

Satire Will Open July 15 At Guignol

'Lysistrata' Cast Will Present 3 Performances

'Lysistrata', a satire by Aristophanes, will open July 15 for a three-night run at the Guignol theater. The Greek classic is the first Guignol summer production since 1934, according to Clarence Geiger, director of the play.

PROF. EDWARD RANNELLS

ART TEA HOUR WILL BE HELD

Rannels To Speak On 'World of Art'

Prof. Edward Rannels will speak on "The World of Art," explaining contemporary art, at a tea hour to be held tomorrow in the art department library.

All summer school students have been invited to the program, during which Prof. Rannels will illustrate his talk with facsimile color reproductions of paintings from the art department's collection.

The tea hour will give students an opportunity to examine the department's studios, galleries and library. Prof. Rannels said, "The department is located on the second floor of the west wing of the new Biological Sciences building."

Following the talk an informal social hour will be held, with Miss Anne W. Callahan, art professor, and art department summer students assisting.

ALL-A STANDINGS MADE BY 17

SAE Leads Others In Group Grades

Perfect scholastic standings were made by 17 full-time students in the College of Arts and Sciences during the second term of the 1940-41 school year, it was announced last week from the office of Dean Paul P. Boyd.

Candidates Must Apply For Degrees

Seniors who expect to complete their work for graduation in August, and who have not made application for degrees, are requested to do so on Monday, June 30. This applies also to all graduate students completing their work for graduate degrees in August. All applications should be filed in Room 9, Administration building.

As the Commencement lists are made from these cards, it is very important that applications be filed in time for an application at this time.

TRANSLATION The Guignol version of Lysistrata is a combination of the translations of Oates and O'Neill, and George and Gilbert Sedes.

The plot of Lysistrata concerns a young Athenian woman who incited the women of Greece to take control of the government and force the men to stop war.

Used by the Moscow Art Theater, the Sedes translation comments, "Lysistrata as it is, is a comedy of its leading motives is still current after nearly two and a half millennium; war, peace, nature, men, women, and the gods, these are the forces it is just as far from solution."

Offragriffs, pacifists, and other groups with causes to champion have used the play many times, Geiger explained.

The plot of the production, designed by Clay Lancaster, are being built by the class in dramatic production, which is staging the play, William Clark, professor of education, at the end of the first act, Geiger said.

Use Of Resources To Be Stressed

Utilization of community resources in improvement of instruction is the keynote of the new course, Education C2906, taught by Dr. Harold Clark, professor of education at Teachers College, Columbia University, which began yesterday.

"Continuing through next Monday, the course has been planned to contribute to the efforts for the improvement of instruction in Kentucky, which are being sponsored by the State Department of Education and the K.E.A.

Doctor Clark is assisted in the course by Dean W. E. Taylor of the College of Education.

Doctor Clark, national authority in the field of education and economics, has studied the economic effects of education in almost every country of the world; he has been a leader in the field of consumer education and has written extensively on the relationships of education to community resources.

The new course, entitled "Educational Problems and Community Resources," will cover four major topics: the utilization of community resources in improvement of instruction; national regional and local agencies especially concerned with programs designed to improve instruction; experiments and demonstration dealing with new methods in content in education; and the place of education in the supervision in programs for the improvement of instruction.

Ham James Post James H. Ham Jr., a 1941 graduate of the College of Engineering, has accepted a position with Tennessee Valley Authority in Knoxville. He is the son of Mr. and Mrs. J. H. Ham of Lexington.

Smith Will Revue 'Flight To West'

Mrs. Cleo Dawson Smith

Mrs. Cleo Dawson Smith, University English instructor, will review Elmer Rice's "Flight to the West" in Memorial Hall Wednesday, June 25, at 8:15 p.m.

The play, one of the current assignments on the New York stage, has as its main character a group of people flying from Lisbon to New York City.

It opened at the National theater, New York City, December 20, and is produced by the Playwrights company.

Registrations for short courses will close tomorrow afternoon, 1971 students had enrolled, showing a decrease of 588 from last year's 2117.

Registrations for short courses this week and next are expected to swell the total somewhat.

Grand total last year, including all late short courses, was 2186, highest in the history of the summer session.

