Senate boosts trustee reform bill over to final obstacle

By GREGORY A. HALL
Associate Editor

FRANKFORT, Ky. — Reforming the trustee selection process and revamping the current university boards cleared what likely will be its final hurdle yesterday when the Senate passed the bill 31-7.

The bill survived repeated attempts by Republican senators to amend it and one attempt to table it.

Many Republicans said the reforms would only politicize the boards further.

Sen. David Williams (R-Burkesville), who motioned to table the bill, said its genesis was good government but had been transformed into a "vehicle of vengeance."

But that wasn't the opinion of the majority.

"Rather than an act of vengeance, I believe that this bill is an act of mercy," said Sen. Nick Kafoglis (D-Bowling Green).

Rep. Ernesto Scorsone's (D-Lexington) bill now heads back to the House, where an earlier version of the bill passed in January.

Scorsone said the result of that vote, which could come Friday, should not be any different from the first.

"I don't anticipate any problem with any of the changes that we've seen in the Senate," he said.

The bill was revised by Scorsone, legislative leaders and representatives of the Governor's Office.

Gov. Breckton Jones, who has endorsed the bill, said he has no reservations about the revisions and will sign the bill, if the House passes it again.

"I'm very pleased" with the Senate's vote, Jones said. "I think it's a very good piece of legislation. It gives us an opportunity to give each of the universities the opportunity that I think they deserve for the kind of trustees that will allow them to deal with many problems."

The bill will abolish the current boards on June 30, and reconstitute them under the new process.

Currently, trustees and regents are appointed directly by the governor. Under the new system, the governor would choose board members from a list of three nominees for every seat submitted to him by a seven-member panel.

That seven-member panel must be confirmed by the House and Senate, Jones said.

After Jones signs the bill, he said he will nominate people for the selection committee "within the next two or three weeks."

Jones said he hasn't been able to begin compiling a list of people to nominate because of preparing the state budget that he released last week.

"We've had internal discussions about people who might be good choices," said Jones' Cabinet Secretary Kevin Hable.

"This is to ensure continuity," said Sen. Ed Ford (D-Cynthiana), chairman of the Senate Education Committee.

The bill also prevents governors from appointing themselves or their relatives to university boards. Former Gov. Wallace Wilkinson appointed himself to the UK board before he left office in December.

Through the passage of an amendment by Sen. Benny Ray Bailey (D-Hindman), a requirement that members of the nominating

Tyson conviction shocks, surprises UK community

The third-most publicized sexual misconduct trial was not a charm for ex-heavyweight boxing champion Mike Tyson.

Tyson was found guilty Monday night of raping a Black Miss America contestant. He now faces a sentence that could land him in prison for up to 90 years — not to mention take away his boxing prime, as well as millions of dollars.

Most UK students said at first they either were "surprised" or "shocked" by the verdict.

Many were quick to bring up the hearings of Clarence Thomas, who was accused of sexual harassment, and the William Kennedy Smith trial, in which Kennedy was found innocent of rape charges.

"I was surprised that he was found guilty," finance grad student Tim Twardock said. "After the Kennedy Smith and the Clarence Thomas trials, I thought the Tyson trial would go the same way."

One student in particular felt as if those two situations had a big influence on the decision.

"I think he's being made an example of because of the Smith and Clarence Thomas hearings," Greg Kujawski said.

Architecture freshman Marty Summers also was surprised with the verdict and said he thought Tyson was framed.

"From the comments she (the defendant) made, I felt like he was set up."

Some students said the defendant may have contributed to the event in question. They referred to evidence presented that she agreed to see Tyson late at night and that she was aware of his sexual habits.

Lawyers: 'Creep defense' backfired

Associated Press

INDIANAPOLIS — In the end, the Mike Tyson jurors believed the victim's story that she was raped and the boxer was a foul-mouthed womanizer who couldn't keep his hands to himself.

Perhaps the defense strategy backfired, or perhaps his attorneys simply made too convincing a case, lawyers who followed the trial said yesterday.

Or perhaps, as the jury said after the verdict, the state just had a better case.

