The Kentucky Alumnus

A QUARTERLY MAGAZINE DEVOTED TO THE INTERESTS OF THE ALUMNI AND STUDENTS OF THE UNIVERSITY OF KENTUCKY

The South's (and UK's) Gift To The United Nations

J. B. Hutson, High Up
In U.N. Officialdom

(Editor's note: John B. Hutson, native of Murray, Ky., graduate of the University of Kentucky where he majored in farm management; former assistant professor of agricultural economics at his alma mater; holder of one big job after another in the national administration and, until his nounced resignation on Jan. 10, assistant secretary-general of the United Nations, was the subject of an interesting feature in the November issue of "Hollands, the Magazine of the South." With the permission of the publishers we are re-printing picture and excerpts from the life story of this dynamic Kentuckian, written by Wellington Brink.)

"John B. Hutson was born and reared near Murray, Kentucky, some 55 years ago. That's in the Black Patch, famous for its dark tobacco. There he mastered the language and the culture of the leaf. There he labored barefoot in the fields, breathed the fragrance of the massive tobacco warehouse, hobnobbed with buyers, shared the speculations anent weather and markets. There, too, he brushed shoulders with tenancy hardships. Inevitably, he became a man with a hoe, chopping his way determinedly first down seemingly endless rows of tobacco and corn; later, down the even more formidable rows of governmental hotchpotch. He became a relentless foe of weeds of many sorts.

"As a youngster, Hutson absorbed something of the excitement and travail of the night-riding era. With tobacco prices depressed and sinking ever lower, and with growers steadily expanding acreages to contend with falling incomes, night-riding's efforts toward compulsory control of production got under way. Bands of masked men raced across the countryside on horse-back and in wagons, burning down barns and dragging logs across the fields. Their methods, born of desperation, were ruthless and inadequate. A generation was to pass before a better way could be devised to attain the desired objectives. And when that time came Jack Hutson was prepared to help, by reason of background, experience, training and ability.

"Hutson enjoyed years of obscurity, the comfortable quiet of a scholar and scientist. He was graduated from the University of Kentucky, where he majored in farm management. The University of Wisconsin conferred on him a master's degree in agricultural economics. At Columbia he won his doctorate for work in economic theory and business cycles.

"The professional journals began publishing Hutson's papers on such musty-seeming but vital matters as farm organization, budgeting, planning, production, and profits. He was an expert talking to experts. He was still relatively unknown except within a cloistered circle of economists, and within the tobacco industry, where he was gradually gaining prestige. Even before the completion of his formal education, Hutson became occupied with agricultural extension work in Kentucky. He served as a farm economist in the Federal Office of Farm Management, taught for a time as assistant professor of agricultural economics at the University of Kentucky, and nestled down in a job as agricultural economist in the Bureau of Agricultural Economics. For a time he appeared destined to live out his life as a government career man, without glitter.

BREAK COMES IN 1930

"Then, in 1930, came a break toward far horizons. Something had gone wrong with tobacco exports. The foreign markets, long so lush, were withering and falling away. New production areas were being developed in northern Africa by France and Italy. The big Kentuckian packed a suitcase and went abroad. He spent three years in England, Spain, France, Germany and other parts of Europe looking into the situation for the Foreign Agricultural Service. It was when he came back briefly to report in 1933 that Chester Davis nabbed him to head up the tobacco section of the Agricultural Adjustment Administration.

"Instantly the methodical, indus-

Happy New Year

From all of us, here on the campus, to all of you, scattered to the four corners of the earth, go heartiest greetings and best wishes for the New Year and a grateful "thank you" for your support of your Alumni Association for the year 1946.

We have tried to serve you to the best of our ability during 1946, and if we have failed you in any way, it has resulted from over-zealousness on our part. You, who will see this Alumnus, need have no qualms about your faithfulness to the association and to the University. The very fact that you are receiving the magazine testifies that you are an active member of the Alumni Association and thus have given it whole-hearted support for the past twelve months.

However, don't let your interest

"SGB" One Of Ten Top Women Of '46

Sarah Gibson Blanding, president of Vassar College has been named one of the ten women in the United States rated tops in their fields in 1946, by a poll of editors of Associated Press newspapers.

This latest honor which has come to "our Sarah," places her in the vanguard of women in the field of education. Other selections were: movies, Ingrid Bergman; radio, Kate Smith; public service, Emily Balch; drama, Helen Hayes; literature, Betty MacDonald; business, Dorothy Shavwe; music, Helen Traubel; sports, Mildred Didrikson; and beauty, Marilyn Bufferd.

In a story which appeared December 30 in the Cincinnati Enquirer, the selection was announced with this comment upon Miss Blanding's choice: "Sarah Gibson Blanding, Kentucky, was lapse with the payment of dues. You are the Alumni Association's official emissaries to your negligent fellow-alumni. We depend on you, who have daily contact with many other alumni, to "get them into the fold," by urging upon them active participation in the affairs of the association.

Let's all make a New Year's resolution to get at least one other alumnus to pay his dues in 1947-'48. There are over 2,000 paid-up members now. Double that number, and we will begin to arrive at a respectable active membership. The Alumni Association begins a new fiscal year June 1. When you send in your 1947-'48 dues at that time, send in another membership along with your own. Let's get this organization on a paying basis NOW!

Looking Toward June

It isn't too early to start making plans to attend the University's annual June commencement and your Alumni Association's reunion program. A committee from the executive committee of the association is now at work, making plans for your pleasure and entertainment when you return to the campus this spring.

Classes scheduled to hold reunions this year, according to the Dix plan, are: '45, '37, '36, '35, '34, '18, '17, '16, '15, '99, '98, '97, and '96.

All permanent class secretaries of these groups, as well as others interested in attending the reunion festivities, are asked to communicate with the office.

voted the outstanding figure in educational circles because she was chosen for the post of Vassar President from a field of 200 noted men and women educators, and because of additional honors bestowed upon her for her morale work during the war. The U. S. Army decorated her for work in advising on recreational facilities for servicewomen, and she was appointed a member of the President's committee on higher education."

National Association Studies U.K. Project

A two-day study of the Sloan Experiment in Kentucky, which is being conducted by the University of Kentucky Bureau of School Service under the direction of Dr. Maurice Seay, was held on the campus in November by a committee of the National Association of Secondary School Principals.

Eight schools in the state are cooperating with the University in the experiment, which is an attempt to see if education can solve economic problems.

Dr. John J. Tigert To Speak At U.K.'s 3rd Annual Founders Day

Dr. John J. Tigert, president of the University of Florida, president of the Southeastern Athletic Conference and former faculty member and head football coach at the University of Kentucky, will be the speaker at the University's third annual Founders Day convocation, Friday morning, Feb. 21 at ten a. m. in Memorial Hall. His subject will be: "The University of Kentucky Under Four Presidents."

The University's third annual Founders Day program will open with the general convocation, and will include a luncheon to be given by the Athletic Department in honor of Dr. Tigert. That evening, a series of radio broadcasts are being arranged over a network of Kentucky stations, so that Kentucky alumni groups may arrange meetings which will coincide with the radio programs, which are to be recorded earlier at the University radio studios and re-broadcast over the Kentucky stations. E. G. Sulzer, director of radio at the University, is in charge of arranging the program for the broadcast and in distributing the recordings.

Stations which have already agreed to carry the program are as follows:

- WOMI—Owensboro 10:00 to 10:15 p. m.
- WPAD—Paducah—10:15 to 10:30 p. m.

Dr. Tigert, the honor guest for the Founders Day program, is a native of Nashville, Tenn., the son and grandson of Bishops in the Methodist Episcopal Church. His grandfather, Holland Nimmons McTyeire, secured a million dollars from Cornelius Vanderbilt, founded Vanderbilt University and became the first executive head of the institution as well as the first president of its board of trustees.

Dr. Tigert was graduated from the famous Webb School at Bell-buckle, Tenn., and was graduated with honors from Vanderbilt. He was the first Rhodes Scholar from Tennessee. From 1907 to 1909 he held the chair of philosophy and psychology in Central College, Fayette, Mo., and from there went

Peak Endorsed As National Rotary Head

Bart N. Peak, '17, executive secretary of the University YMCA, has been endorsed by the Lexington Rotary Club for nomination as a candidate for president of Rotary International.

Nominations for the position will be announced in the spring, and election will be held at the summer convention in San Francisco. Mr. Peak, secretary of the Lexington club, has been endorsed for the national presidency by several Kentucky clubs.

to Kentucky Wesleyan College at Winchester, as its president. In 1911 he accepted the position of professor of philosophy and psychology at the University of Kentucky and from 1913 to 1916 served as director of athletics and head coach.

He left the University to serve with the American Expeditionary Forces in World War I, and after the war resumed his work here until 1921, when he was appointed United States Commissioner of Education by President Warren G. Harding. In September 1928 he resigned this position to become president of the University of Florida.

The University's Founders Day program is arranged annually to honor the founders of the institution, and to acquaint students and alumni with the proud history of the school. It is pointed directly to the alumni as a means of renewing memories and of tying them more closely to the institution which they love.

A souvenir Kernel, reviewing some of the University's history and giving the detailed program of Founders Day, will be published on Friday, Feb. 21 and will be mailed to all active members of the Alumni Association.

trious, thorough-going Hutson proved himself as adept at administration as at research. Tobacco were quickly added sugar, rice, peanuts, potatoes. As head of an overgrown, super-duper, but superbly functioning division, Hutson held 'em all under his wing. His performance earned him the reputation of being the No. 1 commodity man of government. With hardly a pause to roll up the other shirtsleeve, he settled easily into four years as assistant administrator of the AAA.

