Speaks with newsmen

700 listen Humphrey criticizes Nixon cuts

By RON MITCHELL
Night News Editor

Sen. Hubert Humphrey (D-Minn.) criticized the funding of the Rural Development Act of 1972 by President Nixon in a speech Friday to the Rural Development Conference.

Humphrey's address began the day-long conference. The senator was given a glowing introduction by Gov. Wendell Ford and followed a speech by Kentucky Sen. Walter Huddleston, who sponsored the conference.

Some 700 conference delegates, gathered at the UK Agriculture Science Center, heard the former vice president paint a bleak picture for rural programs in the next five years.

THE 1968 PRESIDENTIAL candidate said Nixon has proposed a 50 percent cut in the rural development act which Humphrey initiated and pushed through Congress.

"Unfortunately, the budget requests of the President for the coming year are far below what is required to make the rural development program effective and beneficial to rural America. The budget requests only one half of the $600 million recommended by Congress," Humphrey told the audience.

HUMPHREY SAID THE urban crisis of today is "due largely to what has been happening to rural America."

He said 30 million Americans have left rural America within the past 30 years and cities weren't ready for the people and the people weren't ready for the cities.

"They thought there were jobs, sometimes there were, sometimes there weren't. The cities didn't have plans for housing, transportation and communication and many of the people who came weren't able to fit into the competitive spirit and tension of the urban cities," Humphrey said.

RURAL AREAS ARE neglected, he said, because the televisions, radios and newspapers are found in the city and they place emphasis upon urban problems.

Humphrey said there are major problems in rural America today and they are getting worse as people move to the cities.

"Of 210 million Americans, two out of every three live in communities over 50,000, 70 percent of the people live on two percent on the land and if the trend continues 85 percent of the population will be living in urban areas by the year 2000," he emphasized.

Humphrey said the solution to the problem is to reach a balance between rural and urban areas. He said urban America should not be neglected, but rural areas should be made more attractive.

Story links UK athletics with Oldiges

An article in the Saturday edition of The Louisville Courier-Journal cited an apparent link between the UK Athletics Department and the home of Mary Oldiges, the UK coed who says she completed course work for Wildcat quarterback James 'Dinky' McKay.

The article said James Pelfry, UK communications manager, received a request Friday from "some secretary in the Athletics Department, I don't know who it was," to trace a telephone number for the department. Pelfry was given the number and contacted the General Telephone Company to find out who owned the number.

THE COURIER LATER contacted Mrs. Helen Mae Oldiges, mother of the girl. Mrs. Oldiges said she received a call from the General Telephone Company stating "the UK Athletic Department was checking to find out if the phone here was the phone to which the calls had been made by the athletic department."

The phone company said it would not elaborate on the calls and would not disclose any information concerning them unless under subpoena. Mary Oldiges says she received at least three, probably more, calls from the athletic department over the summer.

The Lexington Herald-Leader reported Saturday the National Collegiate Athletic Association (NCAA) enforcement officer, Walter Brown, said Friday an investigation may be in the offing.

SG election: 'politicking' begins

By NEILL MORGAN
Kernel Staff Writer

With the election campaign for Student Government (SG) president and vice president gearing up, the annual political alignment and realignment of the candidates has begun.

It began yesterday afternoon when Ben Fletcher withdrew from the race for SG president, in favor of Jim Flegle. Citing personal reasons for his withdrawal, Fletcher said in a letter to the Kernel Flegle "is the candidate who has the ability to rejuvenate campus-wide interest and participation in SG."

FLETCHER'S WITHDRAWAL leaves six candidates in the running for president. Five candidates are opting for vice president. All of the candidates for president except, John Pirolli, have a vice presidential running mate. Pirolli said in a telephone conversation last night he felt his lack of a running mate would hurt his chances of being elected.

The other presidential candidates and their running mates are: Diane Naser, president, and Mark Hay, vice president; Raymond Drown, president, and Lon Coleman, vice president; Mark Manning, president, and Dennis Carman, vice president; Ed Riley, president, and Steve Long, vice president; Jim Flegle, president, and Peggy Pearson, vice president.

The platforms of the various candidates run from the socialist setup of Manning and Carman, who are running with a slate of senatorial candidates called the Student-Faculty-Employee Control (SFEC) slate, to the platform of Drown and Coleman, who are running as the Banana Party.

THE PLATFORM of the Banana Party is somewhat elusive at its point. On his application form Drown listed his platform as: "I am interested in SG. I want more power, I need people to love me. We want more student apathy."

However, in telephone conversation last night he said the real platform of the Banana Party would lean more to the socialist platform of the SFEC slate, but it wouldn't be ready until later this week.

