

My Dear Sir

my

9th 1797

My old heavy friend and companion Asthma informing me yesterday that if I offered to stir out of doors that he would either put me to death or plague me more than ever whilst he had a habitation in my lungs I was obliged to submit to his menace and consequently lose the pleasure of your convivial circle I therefore moped it at home by my fire side endeavouring to console myself with the great importance of the day which is to rescue us from the fatal effects of the folly of Mr. St. Paul's Adam.

I am truly Yours