"By this time, though, Hutson was a-wing. Jobs kept catching up with him—and he kept on going. Big, important jobs that no one else seemed competent to handle quite so well. Sometimes he'd be loaded with two, three, half a dozen titles at a time, each with its own bundle of green kindling to be lighted. One way or another, he made 'em crackle and blaze. In 1941 Jack Hutson became president of the Commodity Credit Corporation. Then he became deputy commissioner of the Division of Agriculture of the Council of National Defense. Through three years he served as director of the Food Production Administration and of the Office of Production of the War Food Administration. He tramped on lots of toes, and became an open target for snipers both inside and outside the Department.

GOES TO WHITE HOUSE

"Jimmy Byrnes finally beckoned him over to the White House on January 1, 1945, to be deputy director for Agriculture, Office of War Mobilization and Reconversion. In that capacity, it was sometimes suspected by friends and foes alike, Hutson came pretty close to being the actual boss of

John D. Goodloe, '28, Appointed R.F.C. Director By The President

John Duncan Goodloe, '28, young Richmond, Ky., government lawyer, has been appointed by President Truman to take the place of George E. Allen as one of the five directors of the Reconstruction Finance Corporation.

The new appointee to the directorate of the $15,000,000,000 lending agency has been in government service since he got out of Harvard Law School in 1931. In that year he went to Washington to work for Kentuckian Stanley Reed of Maysville, now associate justice of the Nation's wartime agricultural program. Within six months he returned to the Department of Agriculture as Under Secretary.

"He still was not 'popular,' in the usual sense. He wasn't a backslapper. He didn't fuss with golf or partying. But he was a bear for getting things done. He'd take the mean, difficult assignments that others ducked, and plow through. He'd compromise if necessary, but with calculating finesse. His cold, gray eyes would scan a set of charts or a report involving millions of this or that, and in ten minutes know their purport better than those who had steamed over them for days.

"John B. Hutson was known as 'Johnny B.' in college, where he was described as a 'modest, reserved young man, always an eager student.' Now close associates refer to him informally as 'J. B.' or 'Jack.' But in the usual course of business he invariably is a respectful 'Mr.' That's the kind of man he is—this the Supreme Court, who then was general counsel for the Hoover farm board. When the R.F.C. was broadened in 1932 to include the Regional Agricultural Credit Corporation, Goodloe went with that branch and has been employed by R.F.C. subsidiaries ever since. He became general counsel of the R.F.C. in 1943.

Born at White Station, near Richmond, John Goodloe attended Eastern Kentucky State Teachers College for two years and worked on the Richmond Daily Register, published by the now Undersecretary of Labor, Keen Johnson, '22. He later transferred to the University of Kentucky from which he received his A.B. degree in 1928, and during his career at the University worked under Gerald Griffin, '22, in the Courier Journal's Lexington Bureau and a year on the Lexington Herald, with Paul Porter. He will not take over his new post until confirmed by the Senate.

multi-job genius who has been Under Secretary of Agriculture, President of the Commodity Credit Corporation, and Director of the Production and Marketing Administration.

"As one of the world's leading tobacco technicians, Jack Hutson repeatedly has spurned fabulous salaries offered by the industry. But he is an appreciative consumer, a standard two-packs-a-day cigarette smoker, with a few high-quality cigars added.

"Gray, stern, still a bit of the artillery officer of World War I, Hutson can be genial. He can smile—beginning, as a rule, with the crow's-feet at the corners of his eyes. He can illustrate a point or oil a situation by telling a story. His baritone voice is rich and his speech incisive. A concealed switch somewhere about his person turns on the heat or the cold at will. He is self-assured and self-contained without being pompous.

INTERNATIONAL SCENE

"Hutson had a restless night or two before deciding to resign from Uncle Sam and hire out to the new world partnership. For, notwithstanding the views of some of his more severe critics in Agriculture's argumentative family, Jack does have a conscience. He let his conscience weigh his careerman's love of the Department against his duty to help smooth the running of the infant United Nations. He finally took the post of Assistant Secretary-General because he felt so strongly the compulsion to serve humanity in its critical hour.

"Thus passed from the national to the international scene one of Washington's most interesting and useful, if controversial, civil servants. The bold, granite-like qual-

UK's First Big Postwar Reunion Scheduled Commencement, June 6

The University Alumni Association's first big peace-time reunion will be held during the 80th June commencement exercises, which will culminate with the graduation program on Friday, June 6.

A committee to work on reunion plans was appointed at the December meeting of the alumni executive committee, and although the complete program will not appear in the ALUMNUS until the May issue, the committee has already gone to work and direct mail announcements will be sent out to all classes participating in reunions, early in the spring.

The classes of 1945, '37, '36, '35, '34, '18, '17, '16, '15, '99, '98, '97 and '96 are scheduled for regular reunions this year, according to the Dix plan, but the Alumni Association will be glad to cooperate, in anyway possible, with other classes wishing to plan reunions.

The executive committee will welcome suggestions as to plans for a big reunion program, and would also be glad to hear from alumni in these classes who wish to make plans for private parties. The office of the association is available to the secretaries of all reunion groups for whatever services they may require, and will be glad to cooperate in every way in making this 1947 reunion the biggest in the school's history.

'26 Grad. President of Ky. Laundry Ass'n.

Clifton Thompson, Lexington, U. K. '26, president of the Lexington Laundry Company, has been elected president of the Kentucky State Laundry and Dry Cleaning Association for the current year.

Denney Named To Circuit Judgeship

Edwin R. Denney, A.B. '31, LL.B. '32, of Mount Vernon, Ky., has been appointed circuit judge of the 28th judicial district, composed of Pulaski, Rockcastle, Wayne and Clinton counties, by Governor S. S. Willis, to succeed the new U. S. Senator from Kentucky, John Sherman Cooper of Somerset.

Judge Denney will serve in his district until a successor to Senator Cooper can be elected next November.

The new judge, a Republican, served as representative from the 79th Legislative district, Rockcastle county, in the 1946 General Assembly, and was chosen by his party to be minority floor leader. He won the admiration of both parties for the manner in which he handled legislation.

UK Man Heads Civil Engineering Dep't.

Trustees Promote Two to Headship

R. E. Shaver, '27, professor in the College of Engineering and a member of that college's faculty since 1931, has been named head of the department of civil engineering to succeed D. V. Terrell, recently named dean of the college.

The University's governing body also named Dr. Aubrey J. Brown head of the department of markets and rural finance in the College of Agriculture and Home Economics, succeeding Dr. H. B. Price. Dr. Brown has been an associate in the college and assistant in the Experiment Station. He came to the University in 1938 from the University of Illinois, where he received his A.B. and Ph.D. degrees. Dr. Price relinquished the headship of the department but will continue as professor of agricultural economics in the college and economist in the Experiment Station.

Dr. Price is a graduate of the University of Wisconsin and holds the Ph.D. degree from Yale University.

One Grad Succeeds Another in Job

Donald P. Moloney, '43, of Lexington, until recently bailiff for the Kentucky Court of Appeals, has resigned to enter private law practice in Lexington, and the Court has named Viley O. Blackburn, '46, of Georgetown, recently admitted to the Bar, to succeed Moloney.

Young Moloney has joined his uncle, State Senator R. P. Moloney, with whom he will be associated in practice. Senator Moloney is a former University student also.

ember, including the promotion of Dr. Leo M. Chamberlain, dean and registrar to the newly created post of vice president; the appointment of Dr. Maurice Seay, director of the Bureau of School Service to the post vacated by Dr. Chamberlain; and the selection of Ab Kirwan, '26, as dean of men to succeed Dr. T. T. Jones on July 1, 1947 when Dean Jones will reach the age at which he will be given a change of occupation.

Dr. Chamberlain joined the University faculty in 1929 as assistant professor of education. In September of that year he became director of the Bureau of School Service and associate professor of education. From 1937 to 1942 he served as registrar and professor of education and in September 1942 became dean of the University. A native of Indiana Dr. Chamberlain received his B.A., M.A. and Ph.D. degrees from Indiana University.

Dr. Seay is a native of Perryville, Ky., and received his A.B. and M.A. degrees from Transylvania College and his Ph.D. degree from the University of Chicago as well as an honorary doctorate from Union College at Barbourville. He joined the University faculty in 1937 as director of the Bureau of School Service and head of the department of school administration. He is past president of the Kentucky Education Association.

PROF. MAURICE SEAY

Mr. Kirwan, a native of Louisville, received the bachelor of arts degree from the University of Kentucky M.A. from the University of Louisville, and has, for the past two years, been working on his Ph.D. degree at Duke University, majoring in history. He taught and coached football at Male and du Pont Manual High Schools in Louisville and came to the University in 1938 as head football coach and member of the history department.

Dean Jones, a graduate of the University in 1902, M.A. 1903, has been a member of the University faculty since his graduation, serving variously during that time as instructor, assistant professor, and professor and head of the department of ancient languages; acting dean of men; acting dean of the Graduate School and dean of men.

The establishment of the post of vice president was recommended by President H. L. Donovan, who commented that "A great many of the larger universities have a vice president, and in some cases two or three. This officer shares much of the work which falls upon the president as well as a considerable amount of the responsibility of the office. Dr. Chamberlain already has been performing a number of these duties in his capacity as dean of the University."

Judge Wilson's 'Kentuckiana' Bequeathed University

Important Material Comes to Library

Editor's note: Dr. Thomas D. Clark, '29, head of the University's Department of History, whose achievements are noted in another story on this page, has supplied the ALUMNUS with two interesting historical articles for this issue. They concern two outstanding Kentuckians, both of whom received University degrees, and who dealt, primarily, in Kentuckiana. Judge Wilson held the honorary LL.D., and Mr. Townsend earned his LL.B. here in 1912 and was awarded the honorary LL.D. in 1930.

Judge Samuel M. Wilson of Lexington willed to the University of Kentucky his exceedingly fine collection of Kentuckiana.