Some of the major points of the SFEC slate's platform are: abolishment of the Board of Trustees, stopping all tuition and dorm rate increases, recognize the right of all UK employees to bargain collectively, end all of UK's ties to the military and "immediate and unconditional recognition" of the Gay Liberation Front.

ONLY NASER AND Hay have a complete platform available. Pirolli won't have his available until later in the week, but on his application he said he wanted to give "the SG back to the student body."

Riley and Long also appear to think student involvement is a basic issue.

On his application Riley said he would "try for a greater student voice in University policy making." And Long said "more students need to be made aware of SG's potential as both a service organization and a catalyst for activism."

Activities begin for health week

Women's Health Week is being held today through Thursday by the Council on Women's Concerns and the Women's Health Care Committee.

Today's session, which will be held at 7:30 p.m. in Student Center room 206, will deal with abortion. This session will not be a discussion of the pros and cons of abortion, said Patty Van Houten, coordinator of the Health Care Week.

Instead, Attorney Scott Wendelsdorf will talk about the Supreme Court's abortion ruling. And, Patty Walker, an abortion counselor for the Lexington Free Clinic, will discuss abortion referrals in Lexington and the possibilities of getting an abortion in Lexington.

In California, it's already 1984

By NICHOLAS VON HOFFMAN

WASHINGTON—To the City of Huntington Beach, Calif., may go the distinction of being the first American community to have every one of its citizens, man, woman and child, guilty or innocent, accused or unaccused, on its police department computer. This data bank won't be restricted to criminal activity, but will include everything that every branch of local government known about people living at a given address—including medical information, abandoned cars, water bills, credit history, and even the name of the family dog.

Nicholas VonHoffman

While this informational system is now being put into effect, one obstacle is preventing the system's perfection: how to get the dope on people living in rental units in this city of about 140,000 people. To take care of that, an effort is underway to pass a law requiring landlords to file such information about their tenants with the police.

As you might suppose, this grand endeavor is being paid for with Federal money through the Law Enforcement Assistance Administration. The Feds send the money to the California Council on Criminal Justice, a state agency, which apportions it to county and local law enforcement units, so you can't complain that there's no local control.

THERE MAY not have been too much citizen awareness, however, until the story was dug up by Pat Michaels, a reporter for the Capitol News Service, a Sacramento-based organization servicing 371 dailies and weeklies around the state. Michaels has also found much disconcerting material about federally funded police-youth programs, but at this stage it seems that mainly right-wingers are upset about it.

A spokesman for the California Council on Criminal Justice somewhat sadly conceded that Michaels' report on Huntington Beach is correct, but disputed the accusation that his agency is paying for a number of programs that put "pre-delinquent" schoolchildren and adolescents in the law enforcement computer record system.

Whether or not the kids are going into the national crime data bank, the applications for these Federal grants aren't terribly reassuring. San Diego County, for example, is receiving money for a project that goes by the horrific name of "Simplified Analytical Methods of Behavioral Systemization," and any kid over the age of 7, accused of committing a crime or not, is eligible to be snapped up in it.

A TEACHER who's having trouble with a sassy youngster can put a kid in the program. Violations of curfew, drinking, playing hooky or being "beyond the control of their parents or incorrigible to authority" is enough to sweep a kid in. And not only does he go in, but so do his parents.

The parents must choose between court action on their kids or submitting themselves to a group headshrink program that modestly describes itself as teaching the parents the "ability to handle their own affairs."

IN TIMES past the promethean assumptions on which such programs as these are built have been associated with that mixture of social science and social beneficence we call liberalism. But all of this is happening under a conservative administration in Washington and the most famous right-wing governor in the country.

Why? Maybe the controls family and community once exercised on youth have weakened to such an extent that the government must intervene in our most intimate private life, maybe we are asking for a level of public lawfulness that is incompatible with personal liberty. But for the time being it might be best just to catch people and force them and their families to undergo the punishment of behavior modification after they've done something, not before.

'Should we be shocked because... someone takes the easy way out?'

By EILEEN GERRITY

I find it quite heart-warming to know that we have, here in our midst at UK, a woman of such admirable character as Mary Oldiges. Certainly it is quite commendable to perform a job one feels to be against one's own conscience, receive money for this job, and then alleviate one's own conscience by exposing the "wrongs" that one has committed by placing the blame on someone else.

Aside from the fact that Miss Oldiges acted first out of personal gain, secondly out of personal guilt, and thirdly out of personal acquittal, is the fact that this whole incident, which is only another attempt at condemning the UK football players (something the Kernel takes great pleasure in doing), has nothing to do with the present football staff, as pointed out by Athletic Director Harry C. Lancaster.

