We Make 'Em, You Break 'Em

We are making no New Year's resolutions ourselves this year because we have no illusions about our ability to keep them. But, taking advantage of the college's solving problems of the world, we offer herewith a set of resolutions for other people to make...

which our loved ones in the armed forces are put, remembering that the hardships which they endure now are insurance for their safe return from battle.
New commentators: We resolve to broadcast more news and less confusing editorial comment...

We File It In The Trash Can

We opened up our office last Monday morning and began to dispose of our mail—three big boxes of it. For years, Kernel editors, just as editors of all newspapers, have disposed of a great bulk of their mail by a simple process known as "filing it in the waste-basket."

to sell at a high price but supplied to us gratis, were a beauty to behold. The information services of Britain, France, India, Poland, Belgium, the Netherlands, and other countries furnish a weekly supply of well-edited material—but, we don't need it.

What Goes On There...

Nervy or not? The University of Alaska receives its freshmen from an unknown and exclusive source. They are dumpy, less and unafraid. Upon discovering their math professor taking a shower, they went to the wash room on the floor below. First they turned the hot water faucet off, then they turned it on. First the prof was scalded and then he froze. Then came expressions of unintelligible language from the professor of course. What happened then is not known, but in case you're interested the college is located at 64 degrees 51' 21" north latitude.

board had been wounded and had come back to the states to recover. After recovering and receiving a medical discharge, he resumed his previous job. Only two weeks ago the cigarettes arrived at the college. They had been to the Pacific and back.
Kinda Old, Ain't It? Acting on a tip from state highway department engineers, the Texas Memorial museum on the University of Texas Campus has dug up the remains of a prehistoric elephant in Atascosa County. This specimen, which probably stood 14 feet high at the shoulder, will be added to the museum's already extensive elephant collection.

ODE TO MAYHEM

By Donald Lail
Greetings to all those who are returning to "Tomestone Village" a few ghosts, 4-Ps, and ASTPs. This town wasn't quite dead. No dances, gas (the kind you use in cars), trees, or food, but we of the lost battalion survived. The best luck in the New Year to everyone who had the courage to return...

My Kingdom For A Bathtub

DEAR EDITOR:
I like living in a fraternity house. It's really a good conversation piece. In the first place, there's nothing like the answer "I live in a fraternity house" to arouse male interest when queried as to one's abode.
I've even grown accustomed to doing without breakfast because I don't want to get up early enough to walk to the dorm. I really like to live in a fraternity house.
But, I've been home for the holidays and have come back spoiled. For over two weeks I have enjoyed a luxury which I have done without since last fall—a bathtub.
I know that cold showers are invigorating. I know that if fraternally men never had bathtubs we should be able to get along without them. But, I long for a nice tub of hot water to soak in with a good magazine to read. And with everybody telling us not to waste anything, my bubble bath is going completely to waste.

Soldier's Date Wants Movies To Cut Prices

DEAR EDITOR:
I'm not a soldier, but I date one, and I've got a complaint to make about the facilities for entertainment in Lexington. If there is no dance going on or you don't like to dance there's nothing to do but go to the movies.
The movies recently raised their prices, and I think that they're too high, especially for a soldier with so little money to spend. I know that the motion picture business is just like any other business that doesn't give cheaper rates to soldiers, but when theaters in many other cities have shown this courtesy to men in the armed forces, I don't see why the ones in Lexington can't break down and do the same.

Step Two - President Roosevelt and Churchill meet and promise MacArthur aid.
Step Three - Eleanor arrives.

Nurse Field Representative Speaks To Campus Coeds

Stressing the importance of nursing training at the present time because of acute civilian and military needs and rehabilitation work after the war, Mrs. M. L. Lowery, field representative for college women of the National Nursing Council, was off the campus Tuesday for conferences and talks.

Cadet Nurse Corps training, according to Mrs. Lowery, is one way in which to secure, without cost, full training which will enable one to prepare for a position of leadership, responsibility, and service to humanity in the post-war world.

"After the war there won't be 'business as usual,' she stated. 'Other countries will look to us for help in planning nutrition and building health standards. Mental as well as physical nursing will be necessary. Opportunity for such work in foreign countries will certainly come to those women of maturity who are qualified by training.'

Emphasis was also placed on the future of the nursing profession at home, where expansion of the public health program is envisioned.

Coed Corner ...

By Mary Jane Galbraith

Delightful to see all you nice people back from the holidays—most of you still glowing with Christmas cheer. If you brought any of the liquid gold back with you, hide it well, don't even trust your room-mate or your favorite soldier with the secret, 'cause it's too valuable to take chances with these days.

If you've gotten all your exchanging of Christmas presents done, Gertrude, you should now be willing and able to put your number nines along the paths of wisdom and seriousness. These paths definitely do not lead to those low dives of iniquity on the Main Drag but towards the hallowed halls of the library (plug!) and to class. Consistently!

