

to cause you still further delay.

I have spoken of your Poetry Review to one or two of my friends, and I can add a little to your subscription list.

Yours very sincerely

Richard S. Gallienne.

To

William Stanley Braithwaite, Esq.

67M28

Rowayton, Conn.

Monday.

1916 or 1917
My dear Braithwaite: do please forgive me once more for leaving you charming little so long an answer.
I have been driven, finishing a small book, which, as I ended it, I cared for more than I thought I possibly could. It is to be published just before before Christmas. I will tell you about it when we meet. Please let us know when you will be in New York; I assumed that Mr. Galliano & I had but a telephone notice - or indeed no notice at all, save you at the door, to know of your coming

to

to see us.

I am enclosing you ~~the~~ ^{the} two copies of the little book you wrote of, which I thought you might exhibit The East-Cole. I shall have prepared to exhibit it The Paradoxical of Beauty

(The title of our essay still with the same title ~~of~~ but, ~~which~~ to do that I might have to