

Thank you dear Sir for this pleasing communication. How happy you are in the endearing attachments of your friends & how unhappy would a person of your disposition be with wealth & power & fame without that sweet ingredient which seems in this preparatory state to belong more to a better life than to this Pilgrimage of woe.
Much do I owe to sacred sympathy & gladly should I communicate of what I have so amply received. Believe that you are much & often in the thoughts of yours with much regard

Anne Lysons

Mr. Grent;

Notes &

Follets

Mr. Cogswell

✓530 GRANT, Anne. Scottish Author; spent childhood in America before the Revolution, and wrote "Memoirs of an American Lady." A.L.S. 1 p., 8vo. N.p., n.d. To Mr. Cogswell.

Thanking her correspondent for his letter. "How happy you are in the endeared attachments of your friends & how would a person of your disposition be with wealth, power and fame, without that sweet ingredient which seems in this preparatory state to belong more to a better life than to this Pilgrimage of woe." Etc., etc.