

BROGLIE, Victor Maurice, Count de, bró-le-an, a French general, was born of a good family at Quercy, served with glory in the wars of Louis XIV., and was made a marshal of France. D. 1727.—His son Francis-Marie was also a marshal of France, and distinguished himself greatly in Italy, in the campaigns of 1733 and 1734.—His son, the celebrated Marshal de Broglie, commanded with great glory in the Seven Years' War. He quitted France in 1794, and, after residing in England some time, went to Russia, where he obtained a military rank equal to that which he had held in France.—His son Claude Victor, prince of Broglie, became active on the side of the popular party at the commencement of the French Revolution, and was made maréchal-de-camp. Guillotined 1794.

BROME, Adam de, brome, an English divine, who founded Oriel College, Oxford. Lived in the 14th century.

BROMLEY, William, brom'-le, an eminent English line engraver, was born in the Isle of Wight, in 1769, and was held in high esteem by Sir Thomas Lawrence, Stothard, Fuseli, and Flaxman. D. 1842.—His son John was also an engraver, but in mezzotint, in which style he had few equals. B. 1795; D. 1839, before his father. His principal works are — the "Trial of Lord William Russell," and of "Queen Caroline," after Hayter; "Lady Jane Grey re-