Towards such serious purposes let me guide you into spending that Christmas lettuce that Uncle Tom's kicked in with wisely. Not on the ponies, or matching pennies with one of those khaki-clad gamblers, but on the more necessary things of life. Clothes. (A brew at Rose street is not necessary, Sophie, that only makes necessary a size 16 when a 14 should have done it.) Downtown this week they are having those luscious after-Christmas sales. Everybody in the state is doing there biting and scratching. But for you with the cash in hand now is the time to buy. That is if you need or will need some clothes and if you know quality.

The stores take this time of year to clear out for their spring merchandise, and blouses, jumpers (if you didn't get one earlier), pretty wool dresses, suits and coats are all marked down. A good coat is a fine investment now instead of waiting until next fall as it will be much cheaper and from the outlook of the clothes situation it will no doubt be of better quality material. The merchants have evidently all decided that jumpers were a fad and are quite anxious to be rid of them, so if you wanted one badly, now's the time. The blouse crop is pretty well looted but if you are without one of the long or short sleeved type which are a necessity in every wardrobe, you don't see what's most reasonable. We've seen some of the beautiful buys in coats and suits that would make for wise purchasing. Pastel and bright-colored wool dresses which would be fine for spring or an evening (so much) until late spring are decorating many of the sales racks. For those of you who adore the long rough knit sweaters, there are the stores close to Broadway having a whole lot of them with the price tag.

Go bargain hunting if you wish but don't spend your money on what you don't need and be sure it's a bargain you're getting.

We also might inform you that those socks getting scarcer and scarcer, you'd better stock up. We've got a long hard winter ahead and your feet and ankles are two places that get even the paths of sin will heat up. And leg make-up or rub off.

It Might Be A Little Late, But Santa Came And Went

By Adele Demman

Twas the night before Christmas, boy, was it cool. All were in bed but the boys shooting pool. Each chimney had been swept: each floor was ajar. And all of the bottles hidden under the bar.

The children were nestled, all snug in their beds. With fenishish thoughts in their wide-awake heads. To heck with Santa, they'd had the sense to inquire. And had found their dad to be an awful liar.

Santa can't make it, with the war and all. And so their little hopes began to fall. Hitler laughed in devilish glee. At least over Santa, he'd have victory.

'Twas that I'm not coming; they won't believe.' Said Santa to himself, on Christmas Eve. It's the war, he scribbled in his memoranda. They won't even listen to my propaganda.

'I'll make it this Christmas, if I have to hike. But gosh, no gas for my car, or tires for my bike. My elves have been drafted; and are with me no more. And I've given my reindeer to the Army Air Corps!'

So when out on the lawn, was heard such a clatter. No one ran to the window, 'cause it just didn't matter.

A romantic columnist advises girls to keep a man guessing. But not too long, or he may guess he'll go somewhere else.

But you are wrong, my child, if you think he didn't make it. For along with us all, Santa can hike.

He started out walking, but the old guy was slick. He caught a ride that would get him there quick. He may be old-fashioned, but he sho' ain't green. He hitched a ride on a B-17.

'Cats Lose One, Take Three Games Over The Holidays

Kentucky's basketball team was handed its only defeat of the season during the holidays when an Illinois player popped in a basket with 40 seconds remaining in the game for a 43-41 Illinois victory.

The Wildcats, however, won three games during the vacation period—University of Cincinnati 58-30; Carnegie Tech. 61-14; and St. John's 44-38.

Kentucky led all the way in the Illinois contest played in Champaign on December 20 until Guard Dick Foley put his team in front, 40-20, with a rebound goal about three minutes before the end of the game.

Bob Brannum, high point man regularly, had things pretty much their own way during the first half and were in the lead by three points when personal fouls began to take their men from the game. Three Wildcat guards, Jack Parkinson, Tom Moseley, and Johnson, were banished because of fouls.

The teams are scheduled for a return game here on February 7.

In Alumni gym on December 16, the Wildcats, theoretically working at a disadvantage because Don Whitehead was sidelined and Jack Tuttle was able to play only a short time, rolled along steadily for their 68-30 victory over Cincinnati.

Unusual for the Wildcats was the fact that none of their players fouled out of the game. Brannum again was their top-ranking scorer with 18 points to his credit.

In the early part of the game Kentucky was well controlled but the ball pretty well but was off in little time to become oriented. One of the principal factors in Kentucky's success was the alert work of Johnson, who played a good defensive game and in addition scored six points.

Scoring their sixth victory in seven starts at Buffalo, N. Y., on December 28, the Wildcats had an easy 61-14 triumph over Carnegie Tech. Coach Adolph Rupp saved his regulars and used reserves during the second half but the Tartans were able to score only seven points during the period.

Brannum, playing during the first half only, was once more high point man with ten tallies. All told, 11 Kentucky players broke into the scoring column.

