Board OKs capital request

The Board of Trustees voted yesterday to ask the state for almost $320 million for capital construction projects and $24 million for equipment.

The requests were part of a capital request for 1998-2000 for the University system, hospital and community college system. Every two years the University must submit its plans for major construction projects and equipment expenses to the state for approval.

The total amount of money involved in the request was more than $685 million garnered from state, federal and other sources. That represents an increase of 17 percent over the last capital request two years ago, Wethington said.

But this request is "roughly the same as two years ago," he said, and the increased amount is "largely due to inflation and the prevailing wage."

The request will be submitted to the Council on Postsecondary Education, which will then make a recommendation to the governor and the General Assembly.

The University system's highest priority of new construction projects would come from funding made available through the sale of South Farm.

Other projects include an anthropology building, a center for graduate studies and research support services and an addition to Erikson Hall.

Over 53 percent of the buildings on UK campus were built before 1965, Carter said.

A research equipment replacement program was also part of the request. The University system has an equipment inventory of more than $275 million.

STATE Foreman, Frazier added to Ali tribute list

LOUISVILLE — Two more heavy hitters have been added to a star-studded weekend tribute to former heavyweight champion Muhammad Ali.

Former heavyweight champions George Foreman and Joe Frazier — who battled Ali in several of the most memorable fights in the history of the sport — have been added to the roster for Saturday's Ali Tribute to Amateur Boxing. The gala will end the week-long Muhammad Ali Cup International Amateur Boxing Challenge.

Already scheduled to attend are Evander Holyfield and Mike Tyson, their first appearance together since their June fight in which Tyson was disqualified for twice biting Holyfield on the ear. The tribute also will feature a miniconcert by singer Natalic Cole; a reading of Ali's words by actor James Earl Jones; jokes by comedian and actor Jeff Foxworthy; and some lighthearted rounds of boxing, featuring the likes of Holyfield, Ken Norton and Ali himself taking on local celebrities, such as Kentucky basketball coach Tubby Smith and Louisville basketball coach Denny Crum.

NATION Female AIDS cases rise

CHICAGO — The number of AIDS cases among women is rising more quickly than among men, and sex with infected men has overtaken drug use as the leading cause of infection among women, federal researchers say.

"Prevention efforts remain critical," the researchers said, particularly since those women who are most at risk can be difficult to educate because of poverty, substance abuse, alcoholism and other problems.

From 1991 through 1995, the number of women diagnosed with AIDS increased by 63 percent versus 12-8 percent for men.

By the end of 1995, 67, 400 women nationwide had been diagnosed as having AIDS since the epidemic began, with 11,500 of them being diagnosed in 1995.

Auckson urges boycott of professor

AUSTIN, Texas — The Rev. Jesse Jackson told University of Texas students yesterday to skip classes taught by a law professor who said black and Mexican American students can't compete with white students.

"We're not the problem, he is the problem," Jackson told the nearly $5,000 students assembled below the steps of the campus' main tower. "You have no obligation to be in his class."

Lino Graglia, a67-year-old professor of constitutional law, made his remarks last week during the announcement of a student organization.

"Blacks and Mexican-Americans are not academically competitive with whites in selective institutions," Graglia said then. "It is the result primarily of cultural effects. They have a culture that seems not to encourage achievement. Failure is not looked upon with disgrace."

Graglia in a statement yesterday stood by his opposition to affirmative action programs, but that his comments were misinterpreted, although he "regrets that the result has been an emotional confrontation."

Shakur murder suspect 'admired him'

LOS ANGELES — A man police consider a suspect in Tupac Shakur's slaying, and who is named in a wrongful death lawsuit by Shakur's mother, maintains he was the rapper's biggest fan. Orlando Anderson says he followed every twist of Shakur's career until the man was killed in Las Vegas on Sept. 7, 1996.

