4,000 copies of new guide are distributed

By MYRNA MARCA

About 4,000 copies of a new UK Student Health Service handbook are being distributed to residence halls in hopes of educating students about contraceptives, Acquired Immune Deficiency, self-esteem and stress. The need for a new handbook was realized a year ago and since then, SHS staff members have worked to write one that is educational and yet "user-friendly," said Jean Cox, SHS administrator. Cartioons and light reading help to make the handbook a fun educational tool. "We tried to put in serious information the handbook a fun educational tool.

"We tried to put in serious information but we tried to keep it lightheared, because we're addressing it to students. That's the reason for the cartoons (and) the light touch," Cox said. "It's a serious business but we don't take ourselves too seriously."

The purpose of the new handbook is to expand on topics from the old brochure, which included administrative information such as the benefits of a health fee, the importance of health insurance, and SHS's hours.

"We felt like we wanted to go beyond portance of health insurance, and sHS's hours.

"We felt like we wanted to go beyond that," Cox said. "We decided this was an opportunity to get something out to the students that we wanted them to keep ... information that tells them what to do when a variety of things happen to them or that they're concerned about."

In the major section of the handbook, Taking Care of Yourself, there is information about STDs (sexually transmitted diseases), diet, mental health and self-examinations. It also stresses the importance of prevention.

The book is geared towards practicality, said Mary Brinkman, SHS director of health education.

is that the medical information will be soon.

All of the medical information will be in a few years, Cox said.

The guide is meant to be a reference book for students, Cox said, adding that she gave each of her three daughters a copy.

So far, feedback has been positive, Brinkman said.

former Gov. A.B. "Happy" Chandler was recognized for his driving

The celebrations were continued Saturday with a volleyball tournament, bingo, black-jack games, and 3-legged races. Some of the proceeds were donated to the Children's Miracle Network and the United Way.

Karen McClanahan, a four-year ophthal-mology employee, has witnessed some of the changes in the Medical Center.

"Our department has improved 100 per cent. We've expanded our space, our staff is growing, and we just have a good attitude about the new facilities," McClanahan said.

However, it is the employees that make the true difference, McClanahan said.

Ian Vincent had a nightmare last week. He was sitting next to his roommate on a plane bound for Iraq. They tried to convince everyone that they didn't belong on the plane, but no one would let them out. Their yells for help were drowned out by the sounds of war and of people dying. Vincent, an accounting junior, said he is never going to see that nightmare come true.

"If there was a draft, and I was pretty sure I was going to be drafted, I'd head for Mexico or Jamaica." Vincent said. "I would die for my country, but I wouldn't kill for it. I'd fight if it was someone invading our country, but I won't fight for sone oil we want to keep."

All males are required to register with the Selective Service on their 18th birthday. The recent events in Kuwait have many Americans wondering about the possibility of a war and a draft. While most students thought a draft was unlikely, they all consid-Iraq frees 52 Americans Iraqi official to discuss the Persian Gulf crisis.

The freed Americans, the wives and children of U.S. diplomats, left Baghdad by car. Fifty-two reached Turkey last night. But three unidentified white males were detained. The women were forced to leave their husbands behind because Iraq says the envoys have lost their diplomatic immunity and will be detained as hostages.

U.N. chief Javier Perez de Cuellar will meet Thursday in Jordan with Iraqi Foreign Minister Tariq Aziz "to engage in a full exchange of views on the crisis," the secretary-general's spokeswoman, Nadia Younes, said yesterday. It would be the first attempt by the United Nations to mediate the crisis, which began with Iraq's invasion of Kuwait Aug. 2 and led to a trade embargo against Iraq and a Younes said she could not say whether any other leaders would attend the meeting in Amman. Perez de Cuellar first proposed negotiations with Aziz on Saturday while traveling in Bogota, Colombia.

National security adviser Brent Scowcroft said yesterday in Washington that the Bush administration "would have no problem" with a mediation effort by Perez de Cuellar. But Scowcroft said the United States wants Iraq to withdraw from Kuwait. After that, he said, "We're prepared to talk about anything."

Meanwhile in the Persian Gulf, U.S. warships shadowed Iraqi vessels but did not immediately exercise their newly won authority to stop them by force.

