Members of Classes Ending in "1" and "6" Will Hold Reunions on Campus June 4 and 5

Once every five years after graduation, alumni of the University have an opportunity to meet in reunion with many of the members of their own respective classes. Old grads know they are always welcome to return to school and to renew acquaintances with members of the staff, but it is only on these special occasions that they have the privilege of assembling with a large number of those men and women whom they knew best because they were classmates five, ten, or perhaps twenty-five or more years ago.

While commencement exercises are still two months ahead, it is not too soon to begin plans for that important reunion. Classes scheduled to assemble this year are those ending in the numbers "1" and "6," with the class of 1934 holding special reunion on the occasion of the second anniversary of graduation.

There are many changes taking place on the campus which should prove interesting to those who have not had an opportunity to keep in close contact with the University during the last several years. In some instances familiar landmarks are disappearing, but all these changes are in the direction of a progress which alumni will be pleased to note. A special article elsewhere in this publication outlines something of the transformations taking place under the current University building program.

Commencement Calendar

Speakers for the various events of commencement week have not been announced, but a tentative calendar lists the highlights of the program, which has been so arranged that all major events will take place within a day and a half.

Thursday, June 4, will be Alumni Day, with luncheons planned for the various classes holding special reunions. Baccalaureate services will be held that afternoon in Memorial hall, followed by the annual alumni tea given by President and Mrs. McVey at Maxwell Place.

Of principal interest to alumni will be the annual banquet to be held Thursday night at the Lafayette hotel, when Gov. A. B. Chandler is expected to be the principal speaker.

Commencement exercises will be held at 10 o'clock Friday morning, June 5, in the Alumni gymnasium. After commencement, alumni, seniors, and friends will attend a luncheon at the University Commons. Immediately following the luncheon, the annual meeting of the alumni association will be held at the Commons.

Further information regarding details of class reunions, together with announcement of baccalaureate and commencement speakers, will be released when the program has been completed. In the meantime, all old grads, regardless of whether or not they are members of the classes holding special reunions, are urged to plan a trip back to the University at commencement time.

AMONG THOSE TO MEET THIS YEAR

The foregoing is a photograph of the members of the class of '06 as they appeared on the occasion of their last reunion in June of 1931.

Official organ of the Alumni Association of the University of Kentucky published quarterly on the campus of the University, at Lexington. Subscriptions to non-members, $1.00, to members of the Association, 50 cents. Membership in the Association includes subscription to the Alumnus.

Entered as Second Class Matter at the Postoffice at Lexington, Ky., May 22, 1929, under the Act of March 3, 1879.

University Launches Building Program

Rising among their veteran predecessors, three new buildings and a central heating plant will soon put new angles into the University skyline.

Greatest of the changes to be effected by the new building set-up probably will be made by the erection of a Student Union building. The selection of a site for this building has been a subject of considerable discussion since first plans for the structure were announced.

Near the center of the campus a quadrangle of buildings will be the home of the College of Engineering. Historical Mechanical Hall, built in 1892, will form one corner of the quadrangle, while the Wendt shops will make up the entire east side.

Construction of a new law building will end almost fifty years of service for the one in use at the present time. The law building location also is undetermined.

The central heating plant site not only has been decided upon, but actual work on the structure is expected to be started almost immediately. This plant will be placed on the opposite side of Limestone street from the main campus, on a lot adjoining the present Service Department building, former location of a looseleaf tobacco warehouse. To this lot 3,600 tons of coal necessary to heat the entire University group for one year can be hauled by a special track right up to the coal bins.

Sudden impetus in the building program became publicly known several months ago when Col. James Graham, dean of the College of Engineering, made a trip to Washington for a federal grant and a Public Works Administration loan. Dean Graham's efforts resulted in the approval of a $165,000 grant and a $600,000 loan, and the Student Union building dream was announced as a reality.

This announcement followed several years' work by such student organizations as Omicron Delta Kappa, honorary campus leadership fraternity, which sponsored the selling of tags at football games. The surplus funds from the Wednesday dances went into the Student Union fund. Pictures of Student Union buildings in other schools were shown at the University Commons, editorial opinion appeared in the Kernel, and at last concerted effort won out.

Since the approval of the loan and grant, the discussion of the Student Union building location has attracted no small interest and debate. A position in the right front of the Administration building facing Limestone and near the flagpole was considered. Some University officials thought such a building should be nearer the exact center of the campus and suggested the space in front of the library. Others favored the site next to the Old Patterson residence, now the Woman's building. Locations near McVey hall, near Memorial hall, and on the tennis courts also were suggested. Official announcement as to the most likely location has been withheld.

No swimming pool is in prospect for the new building. Although seriously considered by University officials, plans for a pool have been abandoned because they declared it would be either too expensive or too small and unsanitary. Other schools' experiences with indoor pools were taken into account in arriving at the decision. Just what the water-minded group on the campus will be able to do in the future is at present uncertain. However, Student Union building prospects were just as uncertain a year ago.

Present plans call for the building to include a dance floor, the Commons, the Campus Book store, and the post office. The "social center" of the campus also is expected to move to the new location.

Engineering building plans are being worked out, and tearing down of the old section of Mechanical hall known as "Dicker hall" has been completed in preparation for the new building. However, the front section, ivy-covered Mechanical hall, will remain standing.

With the newest materials available, the new drawing room to be built as a second story to the Wendt shops will have one long glass window extending from floor to ceiling for the entire length of the building on the east side. This innovation in class room construction will provide abundant light.

The Wendt shops on the east of Mechanical hall on the southwest corner outline roughly a quadrangle which will be completed with the new buildings. Thus a cramped College of Engineering will soon have room enough for a long, satisfying stretch.

Dean F. Paul Anderson, late head of the College of Engineering, came here in 1891 and had charge of the construction of Mechanical hall. He missed by less than three years seeing an extension of the college for which he had worked during a period of forty years.

"Dean of Heat" Dickerson, the man in charge of the present heating plant, is living these days in anticipation of the new heating plant. According to Maury Crutcher, superintendent of buildings and grounds, the central system will eliminate twenty-five heating plants, forty-four boilers, twenty-two stokers and twenty firemen along with an array of wheelbarrows and ashcans.

All the operations incident to heating will be removed to the west side of Limestone, leaving the atmosphere behind much cleaner. Lower heating costs will follow, too. Moving the old plants will make more room for class rooms. Mr. Crutcher states that besides all these advantages the heating plant will pay for itself in a few years.

With the tearing down of the old heating plant chimney back of the Administration building goes a landmark that perhaps won't pass so easily from alumni memory. And with the new structure rising about the campus come new angles that will play havoc with the alumni conception of the University skyline.