Judge Wilson held an honorary degree from the institution, and was one of its ardent supporters. Over a period of nearly fifty years he engaged in the collection of materials about Kentucky and the Ohio and Mississippi valleys. He had a great passion for books and manuscript which pertained to the region, and, fortunately, he sooner or later added hundreds of rare items to his collection. Among the many rare books which are now to become a part of the University Library collection are Filson's History of Kentucke, Stipp's Western Miscellany, and an exceedingly rare copy of Toulmin's Descriptions of Kentucky, containing perhaps the only known copy of Thomas Cooper's comments on America. There are scores of pamphlets which are either the only known copies, or are among a limited number of copies.

For many years this famous collector and historian had been gathering material on John Bradford and the Kentucky Gazette. Among his manuscripts are several partments and boxes of papers and notes which will enable some historian in the future to write of this important editor and his newspaper. Likewise there is a voluminous collection of notes and manuscripts pertaining to George Nicholas, the so-called father of the Kentucky Constitution. Along with these are original Breckinridge, Clay and Shelby letters, and there are several boxes of James Lane Allen and John Fox Jr. letters and manuscripts.

As yet the literary executors have not completed their work of going through this library, but already they have packed over fifty large cartons of papers alone to be sent to the Library. This perhaps partment of history, widely known author, public speaker and teacher, was elected president of the Southern Historical Association at the group's annual meeting held Nov. 2, 1946, in Birmingham, Ala.

Long active in the association, which is devoted to the promotion of interest and research in southern history, Dr. Clark is one of the youngest men ever to hold the position. He served last year as vice president.

The Lexington, Ky., Herald, in commenting on the honor, said:

EMINENT HISTORIAN HONORED

"The election of Dr. Thomas D. Clark, head of the history department of the University of Kentucky, as president of the Southern Historical Society, is a high honor to a distinguished Kentuckian. As a teacher and student of history, Dr. Clark is recognized in educational circles but the public generally knows him better as an author. His contributions to the American River series on the Kentucky River made a valued history out of that volume whose theme seemed otherwise limited, and his books on 'The Rampaging Frontier,' and the country drug store search analytically into the true history of real people. As head of this organization he will be still further able to advance the study of the South's priceless history and heritage, truly an inspirational foundation for a new day."

Dr. Clark has also been invited by Prof. William I. Wiley, head of the Louisiana State University history department to read the historically famous "Fleming Lectures" before his winter class in history in March.

W. H. Townsend, '12 Buys Helm Place

To Move Lincoln Collection There

By THOMAS D. CLARK, '29

On November 8, 1946, the news that William H. Townsend had bought Helm Place, six miles from Lexington on the Bowman's Mill Pike, was made public. This is one of the finest old Colonial homes in the Bluegrass country. Located on a prominent knoll overlooking the south fork of the Elkhorn it surveys wide sweeps of rolling Kentucky countryside. Nearby is the site of the old pioneer fort, Todd's Station. Helm Place was built by William Leany in 1791, and since then has changed hands only five times. Since 1912 it has been the home of the late Ben Hardin Helm and his sisters Mrs. Elodie Helm Louis and of Emilie Helm until her death in 1930.

The associations of Helm Place with both the Confederacy and the Union are indeed intimate. Brigadier General Ben Hardin Helm was a distinguished officer in the Confederate Army, and his wife Emilie was a half-sister of Mary Todd Lincoln. Because of this relationship rich memories are associated with Helm Place. Valuable collections of records and relics have accumulated in its rooms, and Mrs. Lewis has been diligent in their preservation. In passing from the ownership of Mr. Helm and Mrs. Lewis to Mr. Townsend, this house is to become even more the home of priceless historical materials. Mr. Townsend has combined the practice of law with collecting and writing. A highly successful author of many books on Lincoln, he is at the same time the owner of one of the finest Lincoln collections in private hands. Among the more valuable Lincoln items is the worn and thumb-stained old copy of the Revised Statutes of Indiana which was once the property of David Turnham and from which Lincoln first began to read law. There is the fine little human association document in the check which President Lincoln gave his young son Tad upon the occasion of his serious illness in February, 1862, to be cashed when he was well enough to present it. Besides these invaluable association documents Mr. Townsend possesses a large collection of letters and official papers written by and about the Civil War President.

In the purchase of Helm Place Mr. Townsend will for the first time have an opportunity to properly display his materials and relics so that visitors may have an opportunity to see them. Not only does he have manuscripts and relics, but likewise a very large collection of books on Lincoln. He owns every significant book on the subject which has been available to the private collector. It will now be possible for him to gather his library into a single unit. Certainly there could be no more proper setting for so fine a collection than this fine old colonial Kentucky home which is reminiscent of a Kentucky which has existed for more than a hundred and fifty years, and of two families which have figured so prominently in state and national history. In moving his Lincoln collection to the knoll overlooking the Elkhorn, Mr. Townsend is in a sense bringing about a happy reunion of a family that was divided by the great sectional struggle which separated the nation.

constitutes about half of the manuscript alone.

The Wilson book collection is as fine as that of the Durrett Collection at the University of Chicago, and perhaps the famous Draper Collection at the University of Wisconsin. No one knows at the moment how many thousand volumes it contains, but it is known that it was almost beyond the University's fondest dream that it would someday be able to add so handsome a collection to its holdings. For more than a century Kentucky has needed to collect a large body of Kentuckiana in one place where students of the state's history could have access to it. Now for the first time such a collection is available in the state where there is likewise an assembly of serious students. The University of Kentucky can now take great pride in the fact that it has a collection of regional material which compares favorably with those in the best university libraries in the South.

It is now possible for the University of Kentucky to lay claim to an important collection of state materials which will aid materially in a high degree of productive scholarship in several branches of learning. Possessing a fireproof building and a trained staff, along with a supporting collection of approximately 400,000 books, and a large body of manuscripts, the Library is in a position to give this regional collection a high degree of usability. The Samuel M. Wilson Collection is the first really large one to be given to the University, and it is a major landmark in the growth of an important state University.

Dr. John D. Williams, U.K. '26, Inaugurated Head Of University Of Mississippi On October 25th

By LAVERNE YATES

Last October 25, Dr. John Davis Williams, an alumnus (A.B. 1926, M.A. 1930) of the University of Kentucky, director of the University High School and associate professor of education at the university 1935-36, and director of the University Elementary School and the University High School and professor of education 1936-42, was formally inducted into the chancellorship of the University of Mississippi. Doctor Williams actually assumed the chancellorship on July 15 as the fifteenth head of the Mississippi institution, having been preceded in office by three presidents and eleven chancellors since the founding of the institution in 1848.

The inaugural ceremonies, at which Dr. Herman Lee Donovan, president of the University of Kentucky, was guest speaker, took place on the university campus, in the presence of a large assemblage of students, faculty members, members of the Board of Trustees of institutions of higher learning of the state of Mississippi, state officials of Mississippi, patrons and friends of the university, and a large number of delegates representing seventy-eight colleges and universities in all parts of the country. Mrs. V. O. Williams, Alexandria, Kentucky, mother of the new chancellor, was also among those present.

In a brief but pertinent inaugural address, Chancellor Williams concisely defined the body and functions of a modern university, succinctly pointing out the roles that divisions and departments must definitely play in their individual relationships to the university in the general fulfillment of a great obligation to students, patrons, the state, and society in general.

Preceding Chancellor Williams on the program, the guest speaker, President Donovan, emphasized before the assemblage the importance of the role being played in American affairs and American life by college teachers, whom he designated "Minor Statesmen."

Emphasizing teaching and research as the chief functions of a university, Chancellor Williams said:

"The University of Mississippi, to meet its responsibilities in this day, must continuously re-examine its offerings not only to provide for education of superior individuals but also to work closely with all the educational forces of the state to develop more intelligent methods of problem-solving among all people.

"To many sound thinkers," he continued, "it is obvious that if the United States is to maintain world leadership, and if democracy is to prevail, efforts to make some measure of college education effectively free to far greater numbers of the population must be continued.

"I am confident," the new chancellor also stated, "that the University of Mississippi will keep step with the current movements, will consider the sweeping changes that are occurring in every part of the world, and will continue to educate youth for the exercise of leadership.

"To the accomplishment of these purposes, I pledge you my best."

The Honorable J. Lake Rober-son, Sr., Clarksdale (Miss.), presi- dent of the Alumni Association of the University of Mississippi, speaking in behalf of the associa- tion, expressed to Chancellor Wil- liams the association's good will and pledged its support to the new chancellor's undertaking to per- petuate the ideals and the purposes of the university and to his resolu- tion to lead the university in the performance of the obligations ly- ing before it.

The Honorable Martin V. B. Miller, Meridian (Miss.), president of the Board of Trustees, presided over the inaugural ceremonies and, in behalf of the Board, formally recognized Doctor Williams and welcomed him into the chan- cellorship.

Mr. Miller was introduced by Dr. Alfred Hume, chancellor emeritus of the university.

McGinnis Named Head Of Catholic Group

LOUIS MCGINNIS

Louis McGinnis, '31, a member of the W. R. Milward mortuary staff, has been elected president of the Lexington Baden Club, Catholic men's organization.

Baker Appointed Co. Sales Manager

The appointment of Homer L. Baker, Ex., as sales manager of the Louisville Cement Company (manufacturers of Brixment and Speed Portland Cement) has been announced by John H. Mallon, vice-president in charge of sales.

As sales manager, Mr. Baker will be responsible for one of the larger sales organizations in the materials industry.

After leaving the Engineering College of the University of Ken- tucky in 1921, Mr. Baker served his apprenticeship in the building- material industry as sales repre- sentative for two other nationally- known manufacturers. Joining the Louisville Cement Company in 1927, he was southeastern sales representative for thirteen years. In 1940 Mr. Baker was brought into the home office at Louisville, Kentucky to become assistant sales manager. His promotion to sales manager became effective on No- vember 1, 1946.