The Soviet Union said its ships will not use force to uphold trade sanctions against Iraq, but won't stand in the way of nations that do.

Kentucky crop far from its burley self, UK expert says

FRANKFORT, Ky. — Burley to-bacco, the golden leaf of Ken-tucky's farm economy, is showing unmistakable signs of tarnish. Costs are up, labor supply is down and uncertainty about the to-bacco industry in general is mount-ing.

Americans are smoking less and the anti-smoking lobby is getting stronger. Congress, looking for new bridges across the budget gap, may double the federal excise tax on eigarettes, probably inspiring even more smokers to kick the habit. Consequently, production has in recent years been below quota throughout he eight-state burley belt, jeopardizing its place in two world market, a specialist says. "If we don't increase, the Brazils and Malawist and the other (burley-growing) countries out there are going to take our markets," said William M. Snell, a University of Kentucky agricultural economist.

ley, But if the supplies are not there, they're going to have to go to other (producing) countries."

Federal agriculture officials expect another short U.S. burley crop in 1990.

Kentucky has by far the largest share of the 1990 quota — 449.8 million pounds. But the latest estimate of its crop size is 407 million pounds.

The quota is 742 million pounds for the entire belt, which includes Tennessee, North Carolina, virgin—lag of the reis'more and more demand for labor every year," said state Rep. Tennessee, North Carolina, virgin—lag of Crupper, who grows tobacco in Grant County and is chairman of the House Agriculture Committee. Farmers say "why should I try to grow 40,000 pounds of tobacco when I can't get it in the barn?" Crupper said.

It is ironic in Kentucky that times are best for growers of its premier crop when conditions are worst elsewhere in its economy.

Some of Kentucky's biggest crops were produced from 1982 to 1985, when unemployment was high, making more workers available.

Now, there are more industrial jobs, which are "soaking up the supply" of workers, Snell said in an in-terview.

Farm workers are exempt from the state's minimum wage, which was $3.35 an hour last year and rose to $3.80 in July.

But in a striking example of sup-ply and demand, tobacco farm workers commanded $5 to $12 per hour in Kentucky last year. The range was highest in tobacco-rich central Kentucky, where $8 to $12-per hour wasn't uncommon, Snell said.

Draft

If someone doesn't want to go it's leir own opinion, but I would go." Carl B. Cone, a retired UK profes-or, said a draft would have a pro-bund effect on the country's univer-ties ties. "The situation is too hypothetical predict what would actually hap-n," Cone said. "But male enroll-ent would certainly go down. In e last two wars, if you count Vietmas as war, the federal governent came to the rescue to keep mgoing. Of course, now they ould have a higher level of female rollment than they did then. So e past is not necessarily indicative of the future."

Bill Baird, a psychology senior, had a house meeting with his three roommates last weekend. They planned out a trip to South America via Mexico. It's a trip they never plan to take unless they are drafted.
"Mainly it's because I don't think higher oil prices constitute a reason for war," Baird said. "I would be willing to fight a defensive war, but promises made in the interest of big business do not represent the thinking of the average person."
English senior Matthew Allen said he thinks it is too premature to make plans for a draft.

Unqualified students in college, committee says

FRANKFORT, Ky. — A commit-tee of educators and citizens has drawn up a list of suggestions for the Kentucky Council on Higher Ed-ucation to use to keep the state's public colleges from accepting un-qualified students. The recommendations deal with the state's 7-year-old pre-college curriculum. The curriculum is a list of 20 high school courses students must complete to qualify for admis-sion to Kentucky's eight public uni-versities.

colleges have continued to admit students who hadn't completed the required course work. It also found that, in some cases, university ad-missions officers and high school counselors, promote evading the then accepted as credit toward grad-uation.

"We felt it was a moral issue," said Lafayette High School counse-lor Atha Dickenson, a member of the 14-person committee led by Western Kentucky University Vice President for Academic Affairs Robert V. Haynes. "We shouldn't be encouraging students to go into situations where they weren't prepared."

The pre-college curriculum currently consists of four units of English, three of mathematics, two of science, two of social studies and nine of electives such as foreign languages, arts, advanced math, computers and science.

