

Latin V. Verbo are of the following four kinds 1 Transitive & Transitive Transitive expressing an action with which passes from the agent to an object object which object a motion object is generally unjoined in the ~~transitive~~ case. case 1. Transitive i. e.
Latin V. Verbo are of the following four kinds first Transitive ~~cases~~

7777 to have a peach 7799 person a peach If French style I am of the most pale May a wife of 17 to
I am on the hand
It goes on a fibrous by the back road
The best way to to get of sea road to which we discoursed about the properties of steam, probabilities of carriages by ditto, till all my science, and more than all was exhausted, & I was thinking of escaping my torment by getting up on the outside, when getting into Bishop's Street four my gentlemen spying some two wife farming land put an impudently question to me "what sort of a crop of turnips & thought you should have this year" Emma's eyes turned to me to know what in the world I would have to say, and she burst into a laugh violent fit of laughter, mangle her pale serious cheeks, when with the greatest gravity replied that "it depended, I believed, upon boiled legs of Stutton". this laugh'd our conversation, and my gentlemen with a face half wise, half in scorn troubled us with no more conversation scientific or philosophical for the remainder of the journey. Burton was here yesterday, and as learned the full as my fellow travellers. What a pity that he will speak a wit and a drollish pleasant fellow, as he is by wisdom. He talk'd on Moore, & by having read Hawthorn & Hurmy recently I was enabled to talk of Names and show more knowledge than he had suspected I possess'd & in the end he begg'd me to shape my thoughts upon paper, which I did after he was gone & sent him

Three thoughts on some eminent Composers

Some say up Haydn, some Mozart just as the whims bites & so & so Martin Burney is as odd as ever. We had a dispute about the word "hair" which I contended was pronounced like "air" — he said that it might in common parlance, or that we might use it, speaking of the "Hair at Law" a