"The 'creep defense' usually only makes sense if you're pleading insanity," said Dan Caplis, a trial attorney and legal analyst for KCNC and KOA radio in Denver.

The portrait of the former heavyweight boxing champion — as so consistently crude that his victim must have known he wanted sex — made it that much easier for the jury to convict him, Caplis said.

"The jury heard over and over through the defense that he was such a vulgar, obscene individual that any woman with him should have been placed on notice to what he wanted and who he was," said Linda Pence, a local defense attorney who attended the two-week trial.

Speaker suggests changes in academics

By DAVE LAVENDER
Staff Writer

An Atlanta professor brought a message of concrete ideas — transforming the current academic system into a real-life setting for multicultural learning in the Old Student Center yesterday.

Spelman College professor Beverly Guy-Sheftall brought her ideas in the wake of author Alex Haley's death and in dedication to a teacher — Anna Mae Moore.

Drawing from her 22 years at the blackboard at the traditionally black school and her own "mis-education" in the pre-integrated schools of Memphis, Tenn., Guy-Sheftall identified what she believed were the two major problems she has struggled with in American academics.

"The first is that much of what goes on reinforces the problematic and erroneous notion that the norm of this human experience is the three 'W's: Western, white and womanless," Guy-Sheftall said. "I can also add to that: Christian, middle-class and heterosexual."

Guy-Sheftall said through teaching texts that relate these Eurocentric ideals as the norm is alienating students and causing them to lose their identities.

"Secondly, because students have not been encouraged to feel connected to what it is they are required to learn, they are led to believe that education is a truly objective, purely rational endeavor. It is no surprise that students feel unattached in the world of real human beings and, therefore, disinclined to want to change it."

Guy-Sheftall, who went to Spelman when she was only 15, said she was somewhat ignorant of the problems facing women and people of color when she first graduated. However, during a career as an educator, author, lecturer and founding director of the Women's Research and Resource Center in Atlanta, Guy-Sheftall has embraced the plights of many minorities, including the American Indian.

During the speech, sponsored by the Women's Institute of the Southeast, Guy-Sheftall asked herself, as a progressive educator, several

Haynes, Beauman fourth ticket to seek SGA executive spots

By JOE BRAUN
Assistant Editorial Editor

With plans to accentuate the positive aspects of the campus in his campaign, Kirk Haynes announced yesterday that he will run for Student Government Association President in the April elections.

Haynes, a health and safety sophomore from Henderson, Ky., said the theme of his election campaign will be "B.I.O.N.I.C. leadership," standing for "believe it or not, I care."

"I would like to play up on the thing we're doing right — I'm tired of people telling me we're doing things wrong. Let's hear and show people how to do things the right way."

Haynes said he wants to show students, faculty and the Lexington community that SGA is a good organization that exists to work for them.

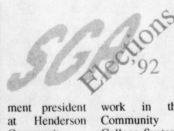

His major goals for the election are to fight campus apathy and increase voter turnout.

"I seek to bring all 24,000 people out to vote," he said.

Haynes, who was student government president at Henderson Community College last year, said his previous experience will give him an edge over other candidates.

"My main motivation is I see the potential the University has and my work in the Community College System, and my resourcefulness on campus last semester and my own educational endeavors would allow me to use my experience and promote University community."

Haynes is a member of American School Health Education Association, the National Education Association and the UK Baptist Student Union.

The recent 5 percent budget cut in the University's funding is a major concern of Haynes. He said students need to be interested in issues such as this because they directly affect them.

Bryan Beauman, a communications sophomore from Paris, Ky., will run for vice president on the same ticket as Haynes.

"In planning out the campaign, the major goal that Kirk and I set out to do was to reach 24,000 people," he said. "You don't target one group (in order to do that)."

Beauman is a member of the Student Endowment Fund Committee, UK's communications honor society and a member of the Baptist Student Union.

Both Haynes and Beauman have begun to speak with members of various organizations to receive feedback about campus issues.

'Shook up' Wildcats to face Alabama

By JOHN KELLY
Assistant Sports Editor

UK senior Deron Feldhaus rated Saturday's 85-68 victory at Auburn in best-ever terms yesterday at an open practice in Memorial Coliseum.