"I didn't have anything to do with Tupac's murder," said Anderson, 23, of Lakewood. "To me Tupac was like a hero. I admired him. I respected his music. Everybody I know had love for him. Shakur's mother filed a wrongful-death lawsuit against Anderson on Friday, alleging he fired the shots that killed her son. Los Angeles police sources told the Times they still consider Anderson a suspect, although Las Vegas police said they have no direct evidence.

SGA, RHA to circulate petition for support of elevator

A petition for an elevator in the Kir-wan-Blanding Complex Commons will circulate next week, and the number of signatures needed is clear. As many as possible. Student Government Association President Melanic Cruz met with Chris Bederka and other volunteers from SGA's Disabled Student Concerns Committee yesterday afternoon to discuss the eleva-tor petition, which students can sign starting next week in honor of Disabled

Students Awareness Week.

The petition was supposed to start today, but the committee decided SGA should concentrate on issues they can deal with immediately, rather than long-term projects like the elevator, Cruz said.

Both the Residence Hall Association and SGA will set up booths in the Student Center and in the associations' office, Cruz said.

Although the petition will give students an opportunity to act on concerns about accessibility for the disabled, Bederka said campus groups should not "pursue 'this avenue of challenge' because attention is needed in other areas at UK, such as North Campus.

"I understand the financing issue with the dormitories," said Bederka, a thirdy-gear social work major. "If there's nobody disabled in the Commons, then it's a moot point."

According to the petition, both associations wrote that they have "seen a rising need for many students to get to the third floor in order to use study areas, computer labs and to attend organizational meetings."

computers at all; but his own computer from Microcomputer Analysts on South-land Drive.

Overall, he said an elevator in the Commons "is not an emergency need, so why should we focus all our efforts on the Commons building?"

On the other hand, "It's exciting to see an interest on behalf of the students for being advocates to other students," said Melanie Tyner-Wilson, assistant director of Residence Life. "(The elevator) is definitely something to investigate."

For UK, the question isn't whether Martin recalled a day before practice last season in which Hiles spoke words that really hit home. Hiles was working out on the field, doing some extra running and drills to improve his footwork when Martin approached him.

"I asked him "What are you doing out here? and he said, "Man, I'm trying to get ready for that next level."

Cats and Cards going in opposite directions

8-1 UK battles 1-7 Louisville

By Jay G. Tate

It didn't initially seem like a disaster. Or maybe it did.

UK, in the middle of a sub-par 1996 season, was playing like a winner. It was up two games to none against the Louisville Cardinals, who were nationally ranked and would eventually find their way to the NCAA Tournament's round of 16 the NCAA Tournament's round of 16.

UK was playing like a championship-caliber team. It was a total performance. Total domination. Total execution. Total execution. Total execution. Total execution to the execution of the performance. Total execution in turn, lost a lot more.

"We got so close last year and played so well for those first two games," outside hitter Katte Eisernan said. "After we lost that game, our confidence went way down. All of our season momentum disappeared after that match."

Eiserman and the rest of the Cats will be able to make amends tonight as they renew the intrastate rivalry against the Cardinals at Louisville as they renew the intrastate rivalry against the Cardinals at Louisville p.m.

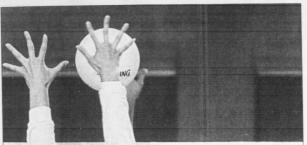

against the Cardinals at Dolusmy of Gardens. The match begins at 7 p.m.

The scenes surrounding this year's matches (UK will host U of L later in the season) couldn't be any more diametrically opposed. The Cardinals have not only loot matches — U of L has stumbled to a miserable 1-7 mark — but they've lost personnel as well.

Key seniors Stephanie Storen and Jackie Byrne, a middle blocker, was among NCAA leaders in hirting efficiency throughout last season. Storen, a gritty setter, was what UK head coach Fran Flory called, "the engine that made (Louisville) rum."