Mr. Baker's son, Bill Dudley, is at present a student at the Uni- versity.

U.K. Alumni Of Greater New York Hold Big Reorganization Meeting

Rupp, Shively, King Attend From Campus

University of Kentucky Alumni from the Greater New York area, held a reorganization meeting, the first since the war, Friday night, December 20, at Savarin's Restaurant, 120 Broadway, with Howard M. West, B.M.E. '05, presiding.

The meeting was held the night before the Kentucky-St. Johns basketball game in Madison Square Garden, and approximately 90 members and guests were present to hear talks by Head Basketball Coach Adolph Rupp; Athletic Director Bernie A. Shively, and Alumni Association Secretary Helen G. King. Highlight of the program was the showing of a movie of the Kentucky-Marquette football game by Mr. Shively.

Election of a president of the group, to succeed Mr. West, headed the agenda for the evening, and Elvis J. Stahr, Jr., A.B. '36, formerly of Hickman, Ky., and now a member of the law firm of Mudge, Stern, Williams and Tucker, 40 Wall Street, was named president of the group.

Mr. Stahr was an outstanding student and campus leader while attending the University, and was Kentucky Rhodes Scholar following his graduation.

Following a delicious dinner, President West called on Rufus Lee Weaver, LL.B. '95, to offer the invocation. Mr. Weaver, as chairman of the nominating committee made the report for that group, and moved that Mr. Stahr be elected by acclamation. His motion carried. Other officers of the group will be chosen later by a board of directors, made up of a group of members present who signed a pledge signifying their willingness to serve.

The new president, upon taking office, offered two resolutions, one on membership on the board of directors, one on membership in the group, which were submitted to the organization and which passed unanimously. The resolution for the directorate, involved a pledge of service on the governing council and read as follows:

"As an alumnus of the University of Kentucky, by my signature below, I affirm my genuine desire to further the interests of the University of Kentucky, and to that end I pledge my cooperation in the organization of a revitalized association of the University's alumni in the New York metropolitan area.

"I agree to become a member of the Association, and I further offer to it my services as a member of its Governing Council, with the understanding that in this capacity I will make every effort to attend four or more meetings of the Council in 1947, will give my best thought to the formation and furtherance of the plans and policies of the association, and will contribute a reasonable amount of either funds or special services to the activities of the association. I agree that the Governing Council shall determine the minimum acceptable amounts of funds (not to exceed $25 per year), or services required of its own membership, but I reserve the right to elect whether my own contribution shall be in funds, or services, or both."

Approximately 20 members present signed up for the board of directors.

The pledge of membership, which was signed by all others present, was as follows:

"As an alumnus of the University of Kentucky I affirm my genuine desire to further the interests of the University of Kentucky, and to that end I pledge my cooperation in the organization of a revitalized association of the University's alumni in the New York metropolitan area.

"I therefore agree to join and support the association, to pay its regular membership dues (not to exceed $4 per year), and to use my best efforts to further its aims, build its membership and secure full attendance at its meetings."

Called upon by the president to discuss the pledge of the Governing Council, Mr. Stephen A. Rapiere, Ex. '09, New York exporter and head of the Square D Co., 61 Broadway, discussed the plan and related some amusing incidents connected with his career at the University and the effect it had had upon his business life.

Although the elements were against the meeting, the attendance was excellent and the reorganization of the New York club was pronounced a complete success. According to present plans, the group hopes to arrange a dinner meeting for March, provided Kentucky is invited to the National Invitational Basketball Tournament in the Garden. If such an invitation materializes, President H. L. Donovan will accompany the team and the dinner will be in his honor.

All Kentucky alumni and former students in the metropolitan area are requested to communicate with Mr. Stahr at once, in order to get their names on the membership roster.

Dr. Donovan Guest Of Chicago Club

President H. L. Donovan, '14, in Chicago the week of December 16 for the annual meeting of the Association of Land Grant Colleges and Universities, was the guest of the University of Kentucky Alumni Club of Chicago at a luncheon meeting Dec. 17 at the University Club. Julius Wolf, '16, president, arranged for the luncheon.

They called on the University president to talk to them about the development and progress of the University, and following Dr. Donovan's address an election of officers was held, at which time Ben Ragland, '36, was elected president.

President Donovan reported that he was delighted to have the opportunity to meet with the Chicago group, and said, "I am of the opinion that we have one of the most aggressive groups of alumni to be found in the country, in the Chicago area."

Present for the luncheon were: Robert B. Cottrell, 410 N. Michigan Ave. William L. Lowry, 640 N. Grove, Grove Park; W. T. Harmon, 3 East Oak Ave., LaGrange; M. Alperin, 1238 N. Elmdale; R. Chester A. Kuebler, '10, Heads Uniflow Manufacturing Company

Chester A. Kuebler, '10, president of the Uniflow Manufacturing Co., of Erie, Penn., is a native of Louisville, Ky., and a life member of the University of Kentucky Alumni Association.

Mr. Kuebler was connected with various concerns in the pump and motor business at Dayton, Ohio, for a number of years prior to his purchase of the Uniflow Manufacturing Co. of Dayton in 1925. At that time it consisted mostly of three employees and an idea. From this very tiny organization has grown a manufacturing plant in Erie which now employs 250 people and which occupies 75,000 square feet of floor space producing not only electric pumps and water systems but also zeolite water softeners, electric cellar drainers, electric drinking water coolers, and a wide variety of commercial refrigeration.

The establishment was moved to its present location in Erie in late 1926 and celebrated its 25th corporate anniversary in 1945.

Mr. Kuebler, besides contributing to the consistent growth of the business, during his 20 years in Erie has taken a great interest in civic activities and only this year completed two outstanding pieces of work. The first was as chairman of a successful campaign to raise $1,800,000 for the city's Hamot General Hospital Enlargement Fund, and the second as chairman in 1946 of the Erie Community Chest drive.

LaSalle St.; Julius Wolf, 8238 Eberhart Ave.; Mrs. Susan Jackson Karstrom, 2970 Sheridan Road; and C. W. Gordon, 535 Oak St., Glen Ellyn, Ill.

Mrs. Kuebler is also a native of Louisville, being the former Evelyn Huber of that city. They have a son and two daughters as well as two grandchildren.

Secretary Of D. C. Club Visits Campus

Russell Cox, '39, administrative assistant with the Reconstruction Finance Corporation and secretary of the Washington, D. C., club, visited the campus in January.

Mr. Cox was married to Miss Muriel Speidell of Washington, June 22 in Baltimore, Md. They are living in Arlington, Va.

The Washington club secretary asked the office to announce that the meeting place of Washington alumni has been changed to the Annapolis Hotel, at 12th and H. Streets. They meet every second Wednesday at 12:15 p.m. All visiting alumni are cordially invited to attend.

Col. Peter P. Rodes Intelligence Head

Located in Germany

Colonel Peter Powell Rodes of Lexington, former University of Kentucky student, has been appointed director of the Office of Intelligence, the American Military Government in Berlin announced in December.

During World War II, the Kentucky officer was a brigadier general and commanded the divisional artillery of the 70th Infantry Division. As director of the Office of Intelligence he succeeds Col. Theodore J. Koenig.

Mrs. Rodes and their three daughters, Janet, Betty Powell and Martha, who have made their home in Rockford, Ill., were scheduled to sail in December to join Colonel Rodes in Berlin.

Paul Porter Heads Mission to Greece

Paul Porter, U. K., Ex., recently resigned chief of the Office of Price Administration, has been named chief of an American economic mission to Greece.

Porter, with the personal rank of Ambassador, was scheduled to leave Washington the last of January with a group of economic, financial and engineering experts to study economic conditions in Greece "as they bear upon the reconstruction and development of the economy of that country."

Undersecretary of State Dean Acheson made the announcement of the appointment, and said that the mission had been asked to complete its job by the end of April.

UK Student At "Turn Of The Century" Visits Old Campus Scenes In November

Editor of First U.K. Weekly, Returns

E. E. Johnson of Albuquerque, New Mexico, a student at the old Kentucky State College in the days when Kentucky counties named appointees to the Academy and to the College, returned to his alma mater in November, his first visit to the campus in 45 years.

A native of Jefferson county, and an appointee from that county, Mr. Johnson entered the Academy in the late 1800's, and remained a student here until the middle of his sophomore year in college, in 1901, when his health broke and he moved to New Mexico.

Gay and vigorous, with a twinkle in his eye when he recalled some of his college pranks and escapades, Mr. Johnson modestly admitted that he was the moving spirit in the establishment of the first Kentucky State College weekly paper, "The Record," and was its first editor. He worked his way partially through college, and earned some of his expenses on the Lexington Herald, when Desha Breckinridge was its editor and Jouett Shouse its business manager.

A civil engineering student, Mr. Johnson proudly recalled that in 1899, when the old State College had applied for an appropriation of $75,000 from the State Legislature, President James K. Patterson called him into his office and asked him if he would like to go to Frankfort and talk to the representatives from Jefferson county about the proposed appropriation. "I not only did that," said Mr. Johnson, "but, being young and bold, I even approached Senator William Goebel about the college's needs. He assured me that he would do all he could for the school. I am proud to report that we got the appropriation."

Mr. Johnson gleefully recalled, "without danger of being expelled now," the day when he and some of his classmates induced the campus mule to climb the steps of the Administration building, and when the faculty and students assembled for chapel on the second floor of that building, they found "Jane" happily ensconced on the platform. That, as well as many other student pranks were conveniently blamed on a fictitious campus character named Captain Bolivar, and the real culprits were never apprehended.

Another well-known Kentucky alumnus, C. C. "Fred" Clark, center on Kentucky's "Immortal" football team of 1898, resides just eighty miles from Mr. Johnson's home, and is a practicing dentist, according to the recent visitor.