The panel concluded that the practice of letting unprepared students enter the state's colleges has resulted in "a feeling of betrayal" in the high school community.

Recommendations included prohibit colleges from crediting remedial work toward graduation and that students and parents should know that the pre-college curriculam is a minimum preparation and that the many schools have higher admission standards.

But even the stricter standards would allow certain students to by-pass the requirements. The new rules still would not apply to students at UK's 14 community colleges, entering freshmen who are 25 or older and students transferring from two-year programs who have earned a C average while completing 30 hours toward a four-year degree.

Despite the problems, the pre-action to the recommendations by Sept. 10. The Council on Higher Education will consider the recom-mendations in November.

EDUCATION IS SHARED RESPONSIBILITY

Radical changes must be made to the U.S. education system by the year 2000 or the United States will become a second-rate power, according to a report released by the Education Commission of the States.

The report points out that although major changes have occurred in the world, no changes have been made to the educational system. Seven brochures enclosed with the report explain what local and state legislatures can do to restructure education.

Areas of education targeted include higher education, high school achievement, and elementary education.

According to recent studies conducted by the National Assessment of Educational Progress and the International Association for the Evaluation of Educational Achievement, half of young adult college graduates in 1985 could not perform basic tasks such as calculating change owed them or summarizing the main argument of a newspaper column.

At four in 10 colleges and universities, students can earn a bachelor's degree without taking a single math course; 33 percent of institutions don't require a course in the natural sciences.

ICED COFFEE SALES STEAMING

The latest hot drink is actually cold, says USA WEEKEND. Several coffee companies have hit the market with with iced products this summer, including Nescafe, with Mocha Cooler. They hope to steal a share of the $44.4 billion-a-year soft drink industry. Rumor has it that Maxwell House and Coca-Cola are developing versions of their own.

WOMEN'S LANGUAGE GETTING FOULER

A study of more than 100 U.S. films by Tim Jay, from North Adams State College in Massachusetts, found the male-female ratio of curses changed from 10-1 in the '60s to 2-1 today. Jay says foulest-mouthed woman in films is Whoopi Goldberg.

Also, religious profanities are being replaced by more sexually explicit and aggressive language later at night.

DOMESTIC VIOLENCE OCCURS MORE

Domestic violence against women occurs more often than incidents of rape, mugging and car accidents combined. There were 2.1 million domestic violence incidents per year, asyst he Journal of the American medical Association. That compares to $22,000 car accidents per year; 131,120 rapes per year; and 301,660 muggings per year.

Eric Davis and Joe Oliver hit two-run doubles and Rick Mahler won his second straight start since moving into the rotation, giving the Cincinnati Reds a 6-2 victory over Pittsburgh Pirates yesterday. Mariano Duncan added a solo homer as the Reds won their third straight since losing the opener of the four-game series. The two National League division leaders split their season series 6-6.

Davis, who doubled twice, accounted for nine of the Reds' 16 runs in the final three games of the series, going 8-for-12 with five runs and four RBIs. He wasn't a factor as the Pirates swept a four-game series in Cincinnati last weekend, going 2-for-12 with two RBIs. Mahler (6-5), who was 5-9 lifetime against Pittsburgh, allowed six hits in two runs in 6 2-3 innings. Rob Dibble, who won Friday's game, pitched 2 1-3 innings for his ninth save, striking out four.

Enthusiasm over reunification dropping

East Germany is about to disap-pear, to be swallowed up by its rich western neighbor, and the universal enthusiasm of a few months ago has waned.

Polls say the vast majority of East Germans favor unification, which is barely a month away. But appear-ances don't always reinforce that barely a month away. But appearances don't always reinforce that conclusion.

The "We are one people" banners that hung from trees, factories and homes during the pro-unity frenzy of early 1990 are gone.

There are no cheering crowds and no convoys of motorists blasting their horns in anticipation of full unification on Oct. 3.

Reality has set in, especially sinch etc. the ceonomic merger officially began in July. The issue foremost in the minds of East Germans is how to tackle the huge challenges facing them as their crumbling economy is absorbed by West Germany.

Some show a decided lack of eagerness for unity, especially in Leipzig, birthplace of the uprising that ended 40 years of Stalmist rule less than a year ago.

