Dear Mr. North

I thank you so much for letting me know about Harvey B. Smith's "A Sentimental Library". It makes my mouth water, but my illness, & the following trip to Switzerland, have been such an expense this summer that I have had to deny myself the joy of buying books for the present.

It is most tantalising, especially when I hear of a bargain, as in the present instance.

I am wondering whether you ever received a letter I posted to you on July 9th, containing copies of a series of letters from the Lamb to Miss Kelly. I explained that the nos. of the Sat^y Review, in which the letters were published, were out of print, so I amused myself by copying the letters out, & said I would finish the series on my return from Switzerland. Now, as you don't mention them at all in this morning's letter, I am afraid that either (1) you didn't receive the packet, or (2) a letter of yours in reply has miscarried. I shall be so glad to know; & if you have the letters safe, would you mind tell me the date of the last one, as I stupidly forgot to make a note of it. There were not many more to copy, I know, & I will soon have them done, on hearing from you.

I am still a bit of an invalid, so it is a pleasant occupation for me to sit & write, especially on anything to do with Lamb.

With kind regards, & many regrets that I can't buy that book, much as I want it.

Believe me,

Yours sincerely

J. L. Anderson
