AN AMERICAN ATTITUDE

European college students are actively interested in the political happenings of their countries. They are not only interested but they take most in them. Recently several foreign countries have been the scenes of riots staged by the university students against unfair political measures and corrupt political parties.

In America the average college student does not follow the most prominent political activities of his nation, state, or city. He scarcely knows who is in office, what party is strongest, what the current issues are, or what are the fallacies in the present administration. The only way he forms even a hazy conception of the situation is that he is exposed to references in the ordinary conversation of older people and it stands to reason that many of these are unreliable, hazy, and biased.

This is one of the weaknesses of our college trained minds. Men and women of voting age are not encouraged to understand the workings of their nation. They are seldom fit citizens of the United States for they are not interested primarily in the welfare of their country. If they vote it is either because they are taking a class in political science or because they merely happen along at the right time and see some friend voting.

College trained men and women should be required to know the functions of good citizenship before they are allowed to graduate from any institution of higher learning. It is true that practically all universities have political science in one of the requirement groups, but what is needed is not political science but practical problems of citizenship. It must be remembered that we, the college men and women of today, are the rulers of the nation of tomorrow and that we should take pride in training ourselves to fill this place.

American history shows that in the development of the present system of government it was the young men who stimulated, formulated and pressed the issues upon which our governmental plan is built. Since then the younger men have been too busy doing other things to look out for the interests of the nation. It is the duty of the educated class to take up the banner of these first governmental pioneers and follow along. Even those uninitiated in the field of politics know that our present system is not ideal, that improvement is necessary.

American college students should take an interest in the political activities of their nation. They should take part in the voting. European students have been doing this for a long time, they expend the energy on national politics that the average college student wastes on college social and political situations would be greatly improved if such conditions existed in this country. The nation as a whole would benefit greatly and so would the colleges if the college students would quit being shirkers and assume their share of the governmental burden.

PERSONNEL BUREAU

One of the university's most recent departmental innovations is that of the personnel department. One of the outstanding services rendered to the student body has been accomplished by this department. It not only has offered advice and solution of personal problems, compiled statistics relevant to student conditions, but it has fostered the development of students during summer months and has found many positions for graduating students.

In the past each department has shouldered the responsibility of finding positions for its graduates who did not have any definite place in view. Now, although the various departments still have a certain amount of responsibility in placing graduates, much of their original burden has been shouldered by the personnel bureau.

The Kernel has published a notice in practically every issue since Christmas of prominent business men who would be here to interview prospective employees. Many fortunate students have profited by these notices and found positions. Furthermore, those desiring and interested in summer positions have been placed. There is an advantage in having such an efficient bureau on a campus even in prospective years, but in 1931 it should be a blessing.

Perhaps the most positive benefit to be received from such a bureau is that it offers student protection from concerns which are not reliable, which are using them. It allows them to have a thorough understanding of the job which they are to have and in this way it avoids time wasted and regrettable experiences incurred by employment in a position that is neither suitable nor reliable.

Ordinary Occurrences

It occurs to us that The Kernel office is the most utterly lifeless place in the world on Saturday afternoon... that if some of the Alphas would wipe a little paint from their ebullient lips they would be a great deal more attractive... that societies are glad to pay for publicity... that we pick our May Queen, Maids of Honor and Attendants like Dick Morris picks race horses—he had every winner Thursday... that we wonder if anyone ever reads our occurrences... that our last Rose Girl received two roses... that Rah Rah and we crashed an open house... that we were cordially received by the sisters, sneered at by the signmakers... that the K. ## A POETRY BOOK

During the past year student interest in writing poetry has definitely declined itself. Letters and The Kernel have both published many student poems. On most of the larger university campuses an annual poetry book is published, the contents of which are the best poetic efforts submitted. Every one of these books is a mark of definite ability is shown in poetry which The Kernel publishes. The fact that we publish the best of the work which is submitted to us is the first step toward recognition of student ability. However, if the best pieces of work were to be chosen at the end of each year and compiled into a student poetry book that would be a lasting and enjoyable record of Kentucky student thought and capability.

