Mysterious Groaning Preludes Annual Spring Pigskin Practice

By BILL LUTHER
Down in a secluded corner of the men's gymnasium, a mysterious groaning, accompanied by slapping and clapping, has been heard between four and five o'clock. What strange, uncanny thing can be the cause of the noise? It is those strolling about the basement of the home of our famous wearers of the blue? Ah! the Bat Whippers. He tells us to take a peek into the lair of the Demon. What do we find?
Heavy mats cover the floor. Strong odors of perspiring bodies pervade the air. The whole atmosphere seems to be charged with dynamic action. Subdued sounds escaping strained muscular bodies reach the low ceiling and drift about the room only to lose themselves among the other sounds of nervous exertion.
In one corner a group of husky athletic forms are huddled in sitting or kneeling position around a large square mat. A gigantic figure stands in the inside of this roughly made circle watching the intense struggle of two gladiators writhing and twisting on the mat at his feet. What can this mean? Do men have to sweat themselves in this fashion to struggle for physical supremacy over their fellow creatures? Again we ask, Why? And again the Bat whippers.
It is Bernie Shively and his galaxy of aspiring linemen getting in readiness for the opening of the Spring football training period. Those husky men of the gridiron find much amusement in the wrestling workouts coached by the famous Big Ten wrestling champ. The sessions have been on for two weeks, but will be discontinued after today to let the boys rest up for the biggest game of the semester next week-final exams.
Among the prominent Wildcat athletes are Kipping and Aldridge who filled tackle positions for Gameweek last fall. John Drury, despite an operation in the fall is steady in his appearance. Soale, Hubmer, Dye and Engel are taking advantage of this opportunity to develop speed and shoulder muscles.
A great number of the freshmen reported for the first class and still continue to be on time. Davidson, Gardin, Pate, Wagner and Carothers are the most likely prospects. Spring football will begin on the first day of the second semester on which classes are held, and the boys who have been wrestling under Coach Shively will benefit their efforts prove a great find in the same of football.

Roger Connor, 73, former first baseman of the New York Giants and famous home-run hitter of two decades ago, died at his home January 4.

C. W. Hackensmith, intramural director, has enrolled about 175 men in the two sports and says that there is more interest shown this year in these sports than in previous years.
Mr. Hanson of the physical education department will referee the matches and the two well known sportsmen, Bruce Leach and Frank Hoover of the Herald, and "Peter" Potter, head of the physical education department, will be judges.

feated Tennessee, 22-19, and came back to crush the rambling wreck of Georgia Tech, 38-20.
Duke, one of the greatest teams in the country last season, conquerors of Loyola of Chicago, a team that won 35 consecutive victories, and runners-up to the Southern champs, Alabama, is a big disappointment this season. The latest upset was the 32-24 victory of Maryland's Old Liners over the Durham school.
Louisiana State won one game and lost the second to Mississippi, by scores of 28-24 and 20-29 respectively. Auburn defeated the North Carolina State team 30-28 in an overtime game.
Clemson, beaten earlier in the year by Kentucky, and losing two other contests came back to beat a good Tennessee five, 38-13. The standings of the teams are:

Dean Blanding Ends European Journey

(Continued from Page One) remains of the original building, but the scenery is the same—the Thames on one side, gardens on the other, and old Balessee bridge in the distance.

Of the 50 students housed there, ten were Americans, and the remainder were of almost every nationality in the world. At the tea, which was an institution in the day's business, there was developed a mutual understanding of races and an insight into world problems that no amount of study could give.

"And did you see any royalty?" we asked—the eternal American! "Oh yes," came the reply. "I attended the opening of Parliament, and the King and Queen appeared in full court dress, including the crown jewels, at that time. Their coaches are gorgeous affairs, and it is easy to see that the people, especially the cockneys, still love all this splendid show."

"I had the privilege of meeting a number of people of note, also, through Sir William Rothenstein."

(His son, John, and his wife, who was Miss Bee Smith, will be remembered by many friends to Lexington.) Max Beerborn, Gordon Smith, Miss Sidna, James Stevens, the Irish poet, and at one time a visitor to Kentucky, were all guests of Sir William.