U.K. Grad Writes for Beaux-Arts Gazette

An article by Clay Lancaster, A.B. '38, M.A. '39, Lexington, librarian at Columbia University where he is working on his doctorate, appeared in a recent issue of the Gazette Beaux-Arts.

Mr. Lancaster has also had another article accepted by the same magazine while another appeared in the November issue of Antiques Magazine. He has made detailed studies of American architecture of the 18th and 19th centuries particularly in the Blue Grass, and has written four previous articles for accepted publications.

Bryant's Coaching Contract At UK Extended to '56 at Close of Season

Five Years Added

As a reward for presenting the University of Kentucky with its best football record in 34 years, Coach Paul Bryant has been signed to a new contract giving him nine more years as head man in the Wildcat gridiron show.

Signing of the new contract served to quiet rumors, prevalent for several weeks before the close of the season, that the former University of Alabama star had intentions of returning to his alma mater to replace Coach Frank Thomas, reported in ill health, as head coach of the Crimson Tide.

When the rumor was first circulated, Bryant declined to comment. Later, however, he said that he had not been offered the Alabama job, nor had he discussed the matter with officials of that school. But because he had never stated flatly that he would not accept the Tide assignment if it were offered him, many Kentucky fans were uneasy about his plans for the future.

After his team had won seven games in 10 starts to give the Cats their best record since 1912 there was even more speculation concerning Bryant's intentions. As a result, the University of Kentucky Athletic Association instructed President H. L. Donovan to extend Bryant's contract for five more years.

It was not disclosed whether the new contract differed from the original five-year pact signed last winter, other than extending the coach's "tenure of office." However, it is understood that several other new stipulations were included.

Bryant, who came here from the University of Maryland to head the new football setup at the University, was reported unofficially to have been receiving $12,000 a year under the original pact. It is believed that a salary increase was included in the new pact.

The assistant coaches who aided Bryant in his successful debut at Kentucky will remain unchanged, it was said. They are reported to hold three-year contracts.

Bryant's only statement after signing the new contract was:

"My family and I are happy to make Lexington our permanent home, and I am looking forward with a great deal of enthusiasm to continuing my work here at the University."

At 33 one of the youngest head coaches in the nation at a major school, Bryant spent 42 months in the Navy during the war and had been a head coach only one season when he was brought to Kentucky.

"The man of the hour" at the Alumni Association's annual football dinner-dance was Coach Paul "Bear" Bryant (at microphone), who this year gave Kentucky its most successful grid season since 1912. At his left is his lovely wife, and to the right the Alumni Association's "old reliable," Athletic Director Bernie A. Shively, '36.

Alumni Banquet Grand Finale To Fine Grid Season

Coaches, Squad Are Association Guests

Grand finale to the Wildcats' most successful football season since 1912, was the Alumni Association's annual dinner-dance held November 25 in the Bluegrass room of the Student Union, honoring coaching staff and squad.

Approximately 225 guests, including members of the athletic board, sports writers and members of the Alumni executive committee were present for the festive affair which was proclaimed the best party in more than 20 years of these annual events.

Bernie A. Shively, '36, University athletic director presided, and Russell Scofield, president of the Lexington Salesmens' Club which took such an active part in the Athletic Association's financial drive last spring, served as toastmaster. Dr. Leo M. Chamberlain, University vice president, brought greetings and good wishes to the coaching staff and team from President H. L. Donovan, who was absent because of a death in his family. Coach Paul "Bear" Bryant briefly reviewed the season and congratulated his squad on their fine showing, and Mr. Shively presented athletic letters and numerals to squad members recommended to the athletic board by Coach Bryant.

Features of the evening were the announcement, by Coach Bryant, that team members had elected Phil Cutchin, Murray, Ky., senior, as honorary captain of the 1946 team, and the presentation of the outstanding senior trophy, donated by Jerome Lederer, Lexington businessman, to Cutchin.

The young Murray, Ky., player was also selected for this honor by his teammates.

Entertainment was furnished by a group of professionals from Radio Station WHAS, Louisville, under the direction of Mack Wynne, WHAS promotion manager, with George Walsh, popular WHAS sports announcer, serving as master of ceremonies.

A surprise feature of the entertainment was two skits presented by four members of the squad. Paul Young, Louisville center, gave a monologue of a German announcer calling a football game; and Harry Ulinski, Ambridge, Pa., quarterback, Dominic Fucci, Mt. Washington, N. J. end, and Leo Yarutis, Gary, Ind. guard, who played such an outstanding

Phil Cutchin, Murray, Ky., senior and field general for the 1946 edition of the Wildcat football team, was chosen honorary captain for the year by his teammates, at the close of the season. Coach Bryant follows the plan of appointing captains for each game, and at the end of the campaign the team elects an outstanding senior to the honorary position.

Cutchin was also chosen by his teammates to receive the trophy presented by Jerome Lederer, Lexington businessman, to the outstanding senior on the squad.

game against Tennessee, gave a hilarious skit in Italian dialect.

Pronounced by Coach Bryant, his staff and team as the best football banquet they had ever attended, the Alumni Association was pleased to be able to present first class food and entertainment to a bang-up Kentucky Wildcat squad.

Ermal Allen, Kentucky's capable field general during the early part of the 1946 grid season, who was declared ineligible by the Southeastern Conference following the Mississippi game, was presented with a new automobile by the Lexington Junior Chamber of Commerce, between halves of the Tobacco Bowl football game, played on Stoll Field, December 14. The gift was made by the Jaycees in appreciation of Allen's services to the Kentucky football team.

Following the ineligibility ruling, Coach Paul Bryant named Allen a member of his coaching staff.

Former Grid Coach Now Circuit Judge

John J. Winn of Mt. Sterling, who coached the University of Kentucky Wildcat football team in 1923, has been appointed circuit judge of the 21st judicial district, comprising Bath, Menifee, Montgomery and Rowan counties.

These Boys Sparked The 1946 Grid Team

These Wildcat stars really relaxed at the Alumni dinner-dance, and they had earned some fun as the group included at least two celebrities. From left to right, Jay Rhodemyre, first-string center, who made the third All-Southeastern Conference team; Wallace, the great "Wah Wah" Jones, who was chosen end on the first mythical All-Conference team; Don, "Dopey" Phelps, Kentucky's backfield speed demon; Chick Sengel, end; Washington, "Wash" Serini, the old war horse who plays such a reliable game at tackle; and "Doc" Ferrell, tackle.

Honors Heaped On 1946 Football Team

By JIM DANCE, Sports Writer
Department of Public Relations

"It'll be different next year."—For years this has been the closing statement by Kentucky football fans as they looked back over the football season. The loyal followers who made this annual prediction at the conclusion of the 1945 season were probably saying it more out of hope than out of honest belief. However, it's generally admitted now that this season was different—and that next season will be different too.

In winning seven out of ten games this year, the Wildcats were different from any Kentucky team since 1912—in placing a player on the all-conference team, the Wildcats were straying from usual Kentucky procedure—in showing more fight and determination, the 'Cats were responsible for a welcome change. In practically every way the "Big Blue" outdid its predecessors of the last not-so-few years.

Several Kentucky players were picked as outstanding in their department of play. Wallace Jones, who hesitated to go out for football because he thought basketball was his game, ended the season on the All-Conference and All-Midwestern teams. The lanky Harlan sophomore convinced Coach Bryant early in the season that he was a capable end and before the season was a month old, Bryant had picked Jones as the best end in the South, an opinion later shared by many Southern sports writers. Jones caught 17 passes for a total yardage gain of 358 yards. He took five of these passes across the double stripe to account for thirty of the team's 233 points. His defensive play caused many headaches among rival coaches, especially against Georgia when he repeatedly caught All-American Charlie Trippi behind the line for losses. Coach Butts remarked after the game that Jones was the finest young end he had seen all season, and added ruefully "I wish I had him."

Leo Yarutis, although out most of the season with a broken wrist, finally got to play in the Tennessee game. He went at this job with such ferocity and sincerity that he was picked player of the week by a poll of southern sports writers. After the regular season was over, Yarutis was chosen to play in the annual North-South game in Montgomery but a broken hand received in a practice session kept him out of the classic.

Wash Serini came in for his share of the glory too, as he was also picked to play in the North-South game. Serini, a junior, played in the annual affair as a freshman and his defensive and offensive prowess on the Wildcat team this year brought him another invitation.

Although hampered in the early part of the season by an injured leg, Don "Dopey" Phelps came back in a big way late in the season with some of the most spectacular runs of the season. In the Michigan State game, Phelps carried the ball a trifle over 300 yards and accounted for 24 of Kentucky's 39 points. Although he didn't get started until that game, Phelps ended the season with an average of 5.8 yards for every rushing attempt and has the nation's highest average on yardage gained on kick-off returns. He's still a freshman too.

With only one loss from the first string, and with a wealth of material from high-schools all over the country, Kentucky seems headed for national prominence in football, a position they already hold in basketball. There were four losses from the squad as a whole this year. Phil Cutchin, Charlie Bill Walker, Bill Portwood and Jesse Tunstill all graduate this year and, naturally, they are going to be missed. But there are a lot of new men arriving and it is the belief of most "Big Blue" fans that it's going to be a different story from now on. "Just wait 'til next year" is still being heard, but it's being spoken in anticipation and not, as has been the case, in desperate retaliation to the jibes of opponent alumni.

UK Plans Stadium With 28,000 Seating Capacity

Plans to handle future football crowds of approximately 28,000 spectators at Stoll Field have been announced by officials at the University of Kentucky.

Additional seating space will be provided by the construction of four additional sections to McLean stadium to accommodate from 6,000 to 8,000 and by placing 8,000 steel-bleacher seats at the ends of the playing field.

These additional seats plus the seats in the existing six sections of the stadium and seats which will be provided by sandwiching in wood bleachers between the stadium and the steel bleachers would increase the present seating capacity of 19,500 by approximately 8,500, Frank D. Peterson, University comptroller, pointed out.