Add to those losses off-season inquiries into the program which resulted in voluntary suspensions of key players Sonya Cubardulina and Marina Sinichenko and the dismissal

he ra. oks tle ike of assistant coach Mitzy Donhoff.

However, Gubiadulina has since been reinstated by the university and earned all-iournament honors at U of L's recent appearance in the Shamrock Inwitational against Notre Dame and Wisconsin, each of whom are consistent top 20 teams.
"Sonya's a big player and she'll cause up problems wherever she is," Flory said. "But I thought U of L would be a little bigger on the outside and they're not."
Cardinal head oach Leonid Yelin has a similar problem. UK outside hitter La Tanya Webb is on a tear, collecting three all-tournament selections in as many weeks. On the statistical front, she's hutter, 246 with a tean-high 170 kills.

"I am very impressed with the improvement of LaTanya Webb," Yelin said. "She is a big gun for them."

But Webb's growth has mirrored the team's growth under Flory's new "low" offense. Flory's philosophy is that lower sets result in faster fits which, in turn, work to wear down the opposition.

"They look like they are playing totally different volleyball than last year," Yelin said. "They have a cou-ple of new faces and look taller over-all."

HIGH FIVE UK freshn Weiskircher (left) goes up for the stuff. Jaclyn Homan (above) gets in position. LaTanya Webb (right) leaps a little hit higher than her foe. Webb has been a key reason for UK's early success. She leads the Wildcats with 170 kills and has already been named to three all-tournament teams.

In past years, UK and U of L have competed for players from a common recruiting pool—Louisville natives typically dotted each team's roster. But with UK's graduation losses of Gina Heustis and Ainsley Grimes, the Cats are without a starter from the River City.

"They're an in-state school, so of course there's a good rivalry there," Webb said. "It seems like whenever we play each other, everyone rises to the occasion."

P5 produces pop with campy flavor By Tom Owens

Pizzicato Five has released the most close to perfect pop confection of the year to date. Happ End of the World. Not glum, never dull, but ecstatic, effervescent ebulience rolling out of your hi-fi and all over the groovy carpet.

The P5 sound is and has always been a swinging, campy dance-pop, recalling Dece-Lite and other artists in that genre. But there's a loving silliness peppered in each song. In the past, this has made the group's albums somewhat half-half on the quality. There's only so much one can take of unadulterated cute before the more obvious elements are nauseating. Thankfully they've overcome that. With this newest record, the group has devoured over 40 years of American pop culture, repeakaged it in the latest technology, and launched it across the ocean.

Of course, when I say "pop," I'm not referring to brain-rotting ear candy cranked out by the millions. Albums sapped of creativity that follow rote commercial formulae are never welcome in my CD player. Instead, think of energetic music that constandy surprises and delights with ingenuity. Pizzicaro Five has no problem driving on under its own kinetic rhythm party. The delectable spearhead of the Japanese invasion has pared down to a duo of DJ/song-constructor Yasuharu Konishi and vocal chanteuse Maki Nomiya. Yasuharu Sampling and drum programming have reached an all-tume high, combrining musical wild cards that refuse to stop.

The world's end begins with egorgeous tones of Maki singing in Japanese accompanied by a crackly burlesque organ. It jumps into a funky rhythm-posong that, while not bad, is probably the weakest cut. Next is a jungle/breakbeat drum-fest with little la-la vocals. Now the album could continue in this vein for the next 50 minutes and some ponytailed record exec would pat himself on the back, but why should the P5 stop there? "It's a Beautiful Day," the fourth cut, features Maki's vocals again in a tune reminiscent of Serge Gainsbourg's "Obs swank-pop, backed by a cheerleading team, drum 'n' bass beats, and lot's of ba-ba-ba-ba-ba on the chorus. In fact, if you had to

Researchers pick UK over top programs

"Typically NSF postdoctoral fellows go to places such as Stan-ford, Berkeley, or MIT," Perry said. "Applicants name a proposed fellowship institution and post-doctoral advisers as part of the application, and the applications are judged in part on the 'fit' between the proposed research, the adviser and the institution. Both of these awards are a strong endorsement of UK's standing as a research university and the respect accorded its faculty."