Classes are apposedly on the decline in America. With them the decline of a civilization is intimated. The cause is given as the present day lack of appreciation for anything but commercial projects. The intelligentsia are supposedly becoming too greatly outnumbered by the masses of common people to "stand to their guns" on matters other than science and the practical arts. Classical appreciation is dying out. The curriculum of the average school shows a positive tendency to recognize this fact.

Colleges and universities are responsible for the development and encouragement of the classical arts. The average collegian has been trained to see the value of them. Kentucky would be promoting this cause if it should have its own student poetry book for it should encourage young talent. A poem printed in The Kernel is like a news story printed in a daily paper, gone and forgotten the next day. This certainly is not conducive to the finest poetical efforts, but if further recognition were to be the beginning of more ambitious effort. In establishing a poetry book it would be fostering not only our own cause, but that of the classics, and in that way is rendering a service to ourselves and to all others.

A NEW CURRICULUM?

The largest of the colleges of the University, the College of Arts and Sciences, which is under the direction of Dean Paul Prentice Boyd, is planning and considering some proposed changes in the curriculum which it offers. Dean Boyd has served the university for many years, having at one time been acting president of the institution, and as in this case now under careful deliberation, has always shown a particular earnestness in his ambition for his college, his faculty and his students.

Rather than be limited by minors to narrow confinement in one department of the Arts and Sciences College, the new plan will widen the field of subjects chosen by the student, and at the same time give him an opportunity to specialize in a branch of study for which he feels the most need. Such well advised specialization would tend to place the graduate in a remunerative position much more readily than would the scramble for "lock and trade."

Curriculum making is now recognized by educators to be highly important to the student's welfare, and is in many instances the controlling factor of the finished product of a university, the graduate. The Kernel hopes that it will be seen fit to undertake the changes which have been suggested, for they indeed would be a mark of progress appreciated by the students.

COLLEGE VIEWPOINTS

EXEMPT 'A' STUDENTS FROM EXAMINATIONS

The Arts College Council has recommended to the faculty of that college that A students be exempted from finals.

"Individual members of the faculty shall be given the optional privilege of exempting from final examinations those upperclassmen (juniors and seniors) who have maintained consistently and faithfully during the quarter an A average," the recommendation reads.

The council contends, that such action would relieve the student from the "already overcrowded schedule." It would also lead to the raising of the scholastic average of both the individual and the college, the recommendation says, because it will act as an incentive to the individual to work harder to maintain an A average for ultimate exemption. In addition, the student would be able to concentrate further on his other studies.

Similar suggestions have been made in various colleges of the university in previous years but no official action has yet been taken.

It has always seemed foolish to us that a student who is sure of an A has to sit through an exam. The professor in most of these cases probably has marked the grade for the quarter before he gives the final and the student simply wastes his time.

The exam is given simply because the university rules require it and not because the professor thinks it is necessary for an A student. A change should be made, not only in the Arts College, but in all colleges, whereby deserving A students may be exempted from final exams.—Ohio State Lantern.

POLITICAL SCIENCE GROWTH

Established five years ago as a separate department with two full-time teachers, the Political Science department of the University of Kentucky has grown until now six full-time teachers, eight part-time teachers, fifty majors, and 900 students are numbered among its personnel. This remarkable growth makes one wonder about the value of the department with reference to its relation to its students and to the research work it does. Much of the reason for the growth of the department lies in the careful selection of its instructors and in its painstaking and accurate study of municipal problems.

Of the six full time political science professors, five have their doctor's degree. Most of the others have their master's degree. Magazine articles by members of the department faculty are frequently published. Dr. Vandenberg has already published several articles about his studies of colonial administration in the far East. Dr. Jones recently published an article on the Kentucky legislature in the American Political Science Review. Mr. Owsley has had three articles in the National Municipal Review. Dr. Manning has published two recent articles in the National Municipal Review and one in the Southeastern Political Science Review.