"Maybe the GDR (East Germany) could have survived as a newly democratized country," said Maria Chudoba, who tends bar at the Cappuccino cafe in Leipzig, "But now it's too late to turn back."

Heinz Weisse, 74, and his 70-year-old wife, Gertrud, loading bales of hay onto a cart outside Weimar, said they wouldn't have minded seeing East Germany continue as a democracy.

"We're happy about unity, but it was not a necessary development," said Weisse, a retired hardresser.

"There's a good side and bad side to everything."

He said he and his wife had a relatively good life area medical contents.

"We had our little house here, and we were born here, so we always came back," Weisse said.

Most East Germans seem to see unification as their only salvation but have come to realize it will not be an overnight cure for such problems as the high unemployment brought on by the July 1 economic public four-year campuses.

Three of the five major federal aid programs — when adjusted for inflation — are offering less aid than in 1980, says the report from The College Board.

The widening cost-aid gap means parents must start planning for college long before a student is ready to go, said Jack Joyce, College Board financial aid expert.

"Ideally, they should start planning as they leave the maternity ward," Joyce said. "We're trying to get the message to them in middle school. They should begin to consider education as they would any other capital investment, to be purchased with a combination of savings and loans."

The news is "devastating," said Marvin Hensley, financial aid director at Virginia's 'Old Dominion University. "It means more low-income students are piling up higher and higher debts, or choosing not to go to college."

"We had our celebrations last year when the Berlin Wall came down," said Gisela Oswald, a 63-year-old retired opera singer in Weimar, and Gisela Oswald, a 63-year-old retired opera singer in Weimar, and the said German cultural center.

"We've glad unity is coming, but we've got to get to work now on some important problems, like putting the economy in order."

East German cities are decaying, the bottom has dropped out of industrial production and unemployment is soaring.

Most of East Germany's problems require money in huge amounts.

Leipzig has a desperate housing shortage, crumbling public and commercial buildings and an antiquated sewerage system that has become a health hazard.

Unification and the resulting West German funds undoubtedly will help solve the economic problems over the next few years, but also will introduce problems new to East Germany.

"Prostitution will come with the joblessness because people need money," said Peter Fernau, chief of detectives in Bitterfeld, an industrial city, "We'r also worried about heroin and the possible appearance of criminal gangs. There will be totally new dimensions to crime."

Several aspects of life will change after unity.

West Germany's legal system will be extended to the East, bringing in an entirely new code of laws.

"My officers are going to have to learn, learn, learn, learn, germany sid. Many East Germans fear West Germans will make all the decisions about their future.

A recent poll by the West German magazine Stem indicated 88 percent of East Germans support unification, but 70 percent were disappointed by how it has been managed. The process has been largely ortherstarted by Helmut Kohl, West Germany, while the two Germany united. With the two Germany united was supportunities. They worry about coping.

"We never learned to persist in the face of adversity because, in the old system, that was of no use," said Ms. Oswald, the opera singer. "This is something we must learn.

"But we also have many good qualities. We tend to be very closeknit and helpful to each other, and that's something we don't want to lose," she said.

"Beter Heyroth, Lutheran pastor in Bitterfeld, said the way unity has been managed is demoralizing many people.

"They see the trucks rumbling into town at 6 a.m. with goods from West Germany, while goods made in this country go unsold," he said. "They see prices climbing, and they feel like their job training was worthless."

In the small city of Saalfeld, on the eastern edge of the Thuringian forest, a former member of the disbanded Communist secret police pondered his future.

He has a new job, but things aren't going well.
"People hoot at me behind my back," he said. "It's really very difficult."

"I was never involved in any heavy intelligence, just checking passports and that kind of thing, but I'm ashamed of the corrupt government we supported," said the former agent, who asked that his name not be used.
"Sure, mistakes were made during the Communist period, but should tion's colleges, one could get the impression that relations be-tween the races is at an all-time low.

But last week, 10 new minority members joined UK's faculty. Also last week, Chi Omega sorority pledged a black freshman from Louisville, Kv.