Registration Closes With 1571 Enrolled; More To Be Added

When official registration for the first term of the summer session closed yesterday afternoon, 1971 students had enrolled, showing a decrease of 588 from last year's 2117.

Registrations for short courses this week and next are expected to swell the total somewhat.

Grand total last year, including all late short courses, was 2186, highest in the history of the summer session.

CAA Flight Training Class Opens With 20 Enrolled

The University summer class in flight training under auspices of the Civil Aeronautics Administration, held its first meeting at Barker last night with 20 persons enrolled.

Leut. Col. Howard Donnelly, coordinator, announced that applications for the training will be accepted until Wednesday. Enrollment is limited to male students, Colonel Donnelly said.

Mrs. Greenwood Conaougher, director of the school's license and operates her own plane, will audit the course.

Colonel Donnelly outlined the course. The last night's organization meeting, J. Taylor Thomas, of the Lexington Flying Service, Inc. made the flight assignments, and Prof. R. D. McIntire, of the commerce college, started the class on the subject of Civil Air Regulations.

Instruction in meteorology and navigation will be given by Prof. D. M. Young in Room 203. Miller Hall on Monday, Tuesday, and Wednesday nights until August. Later in the course, C. H. Zimmerman will teach a course in aircraft inspection and servicing.

Education As Important To Defense As Guns And Ships, Declares Strayer

"Just as certainly as billions of dollars must be spent on guns and airplanes, so must money be spent on educating the people," declared Dr. George D. Strayer at the first convocation of the summer session last Thursday.

Speaking on "The Place of Education in a Program of National Defense," Dr. Strayer asserted that "The most combat strength which we can get is not longer that which we can get in the past, but that which we can get in the future."

"One of the greatest ways to build this greater strength is through education of the people," he said.

Dr. Strayer, visiting member of the faculty from Teachers College, Columbia University, pointed out in the early part of his speech the need for strong defense and in the second the way that education can help build up this defense.

"There are two conflicting ideologies in the world today," Dr. Strayer said, "and it is impossible for them both to remain side by side."

"The British are defending the ideas which we share with them, he said, "and it is impossible for them both to remain side by side."

"We are already at war," the speaker declared. "Our way of life," Dr. Strayer said, "places emphasis on the individual and denies the validity of any barrier of race, creed, or economic status."

BOTANY TRIP WILL BE OFFERED SECOND TERM

Five-Week Camp To Be Directed By McFarland

The first botany field trip in the history of the University summer session will be offered the second semester this year. Under the supervision of Dr. Frank T. McFarland, director of the herbarium, the course will be conducted at Cumberland head of the botany department and Park in Pennsylvania.

Those planning to attend the camp, which will continue five weeks from July 21 through Aug. 23 in the Cumberland Falls Area, should make application with the University summer school director not later than June 20.

Registration for the course will be held at the Cumberland Falls hotel during the course. Matriculation of those taking the course will be held at the University early the morning of Monday, July 21, the group departing shortly after luncheon that day for the falls.

SEVEN CREDITS All equipment necessary for carrying out the courses at the camp will be furnished by the botany department. This includes compound microscopes, binocular microscopes, plant presses, and other similar material. Students may earn seven credits if all courses are taken.

In selecting Cumberland Falls for the site of the field camp, Dr. McFarland said the area there offers the best of the finest places for study of all kinds of plant growth.

"An excellent opportunity is offered," he said, "in the study of aquatic plants, the flowering plants, and ferns. This area is also the southern limit of the northern flora and the southern flora of many of the most important plants of the region. For the ecologist, this region is a paradise."

EQUIPMENT Equipment to be furnished by the student includes a Gray's Field Manual of Botany, Seventh Edition, or Deam Deam's Flora of Indiana, and a good hand lens. A considerable portion of the material will consist of collecting specimens each morning.

Courses to be offered, each giving three credits, will be Botany 15, Local Flora; Botany 106-b, special problems; Botany 106-a, general botany and Botany 106-b, Advanced Systematic Botany.

Grads Will Open Summer Theater

Two University graduates, Ebb W. Schultze of New York City and Frank C. Davidson of Barbourville, will open a new summer theater, July 1 at Bolton Landing on Lake George, N. Y.