In addition to the work being done by its individual members, the department, as a whole is sponsoring the Bureau of Municipal Government Research. The purpose of this bureau is to gather and publish information regarding city problems. Studies of gasoline taxes by Owsley and public utility rates by Manning have already been made and published. Studies of water supplies in Kentucky cities and of municipally owned plants are now under way.

That the Political Science department succeeds both in its attempts to instruct students efficiently, and to study and gather material on all kinds of city problems, there is no doubt. Although its activities are perhaps not advertised or encouraged so readily as those of larger or longer established organizations on the campus, the Political Science department earns quite as much commendation for its steady efforts as any other department we have.

THE TRACK TEAM

Saturday afternoon the University of Kentucky track team decisively defeated one of the oldest rivals of the institution in a meet on Stoll field. Track has never had the student recognition and support on the campus that it receives at other schools throughout the country. A great many students at the University of Kentucky are almost unaware that a track team exists and almost every one of these would have enjoyed the meet Saturday afternoon.

The training and practice which is required to run the mile, participate in the broad jump or perform any other of the various feats of the trackmen is just as strenuous and as hard as that which is necessary for football, basketball and the other more popular sports. That the members of the team have worked steadily and diligently since the beginning of the season was demonstrated Saturday.

Three Stoll field records were broken in the meet, two of them—the shot put and the broad jump—by Kentucky athletes, the other—the mile event—by a University of Tennessee runner. Only one more home meet will be held by the university team when the trackmen meet the University of Cincinnati athletes May 9. It can only be hoped that student support at that contest is better than it ever has been in the past.

Brief Biographies

The Kentucky Wildcats tangled with the Tennessee Volunteers in a dual meet at the McLean stadium, last Saturday.
H. W. Baker, 19, is a sophomore. He has been throwing cinders in others' faces pretty regularly on his one and two mile jaunts and turning in good time. Baker comes from Versailles.
Ed Milliken, 21, is a member of the sophomore class. "Ed" is a small man and gets around on the track in double time on his quarter-mile and relay runs. He injured an ankle a week or so ago and has been hampered, but he is expected to keep Kentucky in front in his event Saturday. "Ed" comes from Louisville.
S. Shipley, 24, is a senior. He has two "Ks" for his work on the track for the past two seasons. Shipley does the 120-yard hurdles in :16 3-10 which is traveling. He lives in a sturich near Lexington.
Don Williams, 23, is a senior. Don has two "Ks" to show for his work in California that he has done something rare in low hurdles. Don comes from Oakland, Calif.
Billy Hubbell, 21, is a junior. Last season he received his numerals for his work up in the air and this year he is still striving to get Peter in his pole vaulting. Billy lives in Carmi, Ill.
G. V. Wiemann, 21, is a senior who still runs around in short pants skimming over the low hurdles. He has a "K" to his credit in the season's work. Wiemann lives in Dayton, Ohio.
Webber Hicks, 20, is a junior. He is making valiant efforts to keep up with "Horse" Seale in throwing the discus and putting the shot.
Sam Tuttle, 27, sophomore provides material for the throwing cups and medals in the senior's work. Sam is from Irvine.
Henry Baker, 18, is a sophomore. He is working on the low hurdles at present. He comes from Providence.
Johnny Epps, 21, is a junior. He has been on the sidelines with a broken hand for several weeks but will show up well in putting the shot, where he works out each Johnny lives in Dayton, Ohio.
George "Husky" Skinner, 19, is a sophomore. He received numerals for work on the frosh squad last year and is planning to repeat with a letter this year for his efforts in the quarter-mile event. Husky lives in the community.
"Bud" Savana, 21, is a junior who is throwing the javelin with considerable art. He will knock Kentucky's score Saturday. Bud lives in Iowa Falls, Iowa.
Kenneth "Philbert" Andrews, 21, is a junior. He has been tossing the discus to varied parts of the practice field for the past few days but he will surely throw it away tomorrow. Philbert is a Lexington product.
F. E. "Horse" Seale, 20, is a sophomore. He receives numerals and he feels that he is up and coming. We quite agree with him after the way he played with the pilet last Saturday. He plans to eat more breakfast this time and perhaps throw the shot a hundred yards. Anyhow he lives in Big Stone, Gap, Va., where he throws boulders as a child.
John Sims "Shipwreck" Kelly, 21, is a junior and is co-captain of the thinnles. Kelly still stands in the lime-light as he did last fall. He has not lost a race to anybody and will probably keep his record in his 100 and 220 yard dashes. He sends his laundry to Springfield.