The University board of trustees has authorized the construction of four additional sections to the Stoll Field stadium, pending authorization by the Civilian Production Administration.

The new stadium sections will be placed at either end of the north and south stands, from the 10-yard lines to the goal lines.

Beginning of work, it was pointed out, will depend entirely upon obtaining CPA approval. However, purchase of steel bleachers will not require federal approval.

Eventually, the University may further enlarge the stadium by construction of additional rows of seats at the top of both sides. Several rows may be added by extending the north side back to Euclid avenue and the south side could be doubled in size providing a seating capacity of 35,000, Mr. Peterson pointed out.

Formal approval also has been given by the trustees to begin work on the University memorial field house-auditorium. The CPA in December approved a permit for construction of foundations and erection of steel superstructure for the building. Contracts for the initial phase of the work may be awarded in February so that work can be started this spring.

C.-J. Sports Staff Honors Kentuckians

Coach Bryant, Rupp "Coaches of Year"

In a poll of members of the Courier-Journal sports staff, Earl Ruby sports editor of the Louisville, Ky., newspaper has published the concensus of their opinions as to the outstanding Kentucky coaches and athletes of the year just closed.

Head Football Coach Paul Bryant was named "coach of the year," with Head Basketball Coach Adolph Rupp in the No. 2 position; while Wallace "Wah Wah" Jones of Harlan, All-Conference basketball and football star was named athlete of the year, with little Ralph Beard, sophomore basketball luminary at Kentucky in the runner-up position.

The University of Kentucky was named the "school of the year"; the greatest team showing

Ky's. No. 1 Cagers Still Heading List

By JIM DANCE, Sports Writer
Dept. of Public Relations

At the conclusion of last year's basketball season, it was the widespread opinion that the 1945-'46 Kentucky cagers had rolled up a record that would last for a good many years. In winning 28 of 30 games, the cats annexed the S.E.C. tournament for the eighth time and defeated Rhode Island in the finals to win the Metropolitan Invitational in Madison Square Garden.

This year, however, scribes from all over the country have taken one look at the Kentucky roster and have picked the 'Cats as the best in the country and probably the best team of all time. After the St. John's game, played early in the season in Madison Square Garden, several of the old timers of Garden basketball termed the Kentucky team the best combination ever to play in the Garden.

Naturally, there is a reason for all this enthusiasm. It's because of the wealth of material Coach Rupp has on hand to help make the writers' predictions come true.

From last year's squad, Coach Rupp has the services of Ralph Beard, Wallace Jones, Jack Tingle, Joe Holland, Kenton Campbell, Buddy Parker, Rudy Yessin and Muff Davis, all lettermen. And—Bob Brannum, All-American center in 1944, Jim Jordan, All-American guard at North Carolina for the last two years, Alex Groza, 6'7" center who was picked as the outstanding service player of the nation last year, plus a host of very promising freshmen and some outstanding pre-war players. With five All-Conference and two All-American players it stands to reason that the club will be better than average.

This wealth of material is not enough, however, to make the usually skeptical sports writers place Kentucky on the top of the heap. They know that any team may have the material for a great basketball team and never be able to click because they are playing as individuals rather than as a team. The thing that sets the Wildcats apart from this class is the coaching staff. Coach Rupp has demonstrated time after time that he is capable of taking a team and defeating a group of five would-be stars. The ability of the coaching staff to handle boys with ability in such a way as to make them an efficient combination is known by every sports writer in the land. It is the combination of great coaches and great players that distinguishes the Wildcat team.

Early in the season, the '46-'47 "pore little mountain boys" broke two Kentucky basketball records. In defeating Wabash 96-24 they reached the highest scoring mark ever made by a Rupp-coached team and by winning their first 11 games, the 'Cats ran the consecutive win figures to 26 games, three more than the old record.

The blue and white clad basketekers have played 21 games this season with only one loss thus far to mar their record. The Sugar Bowl game in New Orleans saw the Wildcats go down in defeat for the first time in 27 starts as a strong defensive Oklahoma A & M team caught the 'Cats off guard and defeated them 37-31.

Distinguished guests and members were then presented, following, which Coach Rupp, in his inimitable and vivid style, gave a review of Kentucky athletics and showed moving pictures of the final game of the National Invitational Basketball Tournament in Madison Square Garden last March, and pictures of two of Kentucky's football games this fall.

Mr. Wolf reports that the group present included alumni from over a span of forty years.

WAR DEP'T. HONORS PRESIDENT BLANDING

Inauguration, Award, Joint Ceremonies

Sarah Gibson Blanding of Kentucky, was doubly honored on October 11 when she was inaugurated as the first woman president of 81-year-old Vassar College, and at the same time received a surprise award from the U. S. War Department for her wartime contribution to the welfare of United States servicewomen.

Inauguration ceremonies took place in Vassar chapel, crowded to capacity by more than 1,400 guests, and presentation of the award, the exceptional civilian service decoration, was made by Brig. Gen. Roger Alexander, dean of the academic board of the U. S. Military Academy at West Point.

General Alexander then announced the appointment of Vassar's new president to the War Department's Civilian Advisory Council, recently established to advise on personnel management within the Army.

In her inaugural address Miss Blanding emphasized the need for colleges to train their graduates as useful and active members of society in the world today, and said:

"As Alice discovered in the world behind the looking glass, you must run very fast indeed just to stay where you are when the very ground under your feet is moving. If a college is to serve a changing society, it cannot stand still. . .

"The blitz reduced to rubble more than the churches of Europe and the atom bomb wiped out more than Nagasaki and Hiroshima. Man's relation to the universe itself was profoundly changed. . .

before the tremendous challenge of this new world mankind is dazed as is a man in desperate terror . . . so the recovery and progress of society must depend on the great vital forces of education and religion."

Other speakers at the inauguration ceremonies were Dr. Edmund E. Day, president of Cornell University, where Miss Blanding was serving as dean of the college of home economics when elected to Vassar's presidency last spring; Dr. Virginia C. Gildersleeve, dean of Barnard College, and Dr. Frank L. McVey, president emeritus of the University of Kentucky, Miss Blanding's alma mater.

NEW PRESIDENT LAUDED

Day paid tribute to the girl who worked her way through the University of Kentucky to become its dean of women and associate professor of political science, saying:

"I think your new president is one of the best morale builders I have ever known." He said he considered morale building one of the major responsibilities of a college president, and attributed Miss Blanding's success at both the University of Kentucky and Cornell to her "unfailing honesty, delightful candor and forthrightness, quick sense of humor, rare intelligence, wide sympathy and unfailing awareness of duty and social responsibility."

Dean Gildersleeve, bringing greetings from the colleges for women, said: "Vassar is to be congratulated on getting Sarah Blanding, but so is Sarah Blanding to be congratulated on getting Vassar."

Miss Blanding was inducted by Mrs. Morris Hadley, chairman of

Two UK Men Receive National Publicity

Unique Business Makes Headlines

The business acumen and enterprise of two young University of Kentucky graduates have been the subject, during the past year, of feature stories in Time Magazine and Liberty Magazine, and of a Vox Pop nation-wide broadcast. The objects of this national attention are James C. Bishop, '34, formerly of Murray, Ky., and C. Frank Stone, III, '32, formerly of Montclair, N. J., now president and first vice president, respectively, of U. S. Homes, Inc., Marietta, Ga.

Jimmie and Frank were students and fraternity brothers in Sigma Alpha Epsilon at the University in the early thirties. They both married Lexington and University girls: Dorothy Whitsitt now being Mrs. Bishop, and Virginia Young becoming Mrs. Stone.

After graduation their paths parted, and eventually, as it happened to most young men of this generation, they ended up in the uniforms of Uncle Sam's Army.

Jim Bishop, was, during the war, a lieutenant colonel of ordnance who was in charge of building a large ordnance depot at Bazancourt, near Rheims, France. Even then he was planning his post-war career which dealt with erecting prefabricated homes. Following the war he teamed up with Frank Stone, a former captain on the General Staff in Washington, who, prior to the war, was employed by the Chemical Bank of New York, and they got down to the business of financing their project, staffing their organization, and setting up business in Marietta, Ga.

They went to the RFC when a bank turned down their request for a loan. Then, according to the feature story in Liberty Magazine, "M. E. (Mike) Everett, Atlanta manager, and D. M. Carroll, head of the loan-approval division of RFC took a paternal interest and recommended the loan to the Veterans Administration, which agreed to guarantee half of the $175,000 total. Getting the first $100,000 was the hardest. Bishop and Stone called a mass meeting which was attended by several hundred veterans. Thirty-six men signed up at once and in little more than a fortnight the hundred was complete.

"... The recruiting job involved getting 100 men, each with $1,000 and each with a skill that fitted into the organization chart. The U. S. Employment Service helped with the screening. . . . Nobody wanted to invest $1,000 to be a janitor so a non-stockholding veteran was hired for that job. No licensed electrician applied so the man who had been chief electrician of the Bell plant in Marietta, Ga., where the project is located, was engaged. That made the outfit about 99.44 per cent pure GI stockholder-employee."

U. S. Homes, Inc., is the name of the outfit, and, says Liberty, "is doubtless the only sizeable company in the world which holds a stockholders meeting at quitting time every Monday afternoon. Everybody gathers on the plant floor, or out on the loading platform, to be addressed by the president. Former Lieutenant Colonel Bishop, who is Jim to his fellow stockholders, reports on the week's gains and losses."

Frank is first vice president and sales manager for the outfit, and except for the general superintendent, who is a World War I

UK Acquires Mobile Lab

Biological research at the University of Kentucky was given a figurative "shot in the arm" during the past fall with the addition of a new $10,000, completely equipped "laboratory on wheels" to the field facilities of the UK Biological Science Departments.