Taylor is a recent doctoral graduate of State University of New York at Stony Brooke. Before coming to UK he was an assistant professor at the University of Michigan. Taylor arrived at UK last week and his research here will last 1-2 years.

PNC Bank loses Princeton checks

Bank 'sorry' for $1 million tuition losses

By Seth Wikas

PRINCETON, N.J. — A large number of Princeton parents got some unexpected news when they received a letter in the mail from PNC Bank stating that the bank had lost their tuition checks earlier this month.

The bank misplaced 125 checks totaling more than $1 million, according to John Yuncza, the University's Associate Treasurer.

In a letter sent to parents, PNC Bank apologized for the error and enclosed $25 bank checks to cover the cost to stop ayment on the lost checks.

The bank said it had already credited the University accounts of those students whose checks were lost and asked parents to send replacement checks. PNC also acknowledged that the error was "solely the responsibility of PNC bank and not that of Princeton University," Yuncza said.

In the request, the board asked for approval for 71 University system projects, 26 hospital projects and 19 community college projects.

In other news, the board approved the nominations of Edward T. Breathitt as chairman, Robert P. Meriwether as vice chairman, and James F. Hardymon, Paul

The Zapatistas, with whom Esteva has worked for the past few years, are a guerrall amovement in the southern Mexican states, most prominently in Chiapas and Oaxa-ca. They formed in the mid-1980s, but revolted in early 1994 after the catastrophic Mexican currency crisis of 1993.

Although he renounced violence in the 1950s, Esteva initially supported the Zapatistas. He said that he had trouble reconciling his support for an armed uprising with that renunciation.

The Zapatistas have become more of a social movement, he said.

"Violence is for the weak. The Zapatistas were weak. Now that they have the support of the people, they are strong," he said.

In a perfect meeting of the Kernel editorial board, we present a topic, everyone votes and it's pretry cut and dried. A ticke tlottery seemed to be one of those topics initially. We were wrong.

Here's the deal: A ticket committee at UK wants student input about proposed time changes for the basketball student ticket lottery. As students, you have two options: You can keep the same 8 a.m.

Like we said, initially hits seemed easy. What student in their right mind wouldn't want to sleep a few eatra hours and still score good basketball tickets: We already have to get up early for class. Even God rested on the seventh day. So 1 p.m. is perfect, right?

Wrong:

Half the board had a good point. The 8 a.m. lotter and meetings by 1 p.m. All students should have trouble getting up on Sundays to make it to be refer all, the five of us who voted for a later time have trouble getting up on Sundays to make it to be refer all, the five of us who voted for a later time have trouble getting up on Sundays to make it to be refer all, the five of us who voted for a later time have trouble getting up on Sundays to make it to over your opinion. You can e-mail the editor of the prime seats. The early lotteries mean less slackers getting tickets they might not use. It's slal about survival of the firets. You get up early, you get the ticket. You sleep in late, you might get a ticket high in the rafters. Plus, lines for some of the lotteries are already long enough. We don't need to add 10,000 more noon-risers to the line.

Lego-loving gal swept away by liquor libations

Legos of love are crushed by weight of our temptations don't drink.

Let me rephrase that. I do drink. In fact, I drink like a fish. I am constantly consuming great amounts of different liquids which, an hour later, make my eyes turn yellow and force me sprint to the bathroom before I bust like a 240-pound urine balloon.

gent and opinionated when sine talked about some of the stories she has written.

I starred talking about some of the stuff I've written last year for this wonderful paper. She was very interested in reading some of it. I was beginning to think that she was pretty near.

Somehow, she brought up the fact that she liked to build stuff with Legos. Suddenly, warning alarms of glee went off in my head.