Performing in New York's Madison Square Garden on December 30, the Wildcats scored their latest victory before the largest crowd of the metropolitan season, 18-17.

Led by Jack Tuttle and Brannum, the Kentucky men jumped into an early lead which they were able to hold all through the game. Tuttle, num, keeping up his record as high point man, scored 12 markers although he was out of the game almost 10 minutes of the second half.

BERNIE SHIVELY... assistant basketball coach has named "the man in the brown suit" in producing the team of Wildcats who have only one two-point loss on their record.

COACH ADOLPH RUPP... has developed one of the nation's top basketball teams from a group of young boys fresh out of high school.

UK May Have Football Team Next Year If Plan Approved

Football may be played at the University next year, athletic officials have presided, if the War Department approves a request of the southeastern conference that Army trainees be permitted to play intercollegiate sports.

Dr. W. D. Funkhouser, dean of the graduate school and secretary of the conference, has announced that the presidents of the 12 member schools have approved the decision to request the use of such trainees on intercollegiate teams of the schools at which they are stationed.

Copies of the resolution have been sent to Henry L. Simson, secretary of war, and to A. B. Chandler, senator from Kentucky and member of the Senate Military Affairs committee.

Coach Ab Kirwan, who has been teaching history since football was suspended this year, believes that the approval of this request would improve the "athletic situation" at the University.

"Unless the Army relaxes its rule against college sports," he explained, "I doubt if the football situation will improve very much by next fall. However, if Bernie Shively and Dr. Demott approve, I'll try to organize a team next year. It's better to do something than nothing."

Only four members of the Southeastern conference—Georgia, Georgia Tech, Tulane, and Louisiana State university—had football teams this year. All other schools dropped the sport, mainly for lack of material. Georgia Tech and Tulane used Navy trainees, who were permitted by the Navy department to play on such teams.

The University has about 1,200 Army trainees and several other conference schools have similar training programs.

COACH AB KIRWAN... hopes that the Army will release its trainees for intercollegiate sports so that next fall he'll be again coaching football at UK.

The University museum shows in the display of early Indian life and culture in Kentucky, the only four existing specimens of the pottery of this period.

The museum—its open from 2 until 5 every Sunday afternoon—is showing a very interesting series of exhibits telling of the early, middle, and later Indian periods of civilization in Kentucky. The earliest Kentucky Indians had no pottery, but the middle period began the development of utensils. The only four pieces of this pottery extant are now in the possession of our museum.

One of the most interesting features of the pre-pottery age is the very unique instrument of murder employed by the Indians, murder of humans and animals. This wicked weapon is the spear thrower, and Dr. Charles E. Snow, associate professor of anthropology and archeology, will demonstrate its use at any time for you.

Kentuckians today are not so far from the early Indians, after all, several specimens of shell jewelry bear remarkable resemblance to the "macaroni necklaces" in vogue last year.

Kentuckians — the Indians — buried their dead in pits at this time. The pit was round, and the body curled up in a sort of comfortable looking manner (the skeleton on display looks uncomfortable), then it was covered with earth. Sometimes the mound had a house erected over it, and if so, the house was burned. At times this partially cremated the bodies within the mounds.

The Adena people, those of the middle period, lived in circular houses, as evidenced by models on display showing construction and arrangement of them.

The Mexican influence is seen clearly in the pottery and textile designs. We see for the first time, too, copper being used for jewelry and utensils.

The later Indians, dating as late as De Soto's voyage down the Mississippi, are the first group that can be definitely found to have used the bow and arrow. The white man's influence is also shown in that knives, glass beads, and various other trade goods have been found upon the remains.

These Indians constructed huge buildings—the fore-runners of our own civic centers.

Former 'Bama Guard Joins Wildcat Basketball Squad

Maurice "Red" Bell, diminutive freshman guard at the University of Alabama last season, has registered as a pre-med sophomore at the University and has begun practice with the Wildcats, according to Coach Adolph Rupp.

"He will begin play as soon as he gets in shape," Rupp stated, "but I don't believe that he will be ready for action against Notre Dame."

Bell, who stands five feet, nine inches and comes from Montgomery, Ala., will be eligible to play with the Wildcats under the Southeastern Conference's new ruling which permits play by transfer students.

The medical discharge from the Air Corps after eight months of service, played against Kentucky in both regular games last season and scored eight points in the Tide's 41-32 home win and 12 in their 67-41 loss here.

An old shoulder injury, which finally brought about his Air Corps discharge, hampered him considerably in his first workouts with the Wildcats, he said, but he expects to be in top form after "a little conditioning."

Since Bell's season at Alabama was his first, he will have three more years of conference ball. If he doesn't get into any of the regular games this season he will still have three more. "That's what I figured," he said, "but I expect to get in a game this season."

Kentucky's other newcomer is Jim "Buddy" Parker, former Henry Clay high school forward, who recently received a discharge from the Navy. Registering at the University, Parker has already begun taking part in scrimmages with the team.