What made those two news events remarkable was not UK now has more minority faculty or that the University's segregated sorority system is integrated. Rather, the real news was the reaction people had to the news events. Phedlicisima "Philly" Weaver said she doesn't consider her bid from Chi Omega to be a monumental one; she is just happy to be a member of the sorority. Chi Omega Treasurer Paige Estes added that Weaver's race did not figure into her receiving a bid. In other words, Weaver was chosen because she has the qualities that Chi Omega considers important for its members

Before rush week, Chancellor for the Lexington Campus Robert Hemenway and Vice Chancellor for Student Affairs James Kuder talked with sorority leaders about the importance of diversity. We agree with Hemenway and Kuder that diversity is an important part of university life, but we hope that diversity is allowed to take place naturally, in other words without the establishment of quota systems.

In terms of faculty, it is encouraging that 10 of UK's new instructors are minorities, especially since higher education has experienced a shortfall in minority enrollment and instruction The University, however, should not sacrifice quality instruction if it means hiring more minority faculty.

To ensure that more minorities choose the university life for a career, higher education must make it an attractive profession. With a limited amount of minorities graduating each year, the tops ones more than likely will be lured away by the private sector because of the benefits and economic security it can offer. Higher education must not only do a better job of making its case, but it must show graduates why the teaching and researching at a university is desirable.

Another way to attract more minority faculty is to encourage more minorities to attend college. UK should offer its resources to the state and region in addressing the nation's urban crisis. The results of such efforts would not be evident for more than 10 years, but it is the best way to get at the root of the problem.

Actors inequity

'Miss Saigon' controversy shows ugly side of Liberalism

C.A. Duane

BONIFER

The greatest attack on the arts community this summer was not waged by Sen. Jesse Helms, Tipper Gore or a conservative special interest group. Yet when this action was taken, not so much as a peep was heard from the American Civil Liberties Union and other liberal interest groups.

The most blatant — and nauseating — attempt to censor the arts was done by Actor's Equity carlier this month when it denied permission for Jonathan Pryce to play the role of a Eurasian pimp in the Broadway production of Miss Saigon.

The $10 million musical was scheduled to open in the Big Apple in March, and it already had sold a record $25 million in advanced ticket sales. American audiences almost different reaccess the summer communities when the summer communities and the summer commu et sales. American audiences almost did not get an opportunity to see the musical because Actor's Equity does not believe in the power of the institution it allegedly represents. Equity denied Pryce permission to play the role of the Engineer because "it cannot appear to condone the casting of a Caucasian actor in the role of a Eurasian."

Two weeks ago, after several Equity members asked the organization to reconsider its stand, Equity reversed itself, claiming that it had "applied an honest and moral principle in an inappropriate manner."

How about it applied a dishonest principle in its usual inappropriate principle in its usual inappropriate manner?

One of the claims Equity tried to use to justify its discrimination was a lack of opportunities for ethnic minority actors on Broadway. In other words, affirmative action is needed to ensure that theater proportionately reflects society's racial composition. (Never mind that only 400 of Equity's 40,000 members are of Asian background, according to the New York Times.)

But had Equity bother to notice the forest, it would have realized that Miss Saigon has roles designed for 27 Asian actors, including the leading female role. Liberalism does not always see so clearly when it is on the attack.

Once upon a time, when the Unit-

Once upon a time, when the Unit-ed States used to be a colorblind naton, people believed that theater had the power to transcend cultural, racial and ethnic stereotypes. Regardless of the role, a good actor could become the character demanded by the play.

Cameron Mackintosh, who wants to produce Miss Saigon on Broadway, told the New York Times last week that "from out perspective, the fundamental issue of this controversy is that the artistic integrity of the authors and the creative team has been questioned, and our right to cast whomever we consider to be the most suitable talent in any role, regardless of race or ethnic background, has been underminded." That is precisely what affirmative action, reverse discrimination or legalized racism does: circumvents the individual's right to choose for himself. Or, as columnist George F. Will pointedly put it, it establishes a "racial spoils system." Frank Rich, the Times' theater critic, wrote that Equity's move was insupportable on every level." The decision, Rich added, "makes a mockery of the hard-won principles of non-traditional casting and practices a hypocritical reverse racism."

cism."