"I think it was probably our best game, not only physically, but mentally too," Feldhaus said. "Defensively, it was the best effort we put together this year or the three years that I've been here."

Feldhaus' teammate John Pelphrey echoed that satisfaction.

"That's the way we felt all of last year and right in the middle of our eight-game winning streak (this year)," he said.

The much-needed road win pulled UK out of a two-week slump in which the Wildcats lost three of four games. In that stretch, the Cats' ranking dropped from eighth to 19th in The Associated Press Top 20 Poll, and the Wildcats almost slipped out of first place in the Southeastern Conference Eastern Division.

"I think that when you lose a couple in a row, you stop and you ask yourself, 'what the heck is going on?'" Pelphrey said. "Maybe it shook us up a little bit. It also got us to work a little bit harder because it was kind of a reality check when you lose three or four in a row."

More than the win, the effort was what impressed UK coach Rick Pitino.

"I've noticed a big change in this team. I've been pleased with the way that they've been practicing and with the way they've been playing," he said.

"They have picked up their focus and picked up their alertness on defense and I think, right now, that (the Auburn win) was the culmination of a lot of great things that happened in practice that week. We were very, very attentive to the game plan."

But with Alabama (19-4 overall, 6-3 SEC) visiting Rupp Arena tonight to face UK (16-5, 6-3), Pitino has more to be concerned with. The Crimson Tide is on a roll, winning five in a row, including an 85-68 home-court victory over Tennessee. Bama also beat 11th-ranked Arkansas.

Pitino attributes Alabama's strength to fundamental man-to-man defense and team balance.

"One of the things that sticks out most about Alabama is their defense and they create so much offense with their defense," Pitino said. "They finish the play in the open court as well as any team in our league."

Pitino said Alabama is a better rebounding team than Arkansas and equally dangerous.

Alabama sports a talented guard who Pitino rated only second in the league to the Arkansas tandem of Todd Day and Lee Mayberry.

James Robinson, a 6-foot-1 guard, is averaging 16.9 points per game and grabbing 4.6 rebounds.

"He's just a total package," Pelphrey said. "There's just not much more you could want out of a guard."

Another one of Alabama's personnel who should concern the Cats is 6-foot-9 forward Latrell Sprewell. He has posted back-to-back 24-point performances against Texas A & M and the University of Tennessee and is the team's leading scorer at 18.8 points per game.

Pitino and Pelphrey balked at the idea that Alabama would be a tougher brand of SEC conference competition than were the Auburn Tigers. Pelphrey said UK needed the win at Auburn and needs a home victory against the Tide tonight and that neither would be more significant than the other.

"A victory's a victory," Pelphrey said. "There's not a little mark beside them. It's just your final record that counts."

Pitino labeled the games as equal because they both fall at crucial times in the collegiate basketball season.

"It's the time of year right now where if you don't make your run and improve, you may go into the tournament not at your highest point. That's what you want to accomplish. They have noticed that the coaches have picked up their intensity. Everybody's picked it up. They have played hard all the way through, but now this is February. This is now where you want to make your run."

Notes:

Paintsville High School honored one of its most distinguished graduates last night. UK senior John Pelphrey's No. 33 will be retired during a halftime ceremony at a basketball game. Pelphrey, the school's all-time leading scorer who won Mr. Basketball honors in his senior season of 1986-87, was in attendance.

Pitino opened practice to UK students yesterday in an effort to get them more involved in the team's games.

Pitino said this will become a regular event, during which time he and the UK coaching staff will explain the Cats' game plan, the opponents' strengths and weaknesses and any new or interesting cheers that students might find interesting.

"They both were at fault," said Joyce Smith, a University Book-store employee. "I can see where he was forceful, but I don't think she should have been up in his room till one, two, three in the morning."

"Both were at fault," said UK English professor John Shawcross. "But the decision suggests her testimony was truthful — his was not."

Some felt Tyson's well-documented image may have had something to do with the trial's outcome.

"It was totally impossible for them (jurors) to be impartial to the fact of who he is in society," said UK student Jeanne Termont.

"He's had a lot of publicity," said education sophomore Lisa Pollard. "What happened with his ex-wife probably made him mean."

