

J. Paget Dean of Ch. Ch.
Oxford

November 15th 1892.

Dear Sir Baldwin Reighton,

I am ashamed that I have not since written to thank you - as I do most heartily - for your kindness in sending me the sketch of a very beautiful and high and noble life. I have read it with great enjoyment and gratitude: there is real help in the recollection of such lives; and that which you have drawn is an example that we would desire to have often before young men.

There is, I think, great encouragement in marking how many of the measures of which you speak towards the close of the book are now either partially effected or in nearer view than they seemed some years ago.

I venture to hope that we may some time have the pleasure of welcoming you here. It is a special privilege of the trust given me here that one may hope to come to know more of all who are linked with me in a Common Cause for the peace & just welfare.

Believe me to be,

Very truly yours,

Francis Paget.
