.

Hawkins, Massie, was second in the race for points, winning the 440-yard and 880-yard relay. The relay was won by the University High team being composed of Thompson, Howard, Powell and Bradley.

Following are the detailed results of the meet:

100-yard dash, Whitlow, University high, first; Wilson, Massie, second. Time, 10-1-5.

One mile run—Jewell, Massie, first; Anderson, University high, second. Time, 5:16.

220-yard dash—Wilson, Massie, first; Bradley, University high, second. Time, 24.

Shot Put—Crawe, Massie, first; Johnson, University high, second. Distance 36 feet.

Pole vault—Howard, University high, first; Maxson, Massie, second. Height, eight feet three inches.

Relay—University high, first.

Garwood, mining engineer at the New Orient mine, of the Chicago, Wilmington and Franklin Coal Co., at West Frankfort, Ill., visited the University of Kentucky Friday and gave a lecture to the students in mining and members of the State Department of Mines on the layout and the general operation of the mine which has the record of producing more coal in one day than any coal mine in the world.

Mr. R. J. Foster, a graduate in mining engineering from the University of Kentucky is also employed in an executive capacity with the same company, and Mr. L. D. Smith, vice-president in charge of operations, also received instruction in mining at the University of Kentucky.

Design Scenery

Art Classes Work on "Sister Beatrice" Production

The advanced classes in art under the direction of Mr. Sax are designing some of the scenery to be used in "Sister Beatrice," the Roman theater's forthcoming play.

The scenery is treated in an imaginative manner, as the play refers to no historical period, but is purely creative. The two angels on which Mr. Sax is working, and which are to be used in the cathedral set, are designed so as to give the illusion of mosaic work. Mr. Sax said, "that while the style is vague the inspiration came from the Byzantine."

MANY ENROLL IN TRAINING CLASS

Thirty-three Girls Take Scout Work Under the Direction of Miss Conant Who Teaches Organized Recreation

WILL GO ON HIKE MAY 3

Thirty-three girls, representing all the colleges and classes of the University enrolled last week in a Girl Scout training class under the direction of Miss Edith Conant, of the education department of Girl Scouts. The class which will continue for two weeks meets every day in the recreation room of Patterson hall, from 3 to 4:30 o'clock.

According to Miss Conant, the purpose of the course is to teach organized recreation for girls and to give training in citizenship and home-making. A special emphasis is placed on outdoor life. Girls are taught games, songs, handicrafts, and all the other invaluable things for which the Girl Scouts of America are organized.

Many of the girls who are taking Miss Conant's course are planning to secure camp positions during the summer. For this reason, Miss Ray Mitchell, the regional director of Kentucky, Ohio and West Virginia, will visit the class with the view of securing trained counselors for her camps in those regions.

These Girl Scout training courses are being given in all colleges and universities throughout the country at the present time. There is no charge for the courses.

On Tuesday, May 3, members of the scout class went on a "supper hike." The cooked their own supper in hand-made utensils. These cooking utensils, fashioned of strong green bark incapable of burning, were made by the girls. On the way, a trail was "blazed" by using the different signs known to scouts.

Laddie Gray, Noted Six-Year-Old Pianist Is Interviewed by Kernel Reporter; Has Won Many Prizes

(By KADY ELVOVE)

An interview with Laddie! I confess that I was rather nervous as I hurried to the men's gymnasium, for I had never before interviewed a celebrity, much less a child prodigy. But summoning my courage, I went behind the stage and there I met him. Picture a tiny little boy, with large dark eyes, a shock of light brown hair falling over his forehead, a cherubic smile—and you have Laddie. Madame Gray-Lhevinné, gracious and charming, came forward, and I stated my mission.

"Why, of course you may interview Laddie," she smiled at me. "Laddie, here's someone who's going to write a story about you."

Laddie looked up. His grandmother, who is accompanying her distinguished daughter and her talented little grandson on their present tour, was holding out a little, white, brocaded frock-coat, and Laddie slipped his arms in before replying.

"Hello, he said in a clear, sweet voice, and held out his hand. He was perfectly cool and totally unembarrassed.

"Hello, Laddie. Aren't you scared to death about playing for all those people in there?" I asked curiously. "What is there to be scared about," he answered, raising his head and looking at me from under long dark lashes.

"Well," I admitted ruefully, "when I was much bigger than you are now, I used to be as scared as could be when I had to play just one piece in a piano recital."