Tyson

"You portray your client as a very unattractive individual, predatory in nature, disrespectful of women and thus prone to do an offense like this, and it makes it easier to return the verdict of guilty," she added. "If the defense counsel don't like him, why should the jury?"

Courtroom observers were struck by the fact that Tyson's attorneys appeared to distance themselves from him, rarely touching or talking to him. Immediately after the verdict late Monday, Tyson sat stock-still, emotionless. His attorneys, appearing utterly dejected, rested their elbows on the defense table. None of them looked at him, and he stared straight ahead.

Tyson could be sentenced to 60 years in prison. Sentencing is scheduled for March 6.

"This was a case about emotions and human relationships," said Sonja Steptoe, a lawyer and Sports Il- lustrated writer. "It would have been helpful if Tyson had looked like a nice guy, because she was so sweet. You hear one word and instantly you fall in love with her."

If Steptoe had been running Tyson's defense, she would have characterized him as a tough kid who grew up without love, without the skills for developing relationships that most people learn.

"He's a boxer. He's brutal. He's mean. He uses power and force. Then he become heavy-weight champ, the world is his oyster. And all these women are throwing themselves at him," she said. "So then it's really not his fault...."

"Put him on the stand, let him talk about his life, you soften his edges. And you have this much more believable human being."

"All their witnesses stretched the bounds of credibility," said Mike Androvett, a lawyer and WISH-TV reporter. "I think Tyson could have helped himself if he had somehow conveyed to the jury, 'I'm the one being wronged here. I'm wrongly accused.'" committee have a college degree removed.

"This amendment just makes sure that the members who are nominated for that commission would have the same qualifications as Kentucky state senators or representatives or even the president of the United States," he said.

Sen Walter Baker (R-Glasgow) proposed an amendment to keep the original wording of the university board statute as it pertained to makeup by party.

The current law calls for an "equal" number of members from the state's two leading parties to be appointed to the boards. Scorsone's original bill would not have changed that.

But the revised Senate version calls for "proportional" representation based on the number of people registered to vote from each party.

Ford said the revision corrected a "grave injustice" to the majority party.

The amendment failed 28-10-44. Scorsone said the current provision is widely ignored. There currently are about three Republicans on the UK board.

A motion by Sen. John Rogers (R-Somerset) to suspend the rules so he could introduce an amendment, requiring half the boards members to be women, failed.

The only woman senator, Susan Johns (D-Louisville), said the amendment was unnecessary. Because the statutes are strict, "I don't have any fear that women will (not) be on that board," she said.

Rogers also proposed three amendments to disqualify people who had given certain amounts to the governor in the last seven years from being considered for service on the boards.

Two of those were defeated, and another was withdrawn. Rogers argued that reconstituting the boards sets a dangerous precedent. Because that requires the governor's and the legislature's agreement, Jones said it would be difficult to do.

Rogers disagreed. "If he can do it, anybody can do it."

House bill may limit cigarette sales, ads

Associated Press

FRANKFORT, Ky. — Despite opposition from rural lawmakers, the Kentucky House passed a bill yesterday that would raise the legal age for buying cigarettes or other tobacco products to 18.

The measure also would bar free samples for minors and prohibit billboard advertising of tobacco within 500 feet of a school.

The bill was sent to the Senate after a vote of 63-27.

Rural lawmakers called the bill an attack on Kentucky's trademark crop by an implacable enemy of smoking — Rep. Anne Northup (R-Louisville).

Northup "doesn't have a stalk of tobacco in her district," complained Rep. Donnie Gedling (D-Hartsville). But "the last four years (Northup) has been here, she has constantly been on this issue."

Northup backed legislation that set the present minimum age for legal tobacco sales at 16. She drafted a bill in the current legislative session for a tobacco tax to pay for research into alternative crops, but conceded it has no chance of passage.

Northup said the bill passed yesterday would put into the state's lawbooks the policies already practiced by most cigarette manufacturers and the industry's lobbying organization — the Tobacco Institute.

But that didn't appease representatives from largely agricultural districts, including many of Northup's fellow Republicans.

