THIS WHIRLING WORLD

By Don Lail SENATE DOUBTS With the usual percentage of peace rumors which get everybody all excited, the Senate expressed belief that Adolph will be with us until next year. Some believe the war will end suddenly when the German people find New York has not been bombed and take Der Fuhrer for a one-way ride. . . . probably on ersatz gas, tires, etc.

"Bobby Weather" Heavy bombers attacked the Groszco airfield and did a good job of destroying it. While medium bombers hit the railway yards at Orlaniana. Bombers also attacked heavy installations in the mountains so that they cannot back up to heavily fortified positions.

CONFERENCE NO. 1657 President Roosevelt, Churchill and Chiang Kai-Shek, it was rumored, have just completed a long conference in Cairo, Egypt. Stalin was not included, it is supposed. To-day he was not yet tried to bluff the Reds. It would be very bad to make such a mistake at this time for the re-relationships of those two countries are not too good anyway.

Officers Attend ASTP Conference Colonel B. E. Brewer, commandant at the University, and Captain L. D. Neu, 1548th Service unit, are attending an ASTP conference in Columbus, Ohio.

Commandants of the Fifth Service command, which includes Ohio State, Western Reserve, Purdue, West Virginia State, University of Cincinnati, Cincinnati, and Eastern State Teachers college, will discuss problems concerning the ASTP program.

'Cat Cagers Make Debut With Decisive Win Over Fort Knox Soldiers, 51-18

Ruppens Show Promise In Opening Game

By Bill Speagers Defeating Fort Knox by a score of 51-18, the new team of UK Wildcats registered a top-heavy victory in the first game of the season Wednesday night in Alumni gymnasium.

Fort Knox scored the first goal, but UK countered with a goal which they led the rest of the way. The only close moment in the game after the opening was a point with only eight minutes left to play in the first half, when the Fort Knox outfit cut down the Wildcats' lead to 21-11, a mere one-point advantage.

26 Sonnets Are Included In Grant C. Knight's New Book "In a world that has gone mad with terror, I can keep within myself, I can find a peace that will make me happy," said Grant C. Knight of the University English department in commenting on the publication of his book, The Sealed Word.

To Mr. Knight it is no new experience to have a book published. Nevertheless, he was pleased when the Fine Editions Press put his latest into print last month. It is his first published book of verse, and contains 26 sonnets concerned with such topics as war, love, and beauty.

He may well be proud of this addition to his achievements, for Henry H. Hornsby, literary critic, has said that the poems "reveal a mastery of one of the most exciting verse forms, and place Professor Knight on a par with the leading sonnetists of our period."

The book began several years ago in a rather unusual way, Professor Knight had asked each of the students in one of his classes, which had been studying Shakespeare's sonnets, to write a sonnet. And because he had asked them to, he Violinist Gives Fine Concert By Mabel Gumm Angel Reyes, young Cuban violinist, opened his three-part uniquely arranged musical Sunday with Variations on a Theme by Corelli. Reyes played the contrasting sections with a smooth, clear-cut style. In Schubert's well-known Ave Maria, phrasing and dynamics were handled in an artistic manner.

Outstanding in the second group of numbers were the Cuban Dances, by Reyes Camejo, the violinist's father, which were presented in an understanding, sensitive and vigorous style distinctive of the violinist's native country. Excellent technique and well marked rhythmic patterns were also evident throughout this selection. The complete accompaniment of Archie Black added much to the program.

Hope all you chickens returned from the Thanksgiving feed full to the ears with turkey breast and dressing 'cause you're gonna need that extra weight you gained to hold you up under the strain of finals. Then you can gain it all back bein' lazy during the holidays.

Thought today we'd take a modest but substantial subject—that of limbs (not those on a tree darling) and of the four you possess, how 'bout draggin' out those in the lower section. You got it, the thesis is on stockings, gams, and skirt lengths.

Many of you are in for quite a few severe jolts if you read this in its entirety, the reason for which being that none of you apparently possess a full length mirror. Have you ever noticed how your skirt, look, Clarabelle, with that skirt hiked a full inch above them? If you would take a quick gander at this portion of your anatomy, and at the pipe-stems of some of your fellow sisters, I think that, if you are at all honest with yourself, you will discover that not one girl in 50 has even passably pretty knees.

And should you flatter yourself that you're that gal Susie, you can take it from me that you'd have been in a chorus line-up some where, not beatin' your so-called brains out on our campus. So draw your own conclusions.

A skirt hem which comes just below the knees covers up those which-are-not-dimpled, hides that slightly bowed effect that the shorter skirt gives, and keeps one from looking out of proportion. If you've ever unexpectedly seen yourself in a skirt skirt in a mirror or window glass, you may have wondered why you looked so like something in a crazy house mirror; the reason is that you are baring too much legage in proportion to hips and above-waist measurements, thus presenting a very weird picture. Try that skirt down a little and see if it doesn't give you a more respectable look, anyhow.

Leg make-up is our choice for the war's most useful substitute. In fact we are considering making stockings the substitute for the latter after this. It is much neater, easier on the eyes, has no wrinkles or crooked seams, and is decidedly cheaper than the present day hosiery. If the cold breezes don't chill you this applies to those of you who've got their love to keep them warm) and you can apply it without a smear, then carry on 'til we get some more nylon or you get pneumonia. Be sure to rub it off a little after applying, as its inclined to rub off on the boy friend's trousers, anguious as for the rayon and cotton stockings—if your legs are anything but a perfect stocking size they are apt to be highly unsatisfactory. Even then they still droop. To help matters along though do wear supporters or a garter belt instead of the bend-over-and-yank-'em-up garters. Garters just can't stand the pull of gravity on those heavy stockings.

If you have very nice legs and are positive of this fact, you might consider for special occasions the net rayons, or cottons—very sexy looking! For suits and warmth, they are showing heavy ribbed and fancy knit jobs which will help the soldier boy friend in keeping you lit up on these cold nights and present a good suit appearance as well. A medium to light weight rayon is fairly encouraging to the eye for ordinary dress-up occasions. Try helping matters in the cheese-cake way by wearing the proper color leggings. If you have abroad understanding, the darker the shade the better, as this will cut the size down some, and if those supporters of you simply refuse to give a decent account of themselves, and persist in looking like match-sticks, try the light shades, and heavier hosiery.

Socks are the tail end of our discourse for this Friday. We're all for 'em. Most practical invention ever. We simply love the nice soft wooly ones in pastel shades worn with loafers. (I am not speaking of the soldiers, Matilda.) The rules and regulations on socks are simple. For nearly every usage make them plain as possible, no fancy knits or ribbing and only solid colors. Try to tone them in or match them up in some way with the rest of your costume. Don't take some original and abstract idea when you arrive at covering up your feet please. They are a definite accessory if you make them so. But a word of warning, and caution to you all—one does not wear socks with any shoe except one with a low wedge sole or a flat heel. No Cuban or any higher heel. And you do not wear socks and earrings at the same time. Enquette.

"Turn up shirt collars before washing them..."

This fella has the right idea—it's just his technique that's a little sour. Shirt collars will last much longer if they are turned up before being sent to the laundry...

Another fine point to remember—when you need new shirts, whether military or civilian, buy Arrow. They live up to their fine reputation for lasting wear and perfect fit.