Davidson has studied at the Yale School of Drama and has engaged in theatrical work with various theaters. While a student at the University, he was president of the drama club and was in charge of organization, and author of a revue this society presented in 1930.

FACULTY, STAFF HONOR GOOD AT DINNER

Cooper Reviews Professor's Work In Agriculture

Prof. E. S. Good, retiring head of the animal husbandry department of the College of Agriculture and Home Economics, was honored at a dinner attended by approximately 150 members of the faculty and staff of the University last week.

The dinner was held at the Student Union building, with Dr. Thomas P. Cooper, acting president of the University, as toastmaster and principal speaker. Dr. Cooper recently received national honors when he was selected by the American Society of Animal Production to have his portrait hung in the gallery of famous men of the Saddle and Sirolo club in Chicago.

This signal honor recognized Professor Good's contributions through research and teaching, in influencing the efficient handling of stock. Dr. Cooper said.

He summarized the research done at the department head as "especially noteworthy, and worthwhile not only to Kentucky agriculture but to the whole country."

Students will leave the music center at 3 p.m. July 2 in cars to hear "Il Trovatore" starring Rose Bampton, Elsa Zebranska, Giovanni Martinelli, Robert Woods, and Virgil Lazzari. They will be asked to share expenses for the automobile in case of bad weather, the film will be shown in the Union ballroom.

Reservations should be made with Prof. Capurso before Friday, June 27. Several more trips will be conducted this summer, it was announced.

The twentieth anniversary of the Cincinnati Summer Opera association this summer will be celebrated by a series of sixteen of the world's most famous operas, featuring many well known stars of the operatic and concert stage, radio and screen.

Opening Sunday June 29, the season will continue through August 3. Among the personalities who will be seen and heard during the season are Grace Moore, Bida Sayon, Frank Chapman, and Wilfred Engelman. Basses are Nicola Moscona and Virgil Lazzari.

Sixteen of the world's more beloved operas will be presented during the six week season. Operas are presented nightly except Monday, June 30. There will be a performance date in place of July 4 which will be omitted. The season will open with Verdi's "Il Trovatore" followed by Carmen, Lucia di Lammermoor, Madame Butterfly, Otello, Rigoletto, Samson and Delilah, Barber of Seville, La Traviata, Aida, Mignon, Boheme, Cavalleria Rusticana and Pagliacci, Manon, Faust and Tosca.

The orchestra is made up of fifty members of the Cincinnati Symphony and will be under the direction of Fausto Cleva of the Metropolitan Opera. The ballet is headed by Lilian Moore. Anthony Silvanelli is stage director. The chorus consists entirely of members of the Metropolitan Opera chorus.

Further information about the presentations is available at Prof. Capurso's office.

McFarland Named Herbarium Curator

Dr. Frank T. McFarland, head of the department of botany has been named first curator of the University Herbarium on permanent appointment by the University Board of trustees. It was announced recently.

Dr. McFarland's duties will consist of passing judgment on the plants which will be included in the herbarium, and assuming responsibility for the preservation of the collection.

Black Is Again Style's 'Good News'-- In Formals, Suits, Slacks

By TONI

Once again black has turned out to be big fashion news—not so much because it has returned this summer to take its place among the whites and pastels as because it is being used in a variety of novel and interesting ways. Black is just as appropriate this summer in the most formal evening clothes as it is in bathing suits and play clothes.

Smart women everywhere are discovering the practical chic of black. It is perfect for afternoon, business, and travel wear since it retains its same appeal through the most trying warm-weather conditions, and makes it easier for the wearer to maintain that envied well-groomed appearance even on "dog" days.

With the majority of women, black is still most popular in cool afternoon sheers with touches of white or color in the dress itself or in accessories. Prominent in this class are the newer don't-dress-or-caff dresses being featured for dinner and theater wear.

STARCHED CHIFFON

One very ingenious model is of starched silk chiffon, black as a moonless night and relieved only by a jeweled pin thrust below a cascading collar. Another is an all-over tuck-pleated rayon tulle in the newest tapering silhouette. Silk and rayon chiffon is used in a truly different dress which features a low draped neckline and a detachable lace overskirt.