"We continue to send signals ... that Kentuckians don't like the tobacco industry," thundered Rep. Richard Turner (R-Tompkinsville). "I am sick and tired of tobacco being treated like marijuana or a narcotic."

Turner said "a little corporal punishment here and there" would do more to deter underage smoking than Northup's bill.

House Bill 352 would set fines of $25 to $100 for each illegal tobacco sale and $100 for a violation of the billboard restriction.

questions:

"Can a university be a site of serious transformative work?"

"Can we teach in ways which don't reinforce structures of domination: racism, sexism or class exploitation?"

"Can we undo the mis-education that most students have been subjected to by the time we get them in our college classes? Can we undo our own mis-education, since most of us are also victims of patriarchal, racist, sexist ways of knowing and teaching?"

An example of this mis-education, she said Christopher Columbus did not discover America as most students believe. He, however, invaded a native people's land and "set in motion the process of decimation and even genocide from an American Indian's point of view. How radical it would be for us as university people to simply tell the truth."

Guy-Sheffall then explored the devices that she implements in her classroom to carry out her ideals.

"We learn not just by reading books, but by going outside the parameters of conventional classroom structure," she said.

Guy-Sheffall traced the tremendous response of this student community blending through several examples:

"I am convinced that what happens in this multicultural class, which we teach yearly, is suitable, even critical to students everywhere. Irrespective of their race, ethnicity or gender."

MERIBEL, France — Eric Lindros is no Wayne Gretzky. He's no Mario Lemieux. He's probably not even the next Gretzky or Lemieux.

He'll just have to accept being the first Eric Lindros. And that's not too bad.

The big question is: How do you stop a Gretzky, a Lemieux, a Lindros? It's very difficult," Canada assistant coach Wayne Fleming said after Lindros dominated a 6-1 Olympic victory over Switzerland. "And that's the big task they had. How do you stop Eric Lindros?"

The Swis didn't.

Lindros had two goals, one assist and several crunching hits, helping Canada (2-0) join the Unified Team and Czechoslovakia atop its group's standings. The other three teams — Switzerland, France and Norway — are 0-2.

The Unified Team scored its second successive 8-1 victory Monday — this time over Norway. And Czechoslovakia struggled, but beat fired-up France 6-4.

Yesterday's schedule included the United States vs. Germany, Finland vs. Poland and Sweden vs. Italy.

Monday was the Olympic closing-out party for 18-year-old Lindros. He scored and he passed. And when someone got in his way, he didn't stop.

"Either he goes around you or he goes through you," Fleming said. "I don't think he has a preference."

Moments before his second goal lead Canada a 3-0 second-period game, the 6-4, 225-pound Lindros crushed a Swiss player at mid-ice. His ability — and willingness — to dish out punishment is one of the big differences between him and NHL supercrucers Gretzky and Lemieux.

"It's just tremendous the way he can hit somebody," said Joe Juneau, who had two goals and two assists. "He doesn't even lose any speed. He just runs right through people."

He has an opportunity to do something neither Gretzky nor Lemieux ever has: win an Olympic medal. He's with the Canadian team only because he refused to sign with the NHL's Quebec Nordiques, who drafted him first overall last year.

His decision has made him the subject of national — and now, international — attention.

"Whether I'm under a microscope or not, it's all the same," Lindros said. "You can't change the world. You just go play."

The Unified Team is a product of a changing world.

Four years ago, when it won its seventh Olympic gold medal in nine tries, the Soviet Union was the undisputed king of international hockey. Then its most famous players began to leave for the NHL, the fall of communism opened the exit door for its top young players, and the breakup of the country reduced the pool of players available for the national program.

Now's not the time for Pitino bashing

"Pitino Bashing" has been running rampant among Kentucky Kernel and local sports journalists of late. Why?

What has Rick Pitino done wrong? So his team likes to shoot the three. So far this season, it's been good for a 16-5 overall record and a Top 20 ranking. Not to mention that the Cats are tied for first place with Tennessee in the Eastern Division of the Southeastern Conference. And with eight games left, UK is just a few wins shy of securing an automatic berth to the NCAA tournament.

Sounds pretty good to me. So why the criticism?