A monstrous six-wheeled affair with four-wheel drive, the new laboratory truck was purchased by the University recently as war surplus and for only a fraction of its value. During the war, the government ordered several of these "traveling laboratories" built for use in the various combat theaters to study sanitary conditions.

Only a few, however, saw actual service before the end of hostilities and the remaining small number were made available to departments of health and institutions engaged in the education of students in the biological sciences.

U.K. MAN PREPARES WELFARE REPORT

Dr. H. W. Beers Edits
The Fifth in Series

A report on Public Welfare, prepared by Dr. Howard W. Beers, professor of rural sociology at the University of Kentucky, and published by the Committee for

The University's truck is virtually new, having been driven only 21 miles when purchased, and is believed to be one of the few in the country owned by an educational institution.

Placed under the custody of Dr. W. D. Funkhouser, head of the Department of Zoology, the laboratory truck has been equipped with the latest in facilities that make up a modern biological laboratory, including an incubator, refrigerator, AC and DC currents, compressed air, steam, electric lights, dissecting tables and storage cabinets. With its furnishings and equipment, the truck is valued at approximately $10,000, Dr. Funkhouser said.

The motorized laboratory, with room for at least four technicians to work at a time, will be used by the Department of Zoology for field trips and collecting expeditions, particularly in research in ichthyology, ornithology, entomology and parasitology, Dr. Funkhouser explained. The Zoological Museum, dismantled during the war years and the space used by soldier-trainees, will be re-activated and stocked primarily with materials gathered in the field.

Other biological science departments also plan extensive use of the "laboratory on wheels" for scientific field investigations in various parts of the state.

Kentucky as the fifth in a series of such reports presented to the people of Kentucky, came from the press in November.

The Committee for Kentucky is a fact-finding organization "which has as its only objective the welfare of all of Kentucky." Three of the five reports already submitted by the committee were prepared by University of Kentucky faculty members.

Dean Thomas P. Cooper of the College of Agriculture and Home Economics and director of the Experiment Station prepared the report on agriculture; and Dr. Maurice Seay, dean and registrar, prepared the report on education.

UK Receives 19 New Buildings

The Federal Works Agency has allotted to the University 14 additional barracks, two recreation buildings, a service building, to replace temporarily the structure burned last winter, a chemistry laboratory, a cafeteria to supplement the one operating in the Student Union, a nine room class building for English, mathematics and psychology, and a 1,000-horse-power boiler plant, to supplement the central heating system and to enable the school to provide heat for its numerous class and dormitory structures.

This brings to the University a grand total of 347 individual buildings which have been allotted to the University by this agency since the beginning of the emergency and which house a total of 1,040 students. In addition, the Military Department has obtained four Quonset huts from the War Department for use of the ROTC units.

With an enrollment of more than 6,700 students, the University authorities have had to sacrifice the beauty of the campus to the exigencies of the occasion, and have considered placing these temporary units in every conceivable space, not excluding the President's garden. Any place where the grass grows is considered a prospective site for these units.

RESEMBLES ARMY CAMP

Overburdened by a fall quarter registration that dwarfed those of the past and substantially exceeded anticipations, the campus already had taken on the appearance of a cross between an Army camp and a school. Barracks, Quonset huts, and other structures of many descriptions have sprung up boom-town-fashion and all but hide many of the moss-covered and more modern permanent facilities of the university.

Frank D. Peterson, University comptroller, said school authorities had reason to "hope" that some of the main structures could be utilized by the opening of winter classes in January, but expected little relief during the fall term.

He said some of the buildings possibly could be used 10 to 15 years, but emphasized all were temporary in nature and that the school was going ahead with its permanent building program.

"We'll use them as long as they hold up," the comptroller stated. "But the very sites they are being built upon make them temporary. Most of them are prefabricated and could not be expected to be included in any permanent plans."

He said complete plans for the school's long-range building program in connection with President Donovan's announced intention of asking the next State Legislature for $10,000,000 in capital outlay funds had not been formulated.

"It won't take much planning to spend $10,000,000 on our campus," he observed.

TO ASK FIELDHOUSE BIDS.

He said the school planned to advertise for bids which would be opened in January on the new athletic fieldhouse, construction of which has been pending for almost four years.

Actual construction of the fieldhouse might be delayed longer by the shortage of some materials, he said, but the opening of bids in January would permit the start of excavation work and delivery of structural steel.

Col. Scudder Heads Student Training

Col. Irvine C. Scudder, Lexington, combat veteran of both World Wars, and a member of the U. K. military staff for six years prior to World War II, has been given command of the Student Training Regiment at Fort Benning, Ga. Col. Scudder was transferred to the regimental headquarters of the training regiment from the office of the Fort Benning director of officer candidates, where he was assistant to the director.

Serving in the Philippines at the outbreak of the war, Col. Scudder commanded the Cebu forces, consisting of the 82nd, 83rd and 84th infantries, the Bohol forces and other troops of the Philippine Army consolidated on Cebu. His forces carried on organized guerrilla warfare until commanded by Gen. Jonathan M. Wainwright to surrender on May 17, 1942.

Col. Scudder was held prisoner by the Japanese until his release from prison camp by American troops in 1945. For his gallantry in action while leading the Cebu forces, he was awarded the Silver Star medal after his return to the United States.

After his liberation, Col. Scudder attended a cycle of orientation classes to acquaint him with military developments made during his internment. Then he was assigned as executive officer of Camp Campbell, Ky., where he remained until his transfer to Fort Benning's Officer Candidate school.

During World War I, Col. Scudder served in France with the 34th Infantry and received the Silver Star for his work. He later served with the 21st Infantry in Hawaii from 1928 to 1931 and the 10th Infantry from 1931 to 1934.

KILROY IS HERE: ON UK'S CAMPUS

The Elusive Man Is Found at Last

Kilroy, the elusive, the fabulous—the man for whom Jiggs has been searching and who has been made famous wherever service men have gathered, is right here on the University of Kentucky campus—At least, that's what he says!

He is a 20-year-old ex-G. I. and is a freshman from Louisville, Ky. His name is, actually, Frank Kilroy, and he is five feet, eight inches tall and weighs 260, according to a feature story which recently appeared in the Louisville Courier Journal.

"He claims that he is the original Kilroy," says the Courier Journal, "but denies he is responsible for any of the mysterious handwriting on walls in various parts of the world touched by U. S. troops.

"I weighed 280 pounds and the Army gave me to the infantry," Kilroy told his interviewer. "It wasn't long before the infantry gave me to the air corps. I was sort of a 4-F in khaki. The sergeants and officers would tell their men, 'if Kilroy can do it, you can.' Finally it got so that when the boys would do anything they'd write signs over it like, 'Kilroy did it,' or, 'Kilroy was here.' We were inspecting a lot of planes and they used to chalk the phrase on them. I guess that's how it got all over the world."

Kilroy says that he plans to post his own first and last "Kilroy was here" on the wall of the University of Kentucky when he is graduated."

$500 Presented For U.K. Scholarships

The Womens' Pan-Hellenic Association of the University abandoned its annual dinner this year in order to give $500 to the Frances Jewell McVey Scholarship Fund, established in memory of the former beloved dean of women and wife of Emeritus President Frank L. McVey.

Miss Angela Meisch of Stanford, association president from Stanford, Fla., presented the check to Dean of Women Sarah B. Holmes at a presentation-reception held Nov. 21 in the Student Union.

Courier Journal, in referring to Kilroy's story, recalls another fabulous character who once attended the University.

"Back during the depression," says Mr. Ladd's story, "when the engineering school was populated largely by young men of some wealth a group of students registered a fictitious name in the courses.

"For four years this party of students kept up the payments and the work for this person who was a student and a human being in name only. They took turns in answering roll calls for him, and in turning in his work and taking his examinations.

"It was only at commencement when his name was called to receive the diploma that no one could be found who would go up and get the sheepskin."

"So," says Mr. Ladd, "Kilroy is not the only UK identification which is not complete."

J. W. Bratcher, '29, a graduate of the University's College of Commerce and World War II veteran, was promoted from the position of auditor, to cashier and director of the Citizens Bank and Trust Company of Lexington, last December.

Mr. Bratcher had been associated with banks in Lexington, Danville and Louisville, and joined the Citizens Bank staff in January 1946 after nearly four years in military service which he entered as a captain. When he was released to inactive duty in December 1945 he held the rank of colonel.

Just prior to his military service Mr. Bratcher was cashier for the Citizens Bank at Midway. Previously, he was associated with the Guaranty Bank and Trust Co. of Lexington and the Louisville Trust Co.

The Veterans Club of the University of Kentucky, which for a time prior to the present quarter issued a mimeographed news-letter for the information of its members, now is publishing a printed newspaper, the POSTwarrior, the first issue of which, of approximately tabloid size, has four pages of five-column width. It contains news primarily of interest to student-veterans, concerning various Veterans Administration rulings, interpretations of the G.I. Bill of Rights, National Service Life Insurance advice, and the like.

An editorial sets forth that the veterans' paper definitely is not to be considered "the campus

Ring In The True

Dr. H. L. Donovan, president of the University of Kentucky, has gone to the bat in such a practical and realistic manner for more funds for the University's educational program, for support in a most materialistic way of the football team that has just lived up to all expectations on the gridiron, for Quonset huts and any kind of a place for students to live that perhaps a contribution, like his convocation address, to the literature of this state may go without notice.

If he ever had time, along with breeding Hereford cattle and running the University of Kentucky, there'd be something whimsical about his thinking, we believe.

At any rate, on calling the University students together he quoted from Tennyson's "In Memoriam" these words:

"Ring out the old, ring in the new,

Ring out the false, ring in the true."

As a matter of fact we usually never think about these lines except on New Year's Day. They seem to belong to New Year's. But Dr. Donovan's emphasis is upon the latter line, not the first. His theme is that there is no jeep-ride to education. It is a long journey, a tough one, but one through which those who discipline their minds may acquire "strength of soul and delight of mind."