Fencing Tourney Will Be Held, Tuesday, May 12

The second semi-annual fencing tournament will be held Tuesday evening, May 12, at eight o'clock instead of May 8 as was reported in the Tuesday edition of the Kernel. The tournament is being held under the direction of M. Applebaum, instructor in fencing, and C. W. Hackensmith, intramural director.
For the first time in the history of the university, the women will enter into the competition. During the past semester a class in fencing for girls has been working under the direction of Mr. Applebaum, and they are now quite capable of putting up an excellent exhibition. Fencing among women is by no means a novel stunt, for classes for girls are being given throughout the North.
Fifty students of fencing will participate in this event, which will be run on a straight elimination basis. The honor system will be employed in scoring and medals will be awarded. Using the last tournament as a basis for judging the tournament, the girls are expected to show a much larger turnout. Fencing is rapidly gaining popularity at the university, and those who are present for the exhibition may expect an excellent display of fencing.
Cups and medals will be awarded to the winners of the boys' and girls' groups. The intramural department will donate the trophies for the men, and the women's athletic department will present medals for the girls.

Prof. J. W. Martin Serves as Witness

Prof. James W. Martin, Director of the Bureau of Business Research of the university, served as an expert witness last week in the case involving the quest of condemnation of Great Onyx Cave as a national park. Mr. Martin was at the court sessions in Brownsville, Edmondson county, from Monday until Friday morning.
The case arose over the amount to be paid by the state to the owners of Great Onyx Cave. This is the second cave to be bought by the state in connection with its plan for a great national park in the Mammoth Cave region. Mammoth Cave itself having been the first. Of the owners of the cave is a student of the university, Harry Bush, sophomore in the College of Arts and Sciences. The special judge called in to try the case is also a Lexington man, Judge Bailey.
Professor Martin, although appearing for the state, served as a non-partisan witness in investigating the claims of both parties and suggesting a fair price to be paid for the purchase.

STUDENT POSITION SEEKERS SHOULD SEE H. BEAUMONT

Prof. Henry Beaumont, head of the Personnel bureau of the university, has recently received offers for employment for students desirous of work during the summer. One of the largest publishing houses has offered to take a high type man on their summer sales force who are interested in advertising of publishing as their life work. Professor Beaumont has been requested to recommend a student of sales ability to organize a crew of salesmen for an eastern manufacturer. Several other offers for summer work have come into his hands and students wishing aid for summer employment are requested to apply to him.

Freshman Baseball Nine Defeats M.M.I. In Slugfest, 10-2

The University of Kentucky freshman baseball team defeated the Millersburg Military ball tossers 10 to 2, on Stoll field yesterday afternoon. Eleven of the players of Coach Gills' frosh squad were found to be ineligible yesterday owing to their failure to make a standing and were barred from further participation in the diamond sport.
Several bulkwarks of the frosh team were among those that were ruled out. Core, Mattingly, catchers; Bach, an outfielder, and Gloyd at infield; McCormack, Pate, Shoopman, Blair and three others.
This is the second victory for the Green team, who defeated the Frosh of Eastern State Normal last Thursday, 4 to 1. Another good pitcher showed up in the yearling camp yesterday in DeMoisey, lanky center of the frosh basketball team. This afternoon at 1:30 o'clock the freshmen will meet the Athens high school team of Fayette county on Stoll field. Coach Gills announced that Broadbent will hurl, with Nelson behind the bat. The Athens battery will be Boots and Tuttle.