What really irks me is when someone uses legendary UK coach Adolph Rupp as a tool to criticize Pitino. What a cheap shot. Granted, some sports writers might not be happy with the way things are going at UK, but when a Kernel writer says that Rupp is "...scratching and clawing, doing everything he can to escape from his coffin," he is insulting Rupp. And what was the Kernel writer's claim that UK was not able to beat a Top 10 team? I believe the Indiana Hoosiers were ranked third in the country when the Cats went to Indianapolis and won.

As far as critics who claim that the Cats "live and die completely by the three" — that has become a cliché of late. Why not live and die by the three? What's the big deal? Every team has strengths and weaknesses. And with the kind of shooters the Cats have and their limited size and quickness, shooting the three appears to be a good strategy.

UK's record is still 38-11 over the past two years. Sounds pretty good to me. Then came last week's media altercation between Pitino and Lexington Herald-Leader sports writer Jerry Tipton. At a press conference Friday, Pitino lashed out at Tipton for his story questioning the playing time of Richie Farmer, or rather, his lack of playing time. The story only confirming Tipton's continued negative coverage of UK basketball.

For example, UK almost lost top recruit Roderick Rhodes. Pitino had to step forward and promise that he'd stay to see Rhodes graduate.

Don't get me wrong. Sports writers have to keep coaches on their toes, and Tipton does a great job of it. But why be so negative? A team just down the road that would love to be 16-5. If Pitino believes this is the lull before the storm, I believe him. There's no reason not to. Last season UK finished with best record in the SEC. Remember the parade we had with real red fire engines? I haven't forgotten. For future journalists who can't resist the temptation of "Pitino Bashing," here's some advice:

First, wait until the end of the season. You never know what might happen. Refrain from the same old jokes about Pitino's image. It's boring. And it makes you look jealous. If UK goes far in the NCCA tournament, I'll look forward to what Pitino's critics have to say. Sounds pretty good. Senior Staff Writer Al Hill is a fine arts junior and a Kernel sports columnist.

New format hampers Katfish at SEC meet

By DAVE LAVENDER
Staff Writer

The UK Katfish learned last week at the Southeastern Conference Swimming and Diving Championships in Tuscaloosa, Ala., that performing against their league — is a definite upstream battle.

Although collectively, the Katfish were netted quickly, individually they churned out plenty of praiseworthy performances.

Trying a new format, the SEC broke up swimming and diving, partly because the SEC uses a long course, rather than a short course for league meets. Consequently, the direction of UK coach Milton Braga, dove on Sunday, Monday and Tuesday, while the Katfish swimmers were Bama bound Wednesday, Thursday, Friday and Saturday.

In diving, the Katfish were led by junior Janie Smawley, who finished fifth in the 1-meter, 15th in the 10-meter and 18th in the 3-meter. Robert Taylor placed 12th in the 10-meter. Ted Waldeyer finished 17th in the 1-meter and 3-meter.

not swim quite as strong as they had earlier in the season, but they did break 12 UK swim records at the SEC Championships.

Maurice Stewart (10th in the 100-meter butterfly in 56.63) and Andrew Aiken (ninth in the 200 backstroke 2:07.61) broke their respective records and finishing in the top 10. Four UK men swimmers finished in 12th place: Peter Gerard swam the 100 freestyle in 52.30, and the 100 butterfly in 57.03. Steve Grimes turned in a 4:36.21 time in the 400 individual medley. Also turning in UK record times were Chad Cummins' 16:24.11 time in the 1500 freestyle (15th place); Mike Collins' 2:10.43 finish in the 200 I.M. (15th place); and Morten Anderson's 2:07.53 in the 200 butterfly (16th place).

Wendy Hipskind, a junior, who is world-ranked in the 100-meter butterfly, finished second in the 200 butterfly and fourth in the 100 butterfly, sixth in the 200 I.M.

Junior Margie Boliver finished 13th in the 400 I.M. Sophomore Stacy Fingalson, who missed two and a half months of the swim season because of mononucleosis, battled back to eighth place in the 200 butterfly and 13th place in the 100 butterfly.

In women's diving, Julie Robbins claimed ninth place in the 3-meter UK men's swimming team did