If one were to apply Equity's convoluted logic to all theater productions, Rich noted that Pearl Bailey would have been barred from playing Dolly Levi and Morgan Freeman would not have been allowed to appear in The Taming of the Strew in New York City's Central Park. In other words, producers would not have the right to cast the best person for the job because Big Brother would have to approve of the racial make-up.

Actually, Equity could not have chosen a better example to illustrate the confusion of affirmative action. As Rich noticed in the Times: "The Engineer is Eurasian in the first place (half French, half Vietnamese, according to a song lyric) only because of a plot twist that requires the character to have Vietnamese citizenship papers. The role is in reality a theatrical device, a chorus, an eternal camp-follower — alternately American and Satanic in personality, a character without an ethnic or national identity of any recognizable sort in the text or on stage."

Leave it to Liberalism to force individuals into neal title categories. Much is being made of 10 new faculty that UK just hirde because in addition to being good scholars, they also happen to be black. An equal amount of publicity has been given to the University's greek system for inviting a black to join a sorority. But rather than making big deal out of their pledge's racial background, Chi Omega sorority, as taken the sensible route by extolling her individualism still has a chance.

Beware of the 'L word'

As the college year is beginning, I wanted to address the topic of premarital sex before it may be too late. I know it can be very hard to say "no" right when it's most important, especially when you're not prepared for it. But there are some ways to prepare for such a time. First of all, in the light of the day, and with a sober mind, you need to establish within yourself what your personal convictions are. Do you believe premarital sex is wrong? According to the Bible, it is a sin. Sometimes you can know you are doing something wrong if you listen to your conscience. The voice of your conscience can be very clear, if you are willing to heed it. Secondly, believe in your heart you are willing to heed it.

Secondly, believe in your heart that you are special as you are. You don't have to sell yourself under any circumstances.

Determine to stand on your convictions and know that a person with firm convictions is very respectable. Peer pressure can be difficult to overcome unless you know who you are and can respect yourself for it.

Thirdly, think about the truth of those words: I love you. Many people confuse the words lust, like and love.

To lust is to crave for ar 10 tust 1s to crave for another person. It may appear to be good, yet it is very selfish. Often, a girl will get pregnant and her boyfriend will be long gone. He was looking for that temporary gratification, at another's expense. To like someone is to enjoy his or her company. To like is just an emotion.

For example, I have several friends I really love, but I do not always like them. Every now and them, one of them gets on my nerves. I'm sure they feel the same nerves. I'm sure they feel the same way.

More often than not, I feel that motion of like toward them. On a date, that emotion of like will come over a person in the guise of love, but it's not really love!

To love is to be unconditionally and faithfully in the care of another person. Love is the epitome of unselfishness. Of course, true love is very tough. That is why the mariage vow is a promise to love through sickness and poverty.

The last statistic of divorce rate I heard was more than 50 percent in this country. Could it be because we no longer understand the true meaning of love?

With all the veneral diseases, pregnancies out of wedlock, abortions, divorces and broken hearts in this world, I ask you to seriously consider your position concerning

Here's Your First

A quality education costs a lot of money. We're sure you already knew that. First Security Bank has a lot of money. You probably already knew that, too. But maybe you didn't already know that First Security Bank considers a college education to be a great investment, and that maybe we'd like to invest in yours.

With an office just a few minutes away from the University, and several QUEST® /CIRRUS® Automatic Teller Machines directly on campus, First Security's students. We offer a wide range of checking accounts, savings accounts, and a great deal more.

Open a First Security Basic Checking Account now with as little as $100. It's an account with no monthly service charges.

And no minimum balance requirement—you pay only for the checks you write. You'll also have unlimited use of over 40 First Security services are always within easy reach of UK QUEST® /CIRRUS® machines in Lexington and hundreds more all over Kentucky and beyond.

Bring this coupon to any convenient First Security office and you'll get a $5 discount from the nominal initial charge—and an "A" on your first lesson in college economics.

OPEN YOUR ACCOUNT NOW AND SAVE $5.

Present this coupon at any First Security office and receive $5 off the cost of a Basic Checking Account. Or if you already have a Basic Checking Account, use the $5 savings toward the purchase of your next order of checks. Offer expires Sept. 28, 1990.