Austrian Professor Gives Lecture Here

Noted Physicist of University of Vienna, Speaks to Physics Students

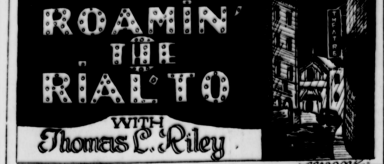

Dr. Arthur Haas, professor of Physics at the University of Vienna, Austria, spoke three times before the Physics students of the university last week. His appearance at the university is sponsored by the department of physics, and Sigma Pi Sigma, honorary physics fraternity.

Thursday, April 23 at 4 p. m., Dr. Haas lectured in the Physics lecture room before the advanced students on "The Relation Between Mechanics and the Theory of Relativity." At 7:30 p. m., he spoke before the public on "The Sun and the Universe." Friday, April 24, at 4 p. m., he again spoke before the public on the subject of "Light Corpuscles, Natural Waves, and the Law of Physics." Professor Haas has visited the United States before, having lectured in the chief educational centers of this country, in 1927. He is one of the outstanding, internationally known physicists dealing with the newer developments in the science of physics. In 1928, the Gibbs Committee of Yale University appointed Dr. Haas co-editor, with prominent American English and Dutch scientists, of the Commentary on the Works of the Great American Physicist, J. William Gibbs.

COOPER TO REPRESENT U. K.

Dean Thomas P. Cooper, of the Agriculture College, will represent the university at the inauguration of Dr. H. W. Chase as president of the University of Illinois. Dr. Chase will assume office May 1.

There is certainly an excellent battery of cinematic attractions on view this week. "Trader Horn" is the most sensational. "Front Page" is the best entertainment.

"Front Page" The best picture of the week. "Front Page," will close at the Kentucky tomorrow. Produced by Lewis Hughes and directed by Howard Mitchell, this is a faithful adaptation of the newspaper play by Ben Hecht and Charles MacArthur. A smashing stage success. A flawless cast, headed by Adolphe Menjou, admirably catches the spirit of the piece. Pat O'Brien is cast as "Hilly" Johnson, about whom the action revolves. Mary Brian, Max Clarke, George Stone, Walter Catlett, and Matt Moore are also in the cast of "Front Page." The adaptation of Bartlett Cormack is a miracle. The play teams with profanity. The screen yet the characters get the ideas through the loudspeakers will no apparent difficulty. See "Front Page."

"The Finger Points" Another newspaper film in on the radio. "The Finger Points," current picture, is a play by Richard Barthelmess in the leading role with Fay Wray, Regis Toomey, and Clark Gable in support. "The Finger Points" is an excellent explanation of the Jack Langie murder. Gangster melodrama seems predominant in the picture. Barthelmess is seen as a new reporter who, soon after joining the staff of a large city daily, is joined by a gang of racketeers by whom he is paid to keep news of their activities secret. The disguise is a red herring and the story is dreadfully slow but John Francis Dillon achieves some effective direction in spots. The last sequence in the picture is splendid satire. "The Finger Points" affords fair entertainment.

Funnyman Ardey Again We were, of course, amused at Co-columnist Ardey's boast of receiving two fan letters last week. He also sneered at our customary 200. We weren't going to spill it but we had Roamin' the Triangle send the pair to him. You see, Rena has about 12 styles of handwriting and it's all done with mirrors.

