"P. J. Conkwright (28) made his initial plunge into the graphic arts pond when only 14. So on he was publishing a Boy Scout paper on a 5 by 8 press at Salspice, Okla.

"His printing and publishing venture was interrupted by several years at the State universities of Oklahoma, Missouri, and Kentucky. He was graduated from Kentucky in '28. THE SATURDAY EVENING POST

Calling 'Em Wild

By JOE CREASON

FOOTBALL—like crime, does not pay.

Take it from one that not only picked Kentucky to win the game Saturday but predicted that Washington and Lee blue-blood would gush knee deep on Still field, this old Saturday afternoon time killer just doesn't pan out profitably. Just when it seems you have a sure thing—pooey—the bubble explodes in your face. Take for example my case in the Kentucky-W and L. marathon of a 100-percent-for-comfort date. Kentucky, fresh from holding Vanderbilt to a 14-7 win, opposed the Lexington, Va., Generals who had lost to Virginia tied West Virginia and had been hard pressed to defeat tiny Hampton-Sidney. Well I knew that?

The Cats might relax too much from last week's hard game and take this fracas too lightly. With the pressure is off, teams have a tendency to do that. Still it looked like a push over so—I ran crawly far out on the limb and suggest that the game might end with Kentucky on top by 33 points. From 4:30 to 6:30 Saturday night I received 16 phone calls all of which reminded me that Kentucky had been high-jacked by 6-0. To them, yab, yab, I already knew it. I was there.

Allow me to make my case typical by taking you on a play by play account of my reactions during the game.

At 1:30 I entered the stands, confident of seeing the Wildcats maul the Generals for their third win this season. From the far side of the field Washington and Lee takes the field; they do look big and business like but all pessimistic thoughts are chased as Ken-

...when the third quarter is over I still patiently wait for Kentucky to do what I know they are capable of. Then Zoeller is dropped for a safety and the W and score reservation hauls up another 7 points. Still I think we can win. Then with five minutes to play I begin to feel a cold, numb feeling creeping up my spine. Why? What if we should lose, where is my excuse to come from? I am snuffed from this musby by a shout from across the field and see gold roused players pouring onto the field shouting and slapping each other on the back. The game's over and we lose 6-0.

At 4:30, the stands are bare save for a few kids picking up pop bottles. Still I sit in mute alienation, my mind miles away. The only thought I can clasp is the stark reality that we lost. Still, I'm for the team, they're Kentucky—win, lose, or draw. They're my school's team and I know they did their best, my best is to be for them.

Wasn't It Horrible?

There was not a good team on Still field Saturday—it was a simple matter of which team the game is going to be a slaughter. What the heck, hadn't this same team held Vandy in check last week? At 2:00, the band with its "On, On U of K" and the referee with his whistle, start the game. At 2:28, after patiently sitting through the first quarter and seeing the Cats mess around with the Generals holding the whip, I begin to wonder when the fireworks are due. At 2:30 I am bounced into the aisle as Bishop plows over for 6 W and L points. That's incredible! Then the half ends all thoughts and the band takes the floor. Anyway, the second half will be different.

Different?

W & L GENERALS

H Hogan, was former Kentucky prep school stars. In the General's room, tranches the work of Captain Brown and Dobbins, both former Kentuckians, was the feature.

The aggressive play that made them the talk of the campus last week was on a leave of absence Saturday as the Cats staggered thru the game. Kentucky's blockers gave the runners the hard way to gain, without any help during the first half. When in the second half the blocks began to fall, the runners would pull away from their interference too soon and steer straight into eager W and L arms. To top the whole dreary affair Lee officials practically air-conditioned the stadium with their whistles in inflicting penalties and calling back plays.

"The Generals threatened to score first late in the second quarter. From his own 25 Shepherd attempted to punt but his effort was partially blocked. Lind Washington and Lee took the leather on the Kentucky 40, Harrison Hogan found a gaping hole at guard and plowed down to the 33 and followed with a sweeping end run that pushed the line of scrimmage down to the 21. Craft was stopped over center after going to the 13 but here the Kentucky line held and took the ball on downs and Shepherd punted out of danger.

Officials—Phooey!

Fans may have been bewildered by the Saturday but the most confused individuals that I could find all through the melee were the officials. Their whistle serenades not only slowed the game to a draggy walk but several times they made glaring mistakes in their decisions. Particularly were they at error in the third quarter. Shepherd sent a long spiral from his own 40 that bit around the W. and L. 15 and bounced toward the goal line. Herdin flopped on the leather on the 2 yard line but the officials, who were hovering around the mid-field stripe called a hurried conference and ruled that the ball had bounced into the end zone and it was awarded the Generals on the 20. On the next play H. Hogan was dropped for a 6-yard loss; 3 Kentucky points gone up Salt Creek in a leaky boat.

Of Cheering

Compared to the Vanderbilt game, an all time high for cheering, there was a terrific yelling of the yelling and noise that are such an integral fixture of football. The effect of the Vandy uproar evidently was good but Saturday it was just wasn't there. Could it be that anything to do with it? Student enthusiasm is a fickle thing and easily lost. Perhaps loyalty and enthusiasm are like dope fiends that must constantly be needed up to make any response.

Alibi

I went farther out on the prediction limb than anybody but in one respect I was right. Friday I set to words the belief that should the Generals score first, Kentucky would be faced with an inspired eleven and they would find the scoring road a rough detour. When the Virginia scored their touchdown an electric spark seemed to be touched and they were not to be denied. Then too when Davis and Combs were ferried off the field, the Blue chances were dragging along behind them.

That game's gone forever, so be it. Others are yet to come and the sums of the season lie ahead when the sledging really becomes difficult. If the Cats bounce back and make a good showing against Xavier, the chance is not lost.