Laddie seemed puzzled. "What is there to be afraid of?" he asked again, and his grandmother, laughing softly, placed her hand on his forehead and spoke proudly. "No, Laddie is never afraid to play. He knows there is nothing to fear."

The time for the commencement of the program was approaching and so I hurried back to my seat on the front row, not however, before Madame Gray-Lhevinné had cordially invited me to come back after the concert. The noisy audience which almost filled the huge gymnasium suddenly grew silent, and glancing up, I saw Madame Gray-Lhevinné, her dark eyes shining with friendliness, sitting on the stage. Her voice rich and warm filled the large room.

"We're so glad to be with you. This is our first visit to your beautiful Kentucky and we love it already." And then, with a sudden flourish, she drew her bow, and the gaily, lilting strains of a Kreisler air rang out as only the "world's greatest woman violinist" could make it.

But it is not my purpose to describe the playing of Madame Gray-Lhevinné. It was her six-year-old son, Laddie. I had come to see. It is enough to say, however, that the audience agreed with the New York Times when it said of her: "The most fascinating violin personality in all the world—plays straight into the hearts of the masses."

Finally, Madame Gray-Lhevinné, with a last bow, retired. Some children who were sitting beside me suddenly moved restlessly and straightened up. A little girl in a pink apron nudged her small companion. "We're going to hear Mozart," she whispered exultingly. "Look, isn't he cute," and there on the stage, clad in silken, nose, lace ruffles, and embroidered coat—exact replica of the costume worn by Mozart when he played before the kings and queens of Europe stood Laddie. With a stiff little bow he announced his first number and then began to play. With a repertoire of selections from Mozart, Bach, and Beethoven, the young boy played with a vigor remarkable for a child whose little fingers could not even reach an octave. We he left the stage, the audience repeatedly called him back, and he came forward, bowing his little bow.

At his second entrance, Laddie entered, dressed in a short, black velvet suit, trimmed with a white silk collar, and with a jaunty black tam perched upon his curls. This time he played three difficult numbers by Tchaikowsky. He concluded his program with Chopin's "Polonaise," which showed the strength and swiftness of the little hands.

When it was all over, Laddie was surrounded by an admiring crowd. He took great delight in shaking hands with each one, and he laughed when one old lady sought in vain to remove her hand from his grasp. "Had a little job getting it away, didn't you?" he chuckled.

"Mercy," exclaimed the astonished old lady, "Where did you get all that strength?"

"I buy my strength," was Laddie's unusual reply. "I buy my strength from the sunshine," and Laddie laughed again at the good lady's amazement.

When the people had finally departed, Madame Gray-Lhevinné turned to me. "You see he isn't a forced product in a musical sense. He is away above par physically and that is the secret of everything." She pointed at her son who was capering carelessly about the floor of the gymnasium, unmindful of observation. "Laddie's a California product."

Madame Gray-Lhevinné is passionately fond of her home state and boasts about it with all the ardor of a native Californian.

Laddie Gray, who is only six years old, is already in the fourth grade. He is especially fond of mythology and is far ahead of his fellow classmates in arithmetic. Many physical culture magazines have vied with each other in printing a picture of him, for he has won many health prizes. With his mother, Laddie has made four or five trips to Europe and he recently returned from a trip to Nome, Alaska.

The little son of the noted violinist showed marked musical talent before he was four years old. At four and a half, he gave his first public piano recital. Last spring, during Music Week, Laddie appeared in the large Civic Auditorium of San Francisco and played before several thousand people. He is not allowed to give any public recitals.

"You see," his mother said, "we want mothers everywhere to realize the importance of letting their children begin their music training early. That is why we let Laddie play for the public during Music Week."

"Do you intend to keep up with your music, Laddie?" I asked as we prepared to leave the gymnasium. Laddie nodded vigorously. "Yes, of course," and then with a gay "goodbye" he ran out of the door.

Beautiful, charming, talented, son of a fascinating mother, with music in his heart and strength in his body and mind, what a career lies open for Laddie Gray!

SKATING DERBY NEW FEATURE AT U. OF K.

Winslow Avenue will be the scene of the first Roller Skating Derby at the University of Kentucky, Saturday, May 7, at 2 o'clock. Because of the interest in roller skating this spring, many enthusiasts will take part and help make this new sport feature a success.