"The regretful coed," as the Kernel calls her, apparently finds it hard to adhere to her own code of morals when money enters the picture. It was said that Mary Oldiges copied answers to an English correspondence course which had been "previously handed in and corrected" for an individual unknown to her.

Strange thing that her conscience did not rebel until she found herself again receiving money for her copying abilities, this time for a specific individual—if the story proves true. Suddenly she realizes the terrible things she had done.

Mary Oldiges claims "her conscience caused her to delay sending the assignments in." However, she emerged victorious from the battle with her conscience. She sent the lessons in, picked up her pay, waited for her "employer" to leave town, and announced to The Kentucky Kernel all that had taken place—according to her.

Who are you trying to kid anyway? Are we supposed to be shocked because, once again, someone has taken the easy way out? Are we supposed to rejoice because someone has decided to confess her sins? Or, are we supposed to get upset with John Ray for trying to help a player he considered to be important, if McKay is guilty. I can hardly see the relevance in the printing of this article and therefore, if I were Mary Oldiges I would keep my mouth shut.

Eileen Gerrity is a sophomore physical education major.

The Golf Cap Kid is the top attraction at soggy UK Relays

By DENNIS DAVIS
Kernel Staff Writer

Shivering, rain-soaked fans remained despite the miserable weather to see the final day of the 10th annual UK Relays Saturday.

But the fans' vocal response was minimal. Only two athletes of the field of 1500 managed to draw verbal response from the otherwise stoic crowd.

One was the obvious crowd favorite. A man under a golf cap, otherwise known as Dave Wottle, was introduced over the P.A. system at least a dozen times. When Wottle, in his orange sweat suit and green track shoes was not signing autographs, he was warming up on the track under hundreds of attentive eyes.

The other athlete, John Gnerre of Pittsburgh's Allegheny Community College, had to be more spectacular to turn the heads of the crowd.

Gnerre, competing in the 3,000 meter steeplechase, picked a bad time to run into traffic—while he was atop the water jump hurdle. He slipped, fell head first into the frigid water, and sank completely under. After a brief pause, he sprang up gasping, spit the water out of his mouth, and continued on his way.

One of his teammates dropped out of the race before encountering the first water hazard, and a third hit the water on the second lap almost as badly as did Gnerre. None of the three finished the race.

Kent State's Jacques Acambay and Middle Tennessee's Barry McClure, two of the meet's big names, were absent. McClure, a triple jumper, and Acambay, a hammer thrower, are both NCAA indoor champs. But despite their absences, the meet had an abundance of name athletes.

As meet director and UK head coach Press Whelan said, "in spite of the weather, the best guys will go ahead and win."

He was right. There were no major upsets. John Craft of the Chicago Track Club, who has finished first in the past three UK Relays, broke the meet record with a 52 foot, 4 1/4 inch triple jump.

LSU's 18-year-old Larry Shipp breezed to 14.1 time in the 120-yard high hurdles.

Kent State's Gerald Tinker, who won an Olympic gold medal on the U.S. 400-meter relay team, won the 100 in 9.6. Former national contender Ivory Crockett was third in 9.8, edged out by George Daniels of Northern Illinois.

Olympic gold medalist Wottle anchored three Bowling Green University relay teams. BGU finished fourth in the sprint medley, but won both the distance medley and the four-mile relay.

Wottle said he knew the competition would be tough. "I knew pretty well who I'd be running against. I expected most of the trouble to come from Mandara (Pat Mandara, Indiana's four-mile relay anchor man) and Durkin (Big Ten mile champ from Illinois, Mike Durkin).

"The meet helped me. I was very pleased with my performance."

Wottle said he did not get to see much of the meet because of the weather. "I was real happy to see Sid Sink win, though. He's from Bowling Green." Sink, once a world class steeplechaser, won the three-mile in 13:42.9, a meet record.

UK had some heroes, too. Tom Gohlke, a senior, jumped 22 feet, 6 inches for second in the collegiate long jump. Freshman Harold Dehnart won the collegiate shot put with a heave of 52 feet, 7 inches.

Kentucky finished fourth in the University two-mile relay.

Jeff Huggins was runner-up to NCAA champ Ron Evans of Connecticut in the decathlon competition.

Huggins, who claimed he felt honored just to compete with Evans, said "I guess my best performance was in the 400-meters." In that event he blistered the field in 48.5. He attained personal bests in five events.

When asked if the weather hurt his performance, Huggins said, "No, not anymore than anybody else. It's not nice to compete in that kind of weather, but it held off long enough so we could get the pole vault over, and that is really what is the important part."

