

If you show me any where that I am wrong I will do my best to profit by your correction.

I gave a Mr Whittle (a young Irish Catholic barrister) a letter of introduction to you the other day. I don't know whether he presented it. He is really able. & I think you may find him useful faithfully yours
A. Froude

Froude

December 16
1869.

My dear Reeve

If I have anything to complain of it is that you should have thought it necessary to write to me in explanation on justification of what you are about to say. English History

is the property of the action and any book which is written about any part of it ought to be submitted to the ~~keenest~~ keenest criticism which can be applied to it. - The only review which I have ever felt inclined to resent have been those which are prompted by a desire merely to hurt & wound my individual self.

Assure yourself that from you I can expect nothing but the fairest & most candid consideration.

I shall read what you say with nothing but interest & pleasure. &