University Graduate Club Will Entertain

Dr. J. A. James, Northwestern Graduate School Dean, Will Speak

The Graduate club of the university will give a banquet at 6:30 p. m. Wednesday night, April 29, in the ballroom of the University Hotel. Dr. James A. James, dean of the graduate school of Northwestern University, and Dr. J. A. James, dean of the Northwestern Graduate School, will speak on "American Ideals."

The Graduate club is composed of the members of the graduate school, and any student working for a higher degree is eligible for membership. At present, the club has approximately 300 members, of whom 100 will receive the degree of master of arts, and three the doctor's degree in June. The purpose of the club is to promote a spirit of cooperation and friendship among the members of the graduate school.

Officers of the club are: president, O. P. Galloway; vice-president, Shepard Jones, and secretary, Fannie Sue Johnson. Tickets for the banquet are being sold by the graduate students, one representative managing the sale in each department.

Plans Are Made for Patterson Memorial

Former President of University Will Be Honored by Statue on Campus

Plans are being formulated for the erection of a monument to James K. Patterson, who for many years was president of the university, according to C. N. Manning, president of the Security Trust Company. The memorial will be placed upon the university campus, although the exact site has not been determined.

No plans have been made concerning the type of monument to be used or the sculptor to be employed. The personnel of the committee in charge of plans is as follows: Dr. Frank L. McHenry, chairman; H. Pollitt, instructor in Eastern State Teachers College; Walter K. Patterson, Rodman Wilcox Alexander Bonnyman of Knoxville, Tenn., an alumnus of this school; and C. N. Manning of Lexington.

Although no steps have been taken by the committee concerning the sculptor to be employed, Charles Henry Nishan has been suggested. His works are well known to Lexington people, since he is the sculptor of the Goethals monuments at Frankfort, as well as the statues of Henry Clay and Dr. Ephraim McCreary in Lexington.

Water Color Exhibit Will Close Saturday

The water color exhibit at the Art Center, brought by Mr. Rannels through the courtesy of the American Federation of Arts, continues through Saturday. The display is open to the public from 8 to 5 o'clock every day.

All of the works presented are all types of studies, including works of all the best water color artists in the continental group in America. Mr. Rannels believes that they will appeal to every type of student since they are so understandable and appreciate them.

All art lovers, especially those who are interested in acquiring themselves more fully with the work of contemporary American painters, are urged to take advantage of this opportunity to see one of the most representative exhibits which have come to Lexington in many years.

May Festivities Will Open at Convocation

Officers of Suky circle have announced that the names of organizations winning the prizes for the best floats will be revealed Friday night at the Gingham dance in the Men's gymnasium. Music for the dance will be furnished by the Blue and White orchestra. Admission will be announced later.

Three silver loving cups which will be awarded to the organizations are now on display at the Tavern. All contestants are urged to submit plans for their floats to the dean of men without delay. Failure to do so will result in disqualification.

Dr. Frank Randall is confined to his home in Cherokee Park because of partial paralysis of his face. He has been unable to meet his class in the Law College, where he teaches as the Procedure course. He has been ill since last Thursday.

INITIATION HELD BY SCIENCE GROUP

Sigma Gamma Epsilon, Geology, Metallurgy, Mining, Ceramics Fraternity, Holds Banquet Monday

Chi chapter of Sigma Gamma Epsilon, national honorary geology, metallurgy, mining, and ceramics fraternity, held its formal initiation at 8 o'clock Monday night in the chapter room in the Science building.

The members are selected on the basis of high scholastic standing, membership in some of the fraternities and recommendations from their professors. The new members are: Bernard J. Hastings, Joseph H. Mills, J. A. Purnell, Lexington; Hugh Tanner, Irvington, and William G. Haas, Henderson.

Following the initiation, a banquet was held in honor of the initiates. Cyril Averitt, president, presided as toastmaster. Each of the initiates was called on for a humorous speech. The active chapter includes Dr. A. C. McFarlan, Prof. L. Robinson, George Monday, Paul Smith, William P. Haller, D. H. Young, Morris Barber, Treasurer, Doctor Covington, Richard Thorneberry, Ray L. Trautman.