With these dresses are worn black lacy corsets or tiny pompadour pill boxes of black Malines, longish black gloves, and delicately tinted jewelry. If your legs are pretty enough to permit more than casual observation, you might try showing a gossamer sheer black stockings with fringe-looking sandals for informal dancing.

For more informal afternoon and casual wear, you might try an inkny rayon jersey, so striking with a tan softly tailored one black jersey boasts a sailor collar and U. S. N. buttons, while another buttons from neck to hem with dazzling white pearl buttons.

Ideal for travel, town, and classroom are impeccably tailored cotton suits such as the one illustrated. Others include a licorice black gingham with a white pencil check, and a hairline plaid seersucker in a black and red combination that has its own white pique blouse.

fully used in slacks and shorts. These are usually topped with brightly hued or tropically printed blouses. Play suits more often are of black and white hand-blocked prints, or white and pastels with sleeves and shoulder yokes of black.

Black bathing suits are also seen on the beaches this year. One very striking suit is strapless with a detachable white-handled skirt, while another is a scanty two-piece affair of gleaming slipper satin.

ACCESSORIES

Ward accessories are being worn with these play clothes. Bright red play shoes and knotted turbans, or splashes of color in a tropical printed blouse provided the proper accent.—Or if you prefer, you may achieve decorative touches with peppermint stripes, polka dots, and checks.

Practice a bit of black magic on your own outfits. You might be surprised at its powers of wardrobe rejuvenation.

EDUCATION

economically, the speaker pointed out the necessity, now more than ever before, of providing a significant opportunity for all of the population. "One of the most encouraging things of the present day is the quick change of certain schools from a five hour to a 24 hour schedule," he said.

In light of recent tests which showed that 30 per cent of the population was functionally illiterate (that is, not able to write a letter or read a newspaper), schools still face the need—even during the emergency—for more support, he continued.

In America today, Dr. Strayer asserted, we enjoy freedom a little beyond that ever known before. We have respect for talent, training, and excellence when used for social good, he said, and do not have to accept blindly the ideas of any leader.

"Although equality has not yet been achieved, where else is there such opportunity?" he asked. "To rather starve than live a life of slavery under the blind and ruthless domination of a dictator."

Dr. Strayer was introduced by Dean William S. Taylor of the College of Education, Dr. Jesse E. Adams, director of the summer session, presided at the meeting.

Ag Group Elects Turner

Dr. Job D. Turner, head of the department of feed control at the Kentucky Agricultural Experiment station, was elected president of the Association of Southern Feed, Fertilizer and Seed Control Officials at the closing business session of a three-day meeting at the Lafayette hotel.

SCRAMBLED WORDS, SCRAMBLED STAR

Those signs that Ray Shannon is wearing? They contain scrambled words which, if spelled out right, give you "Dulped Sirban." Shannon, master of ceremonies of "Scramby-Ambly," WLV performer, illustrates the idea of his program.

Millionaire's Daughter Brenda Looks Good In Red Pajamas

EDITOR'S NOTE—This spring, when Brenda Frazer was visiting friends in Fayette county, The Kernel news editor interviewed her. As a matter of interest in connection with her engagement, we reprint the story.

By JIM WOODBRIDGE

Brenda Diana Duff Frazer isn't just a glamorous socialite. She's really a swell girl. And lots better looking than her pictures.

At least, that's the impression we got when she gave The Kernel an interview Friday night at the home of E. W. Madden on the Winchester pike. She was Mr. Madden's guest for a few days.

We were a little nervous when she walked into the room. After all, this was the same young lady who had walked into the Main Ball Room suite of New York's Ritz-Carlton hotel a couple of years ago to greet 1,500 of the nation's most prominent social figures at her $50,000 debut.

But now she was just as natural as Jessica Jay. When she stopped and stood in front of us, we took the cue and went through introductions.

"Won't you sit down," she said calmly, moving over in front of the fireplace and taking a cigarette from the pocket of her Chinese red silk lounging pajamas.

After that, we were at ease. Even the thought that she knew everybody from Elsa Maxwell to Mrs. Cornelius Vanderbilt and had trust funds with assets of $4,000,000 didn't worry us. She was talking to us just like a college girl.