Let me explain: It is not every-day you find somebody who pursues using Legos in college and it is very rare indeed to find a girl who does this. I was intrigued by how she got started, what she had created and her techniques. She acted like she was interested in getting together and building with me sometime.

She left me and my buddy to get another drink. I told my buddy how incredibly awesome she was. I really didn't have many friends up here this summer, and I was looking for somehody to build Lego creations with. I told my buddy that I may have foundanew friend.

Things went downhill from do drink. In fact, I drink like a fish. I am constantly consuming great amounts of different liquids which, an hour later, make my eyes turn yellow and force me sprint to the bathroom before I bust like a 240-pound urine balloon.

But I don't drink alcoholic beverages. I've tasted some different drinks and if you asked me on the street, I could tell you each and every item! have sipped.

Hi. My name is Christmick, and I'm a teetotaler.

And that's okay.

Many times people have asked me why I don't drink. Usually my response is that I have very little control over my body while sober.

If I were drunk, I would probably lose control and do all sorts of nasty, evil stuff. This summer, however, I found a better reason why I don't drink. In fact, through this story, I found that I have no want or need for alcoholic beverages whatsoever.

I was walking down Euclid Avenue one hot night this summer, however, I found a better reason why I don't drink. In fact, through this story, I found that I have no want or need for alcoholic beverages whatsoever.

I was walking down Euclid Avenue one hot night this variety and chasing us, we stopped, the girl caught up to us and introduced herself. It turns out, she recognized my friend from the middle school they were walking that they were walking that they are the dealth of the conversation with my buddy and his girl. She talked about towas didn't like getting blasted at these parties and naturally I agreed. I noticed that she acted very intelligent and copinionated when she has writter to leave the ten when I say that, my choice were a little, uniformed a light was the couldn't see that some of the stuff't leve written last year for the couldn't see that some of the stuff' couldn't understand because it was in a drunken slur. So much for intelligent and creative,

I found out later that week that the guy who was pulling her away-was dating somebody else, but managed to make sure Lego Girl found her bed that night — with him in it.

I never got a chance to get Lego Girl found her bed that night — with him in it.

I never got a chance to get Lego Girl found her bed that night — with you know, she probably doesn't end with the could have made a cool friend that hight. See that some cool friend that night. But she could have made a cool friend that night. But she chose to get totally blasted. After making that choice, she couldn't see that some of the other choices she made that night, were a little, un, immoral I make my choice when I say that immoral stuff is stupid. So, I'm glad I didn't get her number of address that night.

Some people can handle their drinking, and tha's cool. But, alcohol in great amounts is proven to affect a person's use of-logic and judgement. Most people act just plain stupid when they're flat-out drunk. I can't stand that behavior in other people, so I definitely won't tolerate it in myself. In fact, I don't want to take a chance on doing anything excessively stupid. So, that's why I don't drink and will continue to dream of the day when I find a Lego Girl to share my life.

No excuse for students who fail on second try

To the editor:

I write in response to the opin-ion expressed by Joe Schuler, Lindsay McNeal, and George Myers. You argue that losing credit for a past grade in a course that you have chosen to repeat, in hopes to improve that former grade, is unjust.

grade, is unjust.

Am I correct? Is it not the point of a repeat option to be able to prove your worth and ability in the course you are repeating, by improving your work and consequently your grade in that course?

That was my impression, please correct me if I am wrong. If that is the purpose (and I believe that it is), should we really allow a student who cannot show

If you cannot pass a course on the second time around, should be University be excusing these individuals from all responsibility for the choice they have made freely (repeating a course)?

No, they should not. Thumbs up to the University Senate for its insight into this matter. Thumbs down to individuals who want something for nothing and a free ride.

Public safety is imperative

Recently the Kernel ran a story about police releasing a composite of the suspected mur-der and rapist of two University students.

Unfortunately, the Kernel did not print a clear composite of the subject. The Herald-Leader printed a clear print with information on who to contact. Most students don't have access to the local paper but can readily get the Kernel on campus.

