My dear North,

Thanks for your note informing me of your change of address. All good luck in your new quarters. I have seen nothing of Miss Ridgeway, & as you did not give me her address could not write to her, & she did not write to me. It is a pity as this time we must have been at home when she was in town. The Library as you say is solid. There are plenty of other means of getting pleasant book-talk into print & it is our business to do the heavy part, which no editor who has to pay his expenses & make a little profit could afford to look at. Still as you see we get an increasing number of advertisements and our sales to non-members bring in a little money also, so we do quite well.

My wife is going again to Knocke with Mrs. Burnsting & for part of the time our daughter Joyce. I may join her later on, but I start on the same day for a week & a half with Dover Wilson in Yorkshire Naval must go to breakfast. We are really having a summer this year - weeks yet. Not the sort of summer on which we look back "I think it was on a Wednesday".

With kind regards to Mrs. North,
Sincerely,

Ans. Pollard