Races for all classes of students will be included on the list of events. There will be three races for the girls. These are 100-yard, 400-yard and 800-yard dashes. A relay composed of four skaters will compete in the 100-yard relay race. Also there are three races open to the boys, including the dashes and the relay race.

The winners of each of the events will receive a handsome trophy. The cups are now on display in the window of the "K" Shop, and are well worth winning. Coach Potter, who is sponsoring the skating derby, announces that more than sixty persons have already signed up, and he requests that all entries be in no later than Friday afternoon. It is reported that some of the star athletes will run off at a feature race, which should, at least, prove very entertaining. Ted Cressch will be the official announcer of the events.

At the University of Illinois, the only university at which skating derby has become an annual affair, about 3,000 students took part in the last running.

It is hoped that the students will try their skill at skating, and that in years to come the Skating Derby will be an annual event at the University of Kentucky. Any student is eligible, and all are urged to enter. Dean Sarah Blanding has given her approval of the event, and urges all the coeds of the university to compete.

Mr. Hansen was recently unanimously elected president of the department of physical education of the Kentucky Educational Association at a meeting held recently in Louisville.

For a number of years he has been connected with the university as physical instructor and has become very well known as a referee of football and basketball games all over the state. He will leave for New York on June 25, and will go from there to his summer position.

STATE FROSH STRIKE OUT PICADOME

The Kentucky Kittens trimmed the crack Picadome High school baseball nine in the initial game of the season for the U. K. athletes, 4 to 3, on Stoll field last Saturday afternoon. Consist hitting in the first inning and abundant pitching in the other seven and a half stanzas characterized the game throughout.

The Kittens took the field at the beginning of the game, and although the Picadome boys touched Page for a run in the first, the green and white came back in their first half of the first and forced ahead with a two-run rally. Rhodes, first man up in the inning, cracked out a sizzling single over shortstop. Major hit a triple, scoring Rhodes and Torok's single scored Majors. The Kittens scored again in the third on two walks and Rhodes' two bagger. Their final tally came in the seventh when Meyer's single brought home Pope, who had walked and stole second.

The Bonhomie, Furman University year book, will come the press between May 20 and May 25.

the business department (no article is complete without a crack at the business department) and we leave you to guess who emerged victorious. We have turned our eyes in another direction and stopped up our ears as the strutting drum-major and the "best hand in Dixie" went gallily by, and made a conscientious endeavor to go on reading papers. We have torn our hair and executed writings of a distinctly Oriental origin upon finding one letter more than the accepted count in our eagerly sought-after "head."

In one short week we have learned all the tricks of the trade. We have even learned a new way to spell the three simple words "head to come," the new way being "hed to kum." How about that? The four walls of this old office could tell strange tales if they were so inclined. They could tell how the ever-present cloud of dense smoke has given way to the fresh May will then observe a precedent which calls for a lunch composed of near-beer, pickles, hot dogs and other indigestibles. Half an hour of this distasteful is allowed, and the staff again works. The last bit of work will probably be done at 1 a. m., and the "dog watch" will be left to catch any late crumbs of news. The paper goes to press at 2:15 a. m.

program, which is colorful and varied, including ritualistic music of the various churches.

University of Kentucky students may secure seats without cost by purchasing athletic ticket No. 50 at the Campus Book store before May 7. At the seats are going fast, students are urged to act quickly.

Despite the disconcerting influence of dates, May Day gossip, and classes which, like the poet, we have always with us, Theta Sigs have at last gotten together a mass of copy which we present to you (with all apologies, of course) in the form of The Kernel. And now our day of editorial supremacy is over, and we once more resign The Kernel (none the worse for its adventure, we hope) to the eager hands of its customary custodians.

ROMANY TO PLAY SISTER BEATRICE

Miracles are performed before the very eyes of the audience, and not one seems to wonder what strange mechanical devices are employed to obtain the effect. It is a spectacle that lives forever in the memory of those who witness it.

Story Similar to "Miracle"
The story of "Sister Beatrice" is very similar to that of "The Miracle," the great pageant of Max Rhinehardt that has inspired nations. The sacrificial nun forsakes her vows and enters the world. After bitter experience she returns to the convent to die. Meanwhile, the Virgin has descended from her pedestal and performed the duty of the sacristan during her absence. While, "Sister Beatrice" is absent her divine substitute performs the simple tasks of the sacristan and through her super-natural powers achieves wonder-working miracles. These scenes are interspersed with "The Blind, the lame and the halt are restored to a normal state. The dead live.