"Theatres?" he prompted as she paused. "Oh, yes. The Shakespearean presentations at the Old Vic were especially interesting. John Guinness, a grand-nephew of Edith Terry, is their leading man. The attention to pronunciation and interpretation of lines are stressed, rather than the scenic effects, which are adequate but not overdone. It is the opinion of Gordon Craig that over-attention to scenery has been the undoing of modern productions, and that theatres in the future will adopt the simpler type of effect."

Miss Blanding had the privilege of visiting in the denery at Gloucester, as the dean is a relative of hers. She was also in the home of Lady Helen Young, which is the locale for several of her books, notably "Mr. Hodge and Mr. Hazard." During some special work at Oxford she stayed at the Spread Eagle Inn, whose owner might have stepped out of an eighteenth century novel, so perfectly does it represent that period.

Turning again to lighter topics, she smiled over the Lord Mayor's show, which is a gorgeous pageant in which each district in London is represented. Then she closed with this rare bit, London, it seems to me, is lighted by gas, having nothing else to do one evening, she changes jobs with the lamp lighter—only to learn that the flick of the wrist with which he accomplished his task required ten minutes of struggle for one accustomed merely to pressing a button.

After all this enthusiastic chatter, we hesitated to ask our last question: "Were you sorry to come home, then?" "No indeed," she averred. "I had a wonderful trip, and I would not have missed it—but after all the best part of going away is the joy it gives to come back!"

"Indian Nights" is a collection of the best traditions of Indian folklore spoken by the Wise One, immediately catch our thoughts as we stop from time to time to reflect and ponder. The enjoyment following from such meditation upon topics that appear to be natural in their own right, and emotion pervades the general trend of the book.

A WOMAN WITH WHITE EYES By Mary Borden Remarkable for the peculiar style in which it is written rather than for the novelty of its plot, this is undoubtedly the best of the books of the young English novelist, Mary Borden.

The atmosphere of the English countryside and of London permeates the entire story, although the action takes place a great deal of the time in the East. Dealing solely with the story as it is remembered by an old and lonely woman, the narrative wanders with her thoughts and there are many interruptions in the form of her strange and twisted philosophy of life. Dramatic situations are handled well and the book holds the reader's interest to the end.

O. D. K. men's honorary leadership Fraternity, held its initiation on Monday evening at 5 o'clock. After the initiation exercises, a formal dinner was given in honor of the new initiates. During the course of the dinner, the organization made plans for the O. D. K. convention which is to be held here March 5, 6, and 7, and a convention committee was appointed.

is, and can be, but very little difference in the rate of profit of one bookstore and rate of profit of another, with more than 20 percent of the money paid by students going directly to the publisher. I am acquainted with the prices of something over a dozen college bookstores, and between the extreme low prices and extreme high prices, I have not found a difference of 10 percent.

"Obviously, then, the only way to really cut the cost of your book bill is to play ball with your bookstore in an effort to establish a used book business. Let us sell you a used book for $2.00 and buy it back for $1.25 instead of buying the new from us for $3.00. You will have cut your cost from $3.00 to 75 cents in so doing, and the store, if you are interested in their end of it, will have made a greater profit, and in addition will have less money tied up in their inventory."

If you want to know the Dartmouth man's favorite tobacco, watch him as he loads his pipe between classes in front of Dartmouth Row. Watch him as he strolls along Wheelock Street and pulls the familiar blue tin of Edgeworth out of his pocket.

A pipe and Edgeworth—this is the smoking combination that has won the college man. Harvard, Cornell, Michigan, Stanford, Illinois... all agree with Dartmouth. Natural merit has made Edgeworth the favorite smoking tobacco in America's leading colleges and universities.

College men everywhere respond to the appeal of pipes packed with cool, slow-burning Edgeworth. Be guided by their choice: try Edgeworth yourself. Taste its rich natural savor that is enhanced immeasurably by Edgeworth's distinctive "eleventh process."

EDGEWORTH SMOKING TOBACCO Edgeworth is a blend of five old tobaccos with its natural savor enhanced by Edgeworth's distinctive "eleventh process." Buy Edgeworth anywhere in two forms—"Ready-Rolled" and "Plug Slice." All sizes, 16c pocket packs to 50c pound tins.