We really believe that the most heartening sight witnessed in the state of Kentucky in many long years is the crowded campus of the University. Of course the lack of facilities is deplorable. But the courage, the faith, the real interest in acquiring an education on the part of these boys and girls, mostly boys and mostly those who were

Paul Blazer Heads Constitution Group

To Campaign For Convention, Revision

Paul G. Blazer, Ashland Kentucky industrialist, has accepted the chairmanship of the campaign for a constitutional convention for Kentucky; it has been announced by Dr. T. D. Clark, head of the department of history at the University of Kentucky, and chairman of the original sponsoring committee since its organization last spring.

Purpose of the campaign is to convince the people it is to their in service during the war, is very gratifying.

A fellow who lives in barracks to obtain an education, not being drafted to do it, or who with a family makes a real home in Cooperstown, isn't going to have much respect for false doctrines, dogma and fallacies. best interest to vote "yes" on the question of calling a convention to bring up to date the 1892 Constitution. The question will be submitted to the November electorate in 1947.

Mr. Blazer, chairman of the board of the Ashland Oil and Refining Co., is a native of Illinois, but has been in Kentucky since he helped organize the Greath Southern Refining Co. in Lexington in 1919. He was educated at Bashti College, Aledo, Ill., and at the University of Chicago. His wife, the former Georgia Frances Monroe, is a member of the University of Kentucky Board of Trustees and one of his sons, Paul Blazer, Jr., is at present a student in the University.

The Kentucky Association of Student Veterans' Clubs has organized campus committees of veterans to promote this campaign. Howard C. Bowles, Hazard, president of the University of Kentucky Student Veterans' Club and president of the Kentucky Association, has named the president of each college campus Veterans' Club in Kentucky, as chairman of the constitutional revision committee.

Bob Babbage, Harlan, U. K. student, is the newly-appointed executive secretary of the state-wide committee, and Ned Breathitt of Hopkinsville, also a University student, is the assistant secretary for the state and secretary of the constitutional revision committee of veterans at the University of Kentucky.

gripe sheet" and that its policy will be not to publicize "the feelings of aversion or antipathy which they (student-veterans) hold toward other persons or groups on the campus."

University Looks Ahead

Changes at the University of Kentucky are in keeping with the growing opportunities of the state's highest institution of learning that is undertaking to give to the boys and girls of Kentucky every advantage that can be offered despite the obstacles that have been faced due to the housing and building shortages, teacher scarcities and other difficulties.

The advancement of Dr. Leo Chamberlain to become vice president of the University of Kentucky is in recognition of the outstanding work that he has done in his tireless effort to fulfill all the duties of both registrar and dean of the colleges. Dean Chamberlain also now becomes as vice president an officer who can share some of the responsibilities with the president which are growing due to the corporate status, the building program and the expanding side activities of the University.

Dr. Maurice Seay, who will become registrar and dean of the colleges, has gained wide recognition as the director of the Bureau of School Service in charge of the Sloan Experiment. He is highly qualified as a school administrator, a field in which he has had marked experience.

Prof. T. T. Jones has been Dean of Men and a valued teacher for many years. We think that he is typical of those outstanding educators who have remained in Kentucky, despite the rewards they might have found elsewhere, and whose contributions in teaching and in guidance and advice to the future citizens in Kentucky have been of unlimited benefit to the state. As Dean of Men, Professor

LARRY SHROPSHIRE

Wallace Jones made the first All-Southeastern Conference football team this fall. The author of this article, Larry Shropshire, '30, is sports editor of the Lexington Leader and has followed Kentucky teams and athletes for a good many years, except for a long hitch in Uncle Sam's Army. He saw Wallace Jones perform last year and this, and speaks with authority. Larry was kind enough to give the Alumnus permission to re-print his column of Dec. 1, 1946.

AND SO THE BIG FELLOW, who didn't particularly care about football and who entertained serious doubts as to his ability to win or hold down a berth on the team, went out and played anyway—and all he did was finish up with a place on the all-conference team.

In itself that was no small accomplishment, competing as he was against the other stellar athletes who have been tearing over Dixie gridirons this fall, but the latest honor accorded big Wah Jones, the hero of old Harlan, puts him distinctly in a class by himself.

As far as this department knows, our modest and hesitant hero is the only athlete in the history of the Southeastern who has gained all-conference first-team honors in both basketball and football—and certainly he is the first to have accomplished the feat in the same year.

Wah Jones

Now that the football season is over, and he has gained more recognition than any other member of Kentucky's spirited and successful grid squad, Wah confesses that he was anything but keen about trying out for the team the past season.

The Harlan youth started playing football in the first place just because he was big enough. He never had thought much of the game.

He never thought much of it, that is, until the past season. He had started playing basketball in grade school back in Harlan. That was the real game, he thought, and he would rather be playing it—or even just be dribbling around and taking practice shots at the basket—than about anything he knew.

Wah got along pretty well on the court, too. He was still in grade school when he made the Harlan High "big" team, and before he finished his scholastic career and was ready to move on to greater fields, he could count five varsity letters that he had earned at Harlan. On the way, also, he had three times been named an all-state cager, missing the chance for such an honor during his sophomore year when Harlan's team was upset in sectional play and failed to gain the state tournament.

When he was a sophomore in high school, Wah went out for football, chiefly because he had considerable size and the coach said he could

Jones continued throughout the war years, in a difficult capacity. As a teacher there are many who learned from him unforgettable lessons in Latin, in grammar and in the history and philosophy of a republic and civilization upon which our present one is partly based.

The University is fortunate in having available to succeed him Ab Kirwan whose success as a football coach in the lean, war years when it might not have been too great an honor to have had too great a football team, was not a measure of his ability as a leader, organizer and, indeed, a football mentor. Knowing the difficulties he accepted an impossible task to keep the game going and we believe his services helped to pave the way for Bear Bryant's winning Wildcats. Noteworthy was his ability to deal with men. As Dean of Men he will have further opportunity to provide good leadership, advice and counsel and the University's many men and boys will look up to him and respect him.

His position was formed at the Lyceum Building under the marshalship of Dr. Christopher Longest, head of the department of modern languages at the university, and marched to Fulton Chapel.

The invocation was said by the Reverend William Mercer Green, rector of St. Peter's Episcopal Church, Oxford, Mississippi.

The organist for the occasion was Miss Esther Oelrich, Oxford.

All university classes were dismissed for four hours in honor of the inaugural occasion.

A special luncheon was served in the banquet room of the university cafeteria for official guests of the university, and an afternoon reception honoring Chancellor Williams and Mrs. Williams, President Donovan and Mrs. Donovan, and members of the Board of Trustees was given at the Chancellor's House by the University Dames.

On the evening following the inauguration, a group of Kentuckian members of the university faculty gathered at the chancellor's home to express hearty good wishes to the Chancellor and Mrs. Williams and to pay friendly greetings to President Donovan and Mrs. Donovan.

On the night of October 24, Chancellor Williams and Mrs. Williams and President Donovan and Mrs. Donovan were guests of honor at a ball sponsored in the university gymnasium by the Associated Student Body Dance Committee.

Chancellor Williams is a Kentuckian by birth, a native of Campbell county. He resigned his position at the University of Kentucky in 1942 to accept the presidency of Marshall College, in which he served until he was called last summer to the chancellorship of the University of Mississippi.

He and Mrs. Williams have a daughter, Ruth Harter, 13.

use the youngster, but partly because it was something to do in the afternoons while he was waiting for the basketball season to start.

He played at end for three seasons for the Green Dragons, and in his third year was selected for the all-state football honor team.

Still he didn't care much for the game. He says now that possibly that was because he hadn't seen any college grid games, and actually didn't really know what the sport was all about.

Anyway, he entered UK in September, 1945, went out for the football team, earned a regular berth at end, and at the finish of the season was getting more notice than any other Wildcat gridder. Then he jumped immediately into basketball. Ah, that was the game!

Despite his late start and some sharp competition, Jones battled his way into the regular job at center, was a workhorse the rest of the season on a team that gained the highest honors ever taken by a Kentucky cage outfit, and on the way easily captured a place on the all-SEC honor five.

The Lexington alumnus-sports editor then reviewed Jones' 1946 football record, and concluded as follows:

"Wah is fully conscious, and justly proud, of the brilliant record he is putting together and of the many honors he has won. He has thus far managed, however, to remain extremely modest about it all. Apparently quiet and unassuming by nature, he seems to have been forced by persistent shows of hero-worship into even more reticence and shyness than he might ordinarily feel.

"It will really be something for the books if Wah can go the rest of the route with such sincere and becoming modesty, but he's probably just the guy who can put it there along with the many other records he is inscribing."

University Man Named By Society

Dr. David R. Lincicome, assistant professor of zoology at the University of Kentucky, has received notification of his election to a fellowship in the Royal Society of Tropical Medicine and Hygiene at London, it was announced in December.

Considered one of the world's foremost organizations for the development and study of tropical medicine and parasitology, the English Society has a membership of over 1,700 throughout the world. However, only about 100 United States citizens have been invited to membership.

The chief work for which Dr. Lincicome has been honored is his research and publication of findings on "Amebiasis," particularly in aspects of diagnosis of the disease. "Amebiasis" is a parasitic disease caused by a minute amoeba that invades the large bowel and sometimes other parts of the body.

Dr. Lincicome is a native of Champaign, Ill., and has been associated with the University of Kentucky Department of Zoology since Sept. 1941. He is a veteran of three years service in the army, the last year of which was overseas where he rose to the rank of major in the Sanitary Corps.

The Alumni Association of the University of Kentucky has done a worthy thing in commemorating the notable record of students of this university in wartime. It strikes deeply in showing how far-reaching were the sacrifices of war to know that 329 University of Kentucky students and alumni lost