Cast Includes Sixty
A cast of more than sixty is used in "Sister Beatrice." A group of nun, attired in the habiliments resembling those of the Dominicans, order, chant strange Gregorian hymns and go about their solemn offices with a great effectiveness.

The part of "Sister Beatrice" is taken by Miss Dunster Duncan Foster, managing director of the Romany. Edward Bell, former student at the university essays the role of Prince Bellidor. The part of the mother superior is taken by Mr. T. T. Jones, one of the most successful actresses and actors; Margaret Gooch, Rachelle Shacklett, Jane Gooch, Alice Whittinghill, Christine Johnson, Sylvia Schwartz, Edna Mitchell, Phillip Montague, John Crosby, William Upham, Bennet Tucker, Gay Loughridge, Jean Lowry, Ann Worthington, Dean Bertha Wells, and Nancy Jane Mohney.

The following are cast as nuns: Misses Freddie Jones, Katherine McGinnis, Belle Nelson, Catherine Redmond, Dolly Cox, Elizabeth Thompson, Katherine Hopkins, Elizabeth Welch, Maxine Parker, Billups, Jessie Marie Clements, Ruth Jane Lee, Martha Bruce Loughridge, Alice Young, Mary Clynes, Mary Flora, Margaret Tracy, and Rankin Harris.

Those who play the part of beggars are: Martha Minihan, Frank Brown, Wilhelm Lampert, William Lowning, Richard Martin, Marcia Lowning, and Edna Fisk.

Miss Maxine Parker is the statue of the Virgin in the first and third acts. The play is directed by Prof. C. M. Sax assisted by Miss Jeanette Lampert and Mrs. Sallie Bullock. The costumes and scenery for "Sister Beatrice" may be obtained at the box office of the Romany. The play is being presented each evening of the week, with the exception of Wednesday when performance has been suspended because of the Central Kentucky Choral Society's presentation of Hayden's oratorio, "The Creation."

HOLIDAY BRINGS OUT GALA SPIRIT

physical education department. May Day at the university has come to be an affair complicated by the addition of new features every year. Today, with its "gingham dance," May Day bears little resemblance to the simple, unadorned girls' dancing exhibitions of five years ago. If hitherto there has been no set date for a May Day program, but this year the university is establishing a tradition that the sixth of May shall be always set aside in the year to come as "Kentucky May Day."

Solemn and dignified in caps and gowns, the seniors will assemble at 10 o'clock this morning in front of the Administration building. Then, with the band playing the "March of 'On, On, U. of K.," their battle cry for four years, they will march to the men's gymnasium, and, before the admiring eyes of underclassmen and friends, will take the seats reserved for them. President McVey, speaking to them at their first full public assembly this year, will deliver the May Day address, to which the senior class orator, Woodson Scott, will reply.

An innovation of this morning's program will be the presentation of prizes and awards for scholastic excellence. Formerly, these awards were given at Commencement. Bronze medallions, offered by the New York Sorority for outstanding service on the part of those who are judged most worthy by a university committee, will be presented by President McVey to two university students and one non-student. Various awards for athletic achievements will also be distributed.

Still clad in their black robes, the seniors will then gather on the campus and one of their number will plant a tree, in memory of the class. The tree is a symbol of the class; for just as it daily gathers strength and gives its service of shade to the campus, so is the class, which it symbolizes, to gather strength and give to the world the service for which it was prepared by the university.

At one o'clock this afternoon, with the university band leading the way, a long train of flower-decked floats, flying ribbons and streamers of every hue, will leave the campus and parade slowly down the principal streets of Lexington. Then, on Stoll field, at the height of a gala day, with all the pomp and ceremony befitting, Miss Martha Minihan, will be crowned "Queen of May." To the music of the band, peasant lads and lassies dressed in quaint bright-colored costumes, will dance about the May pole in honor of their queen and her attendants.

Tonight the freshman boys and girls will light a mighty bonfire on Stoll field, and in it they will burn the caps and armbands, badges of their first college year. The freshman bonfire is another comparatively new custom. It was sponsored for the first time last year by the Nu Circle of Omicron Delta Kappa, national campus leaders fraternity, in the hope that it would become a university tradition.