Whelan said Dehnart and Huggins are probably the hardest workers on the team. "Some of our freshmen were outstanding. Dave Bernardy ran a 4:14 leg in the four-mile relay and competed with the best of them."

1,000 greet 'Mr. Basketball'

Nearly 1,000 people spent Sunday afternoon at Bluegrass Field waiting to welcome Kent Benson, Indiana's "Mr. Basketball" and at 6:10:12, a prime target for Kentucky's recruiting efforts.

Head coach Joe Hall had requested that UK fans go out to meet Benson when his plane arrived at 4 p.m. Hall could not have possibly foreseen the turnout.

Benson will play in the Kentucky-Indiana All-Star game this summer. He averaged 27.7 points and an incredible 30 rebounds a game as a senior.

He plans to major in business and economics in college.

To become dean Director of libraries heads for Penn State

The director of UK libraries for the past eight years, Dr. Stuart Forth, will assume the position of dean of libraries at Penn State University on July 1.

Forth came to UK in 1965 from the University of Kansas where he was associate director of libraries. In his new position he will be in charge of all libraries in the 18-campus Penn State system.

He served as acting vice president for student affairs from 1968 until 1970 and has been a professor in library science in addition to his administrative duties.

Under Forth's direction, the UK library system has made some major changes, including the current construction of an addition to the M. I. King Library.

Forth received his B.A. and M.A. degrees from the University of Michigan and was awarded a Ph.D. degree from the University of Washington in Seattle.

Humphrey criticizes Nixon funding

The balance can be reached by providing rural areas with employment opportunities with good income, hospitals, doctors, schools, recreation and cultural centers. By providing these services, the people will then have a choice of where they want to live.

plause when he touched on the current meat boycott.

Humphrey was explaining why farmers are beginning to "get some income" due to what he called natural disasters—a drought in the Soviet Union, a drought in Australia, a third crop shortage in the Argentina, all of which require great exports on our part—and a shortage of beef cattle.

"ONCE WE START to do this (balance the two), America is going to begin to heal itself. The problems of congestion, pollution, and crime in the slums will not lend itself to the solution by merely a frontal attack on them—you have to build," Humphrey added.

The Rural Development Act will not replace present rural aid programs but will supplement them, he said, citing the housing and Urban Development Act of 1970 and the Agriculture Act of 1970.

"Let me tell the consumers in the audience, there isn't going to be any steer born weighing a thousand pounds ready for market," Humphrey said.

The Rural Development Act authored by Humphrey will provide a new system of loans, broadening the mission of the U.S. Department of Agriculture, and funds for attracting businesses to communities with populations under 50,000.

The smaller communities cannot compete with larger cities—such as Chicago, New York, and Boston—for federal money on the same level, Humphrey said, and that is the importance of designing legislation specifically for the rural communities.

The audience gave the senator an overwhelming round of ap-

"The law isn't worth the paper it is written on unless it is funded and manned properly. The administration calls it a landmark legislation and on the other hand scimps on the funding. The money is there, it is just deciding what we want to spend it on," Humphrey said.

Humphrey, dressed in a navy blue double-knit suit and blue striped shirt, appealed to the group to write congressmen, the president and state legislators expressing their concern over the low appropriation.

World Wrapup

Viet Cong shoot down peacekeeping helicopter

SAIGON (AP)—A helicopter carrying peacekeeping officials was shot down Saturday after it was reported to have wandered off course over Communist-held territory. All nine passengers died.

The Viet Cong expressed "deep regret" Sunday at the loss of the American-piloted International Commission of Control and Supervision aircraft.

A South Vietnamese military spokesman claimed it was shot down by Communist ground fire, and an ICCS official said the helicopter was hit by a missile, probably a Russian-made Strela.

Ceilings for meat prices must be posted today

WASHINGTON (AP)—Grocery stores must have signs posted at their meat counters Monday showing legal ceiling prices for beef, pork and lamb.

The posting requirement applies to all but the smallest stores, those with annual revenues of $100,000 or less. The Cost of Living Council said many small grocery stores will be faced with significant posting requirements for the first time.

Israel refuses to sell occupied Arab land

JERUSALEM (AP)—The Israeli government decided Sunday against letting Jews buy real estate in occupied Arab territory, apparently fearing it might complicate future peace negotiations.

The decision—a serious setback to Defense Minister Moshe Dayan who fathered the idea—was reported by government ministers.

Pablo Picasso dies

MOUGINS, France (AP)—Pablo Picasso, an artistic genius and the greatest artist of his time, died Sunday at his home in the hills overlooking the Mediterranean.

The death of Picasso, 91, surprised his friends. He had suffered gripe attacks during the winter, but was reported to have been working regularly and vigorously, often until 3 a.m.