Officers of the fraternity are: president, Paul Averitt; secretary, William P. Haller; editor, D. H. Young. The faculty advisor is Dr. C. Alpha Delta Sigma, professional advertising fraternity, held pledging exercises Monday afternoon in Memorial hall. The following students were pledged: Gilbert Kingsbury, Covington, Frank Worthington, Lexington, and James Morgan, Paducah.

At the meeting Monday, plans were formulated for the initiation banquet, which will be held May 4. Dr. C. McFarlan, who is awarded annually to the senior who has exhibited most to advertising, will be presented at the banquet.

Membership in the fraternity is based on proven ability and interest in the field of advertising. Officers of the fraternity are: president, Thomas Smith; vice-president, Ben Stapleton; secretary, Chester Jolly, and treasurer, Allie Mason. Faculty members in charge of the organization are Dr. J. B. Miner, Prof. E. D. McHenry, and Prof. A. E. Asher.

Greekettes to Hold Tennis Tournament

An intra-sports tennis doubles tournament is being sponsored by the women's physical education department. In case of two teams entering from one sorority, a preliminary tournament will be held to decide which team will play in the tournament matches. The first round must be played off by Wednesday, weather permitting, and the teams must arrange their own matches.

Each team will have their places drawn by a committee, and drawings will be posted Friday noon at the women's gymnasium. The Boyd hall courts will be available at any time for tournament play. The following sororities have entered teams in the tournament: Alpha Zeta, Chi Omega, Alpha Delta Theta, Kappa Kappa Gamma, Delta Delta Delta, Alpha Xi, and Zeta Tau Alpha.

A single tournament which will be co-ed on the campus will start May 4.

Guignol Players Labor for Entertainment of Audience

By G. L. CRUTCHER

There are many activities on our huge campus, in fact so many that the members of some of them are seldom heard of, no matter how much credit they have brought to their various organizations.

The bodies which I refer to are the dramatic organizations, principally the Guignol at the Art Center, which I believe is the most prominent. Does the average student ever stop to consider the time and energy which is spent in the production of a play? There are few if any. It is a tremendous responsibility to produce something which will please the various patrons of amateur theatre. The largest part of this responsibility falls on the director, of course, but to his cast and production staff we also should grant a certain share of the burden.

Relatively few, are the inhabitants of our community who can appreciate the work which is concentrated in a play. In order to acquaint students and patrons with the work, which for the most part goes unheralded, we will endeavor to explain something about this activity.

The Guignol Theatre produces five regular plays, besides others for the entertainment of the community during the season. Immediately after the close of one play rehearsal are begun on the next, the work which for the most part goes unheralded, will endeavor to explain something about this activity. In acclimating the school and sometimes when they should be, laying aside their opportunity whenever they are not in the "set" ready so that the "show may go on." Many fruitful hours are spent in planning scenery, getting proper color, preparing paintings sets and arranging lights so that they will bring out the richness of the varied colors. These men, for they are generally men, are not missed at sorority houses for young folk, which they never have time to attend. They are also the men who, by their production for the entertainment of others. They receive very little credit; this really does not matter for they are not looking for credit; they are interested in the work and grow to love it the longer they do it. The work is hard and tedious, but they enjoy it, it is their life on the campus and perhaps may become more so, later.

The cast also has a long hard struggle to attain perfection. They begin rehearsals usually the week following the close of a play and these continue until the opening night. First they must try out in the ones most suited for parts. After the cast has been selected it becomes necessary for them to appear on the stage at least six nights a week and sometimes the entire seven. They must give up practically all evening activities in order to devote their time to the play. Besides their own earnings they have many lines to be memorized which also take much time.

Last but not least, by all means shall we praise the director, who has willingly devoted his entire time to the direction of the play. He has had numerous corrections to make, many defects of speech to smooth out and constant worry as to the results of his work.