Finally at 9 o'clock tonight, seniors will not only give their own congratulatory letters, faculty members and grave alumni will lay away their decorous mien, and mingling with underclassmen, will conclude May Day of 1927 with a "gingham dance" held in the men's gymnasium.

Printed programs will be distributed this morning by the May Day committee, composed of John Bullock, Bob McGary and Sam Manley.

SET MAY 28 AS 'OLD GRAD' DAY

Class Day exercises, the annual alumni meeting, with election of officers, will be held at 11:30 in the Romany theater.

At 12:30 the alumni, together with the seniors, faculty, and board of trustees, will be the guests of the university at a luncheon at Boyd hall. The program will consist of a greeting to the alumni by President McVey, an address of welcome to the seniors by Raymond Kirk, secretary of the Alumni Association, and community singing under the direction of Dr. L. B. McMullen. Mrs. Eda Giles will be in charge of the luncheon.

Following the luncheon any of the alumni who desire may play golf at the Ashland Golf Club, on application to "Daddy" Boles or Prof. J. C. Jones for guest privileges. The regular fee for golfers will be charged.

In the afternoon from 4:30 to 6 o'clock President and Mrs. McVey will entertain the alumni with a tea at Maxwell Place. The plans for the evening are not definite as yet, but an entertainment will be held in honor of the alumni at which time either the Strollers will repeat their play "The Truth About Blaydes" or there will be a repetition of "Trial by Jury" by the Glee Club.

STROLLER CLUB ORGANIZED 1909

fourth attempt; and was produced in 1914. The custom of Amateur Night was originated in this same year, and has been the annual custom since that time. At this time the members decided to have a contest in planning the design of a pin for the organization. Mr. Sandman designed the winning pin, and the same pin is used now. The Strollers voted to give each person who had a speaking part in their play a pin and each speaking part after the first was to entitle the person to a prairi in the pin. The president was to receive a diamond in his pin. This custom has been retained with the addition that the publicity staff, after a year's work, receives a pin with the power to obtain a pearl in the second year.

In 1915, "Charlie's Aunt" was chosen, and was said to be the most finished of Stroller productions. At this time Professor Farquhar resigned as counsellor and Professor Weaver was elected in his place. The play was repeated in both Mt. Sterling and Georgetown. With the money made from these trips a banquet was given and all members received favors. "Fathers and Boys" was the next play and it met with great success. Following the precedent of the year previous, a banquet was again given. The next play of any importance was "The Thirteenth Chair" given in 1922. It was to have been given in Lexington first, but news of the death of Mrs. Frank McVey caused the cancelling of all engagements for the week, and it was decided to take the play on the road before its presentation in Lexington. It was presented in Paris, Georgetown, Richmond, Middleboro and Princeton.

Then have come these plays, "Lady Windemere's Fan," "Seventeen," "Fifty-Fifty," and "Icebound." Each has appeared in surrounding towns. This year's play is the eighteenth production of Strollers. It promises to be the best yet produced by the organization.

Madame Gray-Lhevaine used two old and beautiful violins. One was made in 1675 of wood then 200 years old taken from the altar of a church in Italy. The other, undersize, and especially made for a small hand, was once the property of Mozart, and was rescued from a repair shop by Madame Gray-Lhevaine during the California earthquake in 1906. Because of her heroic efforts to save the instrument, the violin was given Madame Gray-Lhevaine.

Such awkwardness would be highly deplorable in even the least experienced of burglars. Practical jokers are warned to keep away from the honor in function. With the amiable gentleman wandering about with the club, and the police patrolling with pistols, any joke would not be greeted with laughter. It is hoped that our collegiate fun-makers will hold their sense of humor in check.

Not to be read 'til 1950

"In this year of 1950," said the celebrated engineer in his Commencement address, "the electrical communication industry is just entering upon its vigorous prime."

"As the nineteenth century was termed the Age of Power, so may this period be well called the Age of Communication—so fully have communication ways and means been developed.

"It was a 1927 marvel to talk between New York and London, but now we may talk to any point on the globe, and to and from moving points at will. And of course we all know what has been achieved in projecting pictures from a distance.

"This great and growing field of communication, far from completed, is opening up constantly greater opportunity, not only for technically trained men but also for men in various commercial and professional activities—the man who in increasing numbers will always be needed to sell and administer the services which the engineers create."