It is a great disservice to the student population to not provide such information. It would ease many students minds to have a print to use as reference and could actually yield positive results.

Possibly the Kernel could run

Possibly the Kernel could run a feature on safety awareness in the future. I suggest that the Kernel place the composite in the paper with the Lexington Police Department phone number.

The Kernel should, as a public service, serve the campus student population and help to educate students on safety awareness.

NFORMED "PRESIDENT REAGAN spent many blissful years SOURCES at Rancho del Cielo — it was his slice of heav-

Joanne Drake, Reagan spokeswoman, on the possibility of the ranch becoming a California state park.

Surprise! Palestinians, Americans share a common bond magine if you will another time another place. A long sought peace agreement is in shambles and the White House sends its top gun, Madeline Albright, to salvage peace talks. But wait, it's not Palestinians versus Israelis. It's our forefathers and the British Monarchy.

forefathers and the British Monarchy.

Hers attempt to mediate between the Americans, seeking independence, and Colonial England have failed.

For there to be peace, there must first be a re-establishment of trust, and neither side is willing to give, "Albrights said.

The trip was sparked by renewed violence that has flared over the disputed lands. Radical Presbyterian millitants in the mountainous western region of Appalachia shot at British positions over the weekend, killing one soldier and separatist wounding four others. The American Sons of Liberty claimed responsibility for the attack and said it was in retailation for a British Colonel who posted signs offensive to the Americans.

Rioting in Boston also continued for the third week after the British governor imposed martial law and a ban on travel. Stonethrowing American youths in that area attacked British soldiers on Friday, the fifth anniversary of an event that saw six Bostonian protection of the same statement.

Those soldiers were later cleared of any wrongdoing by the local British Admirally court. Elsewhere in the colonies, increasingly nervous British soldiers are keeping the peace despite a number of deadly ambushes by separatist guerrillas. The guerrillas have attacked by surprise, through the cover of rocks and trees.

"No civilized folk employs such means to any end. It is pure barbarism," said Lord Cornwallis, commander of the British detachment. "None but the savages that dwell in this God-forsaken land would display such a horrid lack of respect for life."

Rumors have circulated for about a week of a massacre of 400 loyal British militiamen by American rebel forces near the town of Hillsborough in North Carolina.

"This is the very sort of cowardly and olina.

"This is the very sort of cowardly and murderous behavior that the Colonists must endeavor to control," said British Prime Minister Charles Wentworth.

"Let me be perfectly clear: There is no moral equivalent between taxation and bullets," Albright said in addressing the Continental Congress.

British and Colonial relations have been strained to the breaking point in recent months and the peace process is at a standstill. Colonists are demanding more autonomy from Britain, the removal of British troops and a freeze on the seizure of American buildings for military installations.

The British are demanding the colonists crack down on militant separatist groups, such as the Sons of Liberty and the Committees of Correspondence. Parliament blames the Continental Congress for winking at these terrorist organizations, as well as inciting further violence through forceful rhetoric.

Great Britain has threatened military action in American-controlled areas if the terrorists are not stopped. "The colonists cannot have it both ways. Their leaders cannot speak about peaceful change while simultaneously embracing violent extremists," Albright said in reference to a recent meeting at which Congressional chairman Thomas Jefferson was seen with agitatof Patrick Henry.

Citing security concerns from the French to the West, Spanish to the South, and Indians to the North, Britath has stepped up fort-building and its milliatary presence in the Colonies.

In response, Benjamin Franklin said, "The expropriation of privately held land without adequate compensation is a violation of common law and of the natural rights of man."

"I'd rather it not come to bloodshed, but if (the Americans) fail to cease this treason, it shall," said Cornwallis.
"One man's pirate is another's privater," said George Washington. "Weemerly mean to govern ourselves, and if that means killing the British soldiers and, militamen, then by God that is what we will do."
