My dear Sir

I beg to acknowledge Mr. Hancock's cheque for £15; with which amount I am quite satisfied. I am glad that I was to, & that you have understood me.
When I asked for £3
a page, it was not so much the worth of the matter that I had to consider, but the fact that, in writing for you, I was obliged to pay

by a word on which I am engaged. I can only regret that I was not of greater use to you; but I
read all the literary man that hasty writing is rarely to be depended upon. - My object, as I trust you now see,
in sending a messenger,
was not hostile, but simply to get ~~substantiated~~ a matter obscure to me. I wish your

never taking every success,
and all, My dear Sir,
Your faithful servant,
George Meredith

J. Cornish Esq.