Trying my best professional tone, I asked her what she thought of college.

UK's No. 1 Gridder Crashes New York's 400, Gets Prize

Hard-hitting and career "Shipwreck" Kelly, almost legendary University gridiron flash and strong contender for UK's "campus character No. 1" of all time, has done it again.

This time it's on the field of matrimony.

The cocky, feet-footed halfback who for three years tore through the lines of southern football, this week took through the tried walls of New York City's 400 and came out with the prize—Brenda Diana Duff Frazer, society's "glamour girl No. 1."

It was expected to be small, limited to the families of the couple, in contrast to the dark-haired beauty's debut at the same hotel when 1,200 guests danced all night and consumed an estimated $1,500 worth of champagne and $1,000 in whiskies.

Although the heiress to a $3,500,000 fortune has been reported engaged in the past to many of society's "eligible" bachelors, her engagements to Kelly came as no surprise to members of cafe society. They had been constant companions for months.

And around the night club circuit they're saying that Shipwreck won the heart of Brenda when he refused to "treat" her as a young goddess because of her wealth and social position.

Shipwreck and Brenda argued and fought just as Mike and his Maize in Centerville, and as likely not during a spat one of them would walk off and leave the other in a night club contemplating in solitary the vagaries of romance.

But a day or two after their squabbles, they usually were "hatched" together again making the rounds of the night spots and shows, dancing and laughing as though nothing had happened.

FRIENDS NOT SURPRISED

Kentucky friends of Kelly were particularly surprised at the news of the wedding because the remembered a lanky, self-assured kid who always was mixing with the crowd where there was wealth and beauty. Kelly came to the University of Kentucky in the fall of 1928 fresh from athletic triumphs in his hometown high school at Springfield, Ky., and forthwith made it known he was going to revolutionize things in a football way. He did.

A good many upper classmen resented the cocky freshman with his wisecracks and air disregard of traditional respect for their wisdom and seniority, although they liked him.

PADDLED LIBERALLY

He was a trial to his fraternity brothers in Sigma Alpha Epsilon. They used the paddle liberally and in grave discussions sought to tame Kelly's exuberance and bring him into conformity, but it was useless.

The kid would brag about what he was going to do to the varsity in scrimmage and then go out and ring up two or three touchdowns, even though the entire team was ganging up to stop him.

His teammates dubbed him "Shipwreck" and the nickname stuck.

After playing stellar football in his freshman year at the University, he broke into national prominence in his sophomore year when he led the Kentucky Wildcats to a 44-0 victory over Clemson, at that stage of the season one of the leading teams of the nation. He ran the opening kickoff for a touchdown.

In the Kentucky-Washington and Lee game of 1931, Kelly galloped 96 yards for a touchdown to hang up a record for the longest run made by any major-college back during the season, and then came back later in the same game to dash 80 yards for another score.

TRACK CAREER

In track, his career was almost as brilliant as it was on the gridiron. A dash man, he ran the 100 yards in 9.9, and was never defeated at that distance nor in the 220 in a dual meet. He also threw the javelin for the Kentucky team and set a new record for the broad jump. In his senior year, he served as co-captain of the track team.

Aside from his athletic ability, Kelly was popular among the students on the University campus and was a member of several honorary organizations.

He was also a member of the Sigma Alpha Epsilon social fraternity and in his senior year was given the Besser-Lindsay award, made by the national fraternity to the outstanding active member in the nation.

During his school days, he was a close friend of "Duke" Johnston, son of Percy Johnston, chairman of the board of the Chemical Bank and Trust Company.

JOINT OWNER OF DODGERS

With the elder Johnston's financial aid, Kelly formed a partnership with Chris Cagle, the former army football ace, and purchased the franchise of the Brooklyn Dodgers professional football team in 1932.

For a time, Kelly played with the Dodgers, but gradually he confined his activities to the "front office" after Cagle sold his share of the club to Dan Topping, millionaire sportsman who is now the husband of Sonia Henie, the skating star.

Last spring Kelly sold the remainder of his Dodge stock to Miss Henie. It was reported, and began to devote his full time to a new job as an insurance broker. He met Brenda about the time of her debut and they frequently were seen together at night clubs, sports events and the theater.
