XXVI. COUNTY LIVESTOCK INSPECTOR

The office of county livestock inspector in Carlisle County was established in 1918 when the fiscal court was authorized to appoint a livestock inspector. This appointment, however, must be approved by the state livestock sanitary board. The inspector must be a citizen of the county and a licensed, practicing veterinarian, if there is one in the county, or some reputable citizen of the county who is familiar with the care of livestock diseases. (Acts, 1918, ch. 69, sec. 18, p. 361; Carroll, sec. 63c-18.) No statutory provision is made for the term of office.

The county livestock inspector's duties are: to be the local agent and representative of the board, under the direction of the state veterinarian, in enforcing its laws, rules, and regulations; to report in writing to the state veterinarian all outbreaks of communicable diseases, giving the name and address of the owner, the number of animals that have died, the number sick, and the number of susceptible animals exposed to the disease. He is authorized by the state veterinarian to make necessary investigations, enter any premises, examine such livestock as may be deemed necessary, order quarantine of any animals or premises, and see that this quarantine is maintained until released by order of the board. He must cooperate at all times with the board in preventing, suppressing, controlling, and eradicating communicable diseases in livestock; and report his official action to the state veterinarian, who, upon such report, gives any assistance necessary. Failure on the part of the county livestock inspector to comply with the direc-
