SPRING CLASSES TO APPROXIMATE SCHEDULE SET

President Says Some Changes Will Have To Be Made

According to a statement issued from President H. L. Donovan's office, an effort will be made to have the course offerings for the spring quarter approximate those appearing in the printed schedule of classes...

The announcement further states, "It is not advisable, however, for students to plan their programs of study too far in advance of the opening of the quarter. The reduction in the number of regular students and the necessity of providing classroom facilities and instructors for such students may be sent here will necessitate some changes in the regular schedule of courses. It is hoped, however, that most of these changes will be confined to a reduction in the number of duplicated sections and changes in hours and rooms, rather than the withdrawal of any large number of courses. Students may be assured that provision will be made for all courses necessary to complete requirements for graduation in June."

It Was Such A Good World

BY ALICE WATKINS

The frat house on the dorm, March, 1913.
"Well, guss, don't think it ain't been charm in."
"Got everything, Jack?"
"Yeah, think so. If you find that picture I was looking for, just send it on to my new address."
"Okay, fellow. Listen, write to us now. There'll be only four of us left and we want to know what you're doing and everything."
"Yeah, I'll write. The only thing is, I won't be doing much—it'll all be so different. Wonder what kind of men I'll meet."
"Aw, they'll be swell, don't worry."
"No tears or anything, man, but you know just how I feel. It's been great, no joke."
"Same here, Jack."
"Better get going. Take it easy and keep everything rolling."
"So long and be good, Jack."
Reception Center, United States Army, April, 1943.

"Fill in."
"Hey, fellow, get a load of the Sarge."
"Uh-huh."
"What's the matter, lonesome?"
"None, just thinking."
"What's your name, man, I can't go on just hearing you."
"Jack Smith."
"Mine's Bill Johnson. Glad to know you, Jack. What outfit you attached to?"
"Think it's the 31st. Yeah, that's what it says on this card."
"Hey, that's mine. Your barracks doesn't happen to be 46, does it?"
"Yeah, 46, Sam, this is great."
"See you tonight, then."
"Barracks 46, midnight."
"Are you talking about, Jack?"
"Oh, just thinking about the boys, wondering what they're doing."
"Are you a fraternity man, Jack?"
"Pi Lambda."
"I was a Sigma Tau. Boy, Pi Lambda was mighty good at U. of C. Of course, we were tops, but Pi Lambda ran to a mighty close second."
"We had a good Sigma Tau chapter at Kentucky, too."

Did You Hear About It?

Are rumors really a necessity? You know what they are, you hear them every day. In your classrooms, in the grill, in the house and the dorm, in every conversation, you hear, "Do you know what I heard?" or "What do you think they'll do about...?" or "It's really true that...?"

From the very first day of school we've heard it. First the rumor spread over the campus that the men would be in school for only a few weeks. Well, we're all thankful that they're here still and thank goodness, they know now when they will have to go.

Next we heard about gasoline rationing. The first word around was that it would begin early in October causing the absence of all cars on the campus and causing auto "commuters" to drop out of school. There are still a great many cars seen and the enrollment did not drop because of the withdrawal of those who live in nearby towns. They have solved the problem and it's working, isn't it?

Around Christmas time when students were beginning to plan their next quarter's schedule, the rumor began that several of the departments would be withdrawn and that many of the courses would not be offered for the winter quarter. That was stopped in due time by Dr. Donovan and Dean Chamberlain, but no before practically every student in the University had solved the problem many different ways for them.

With the rationing of sugar, coffee, and gasoline proving to be the greater extent successful, everyone began thinking about clothes. There had been a huge Christmas rush, unusual really because we are at war, but the post-holiday rush was "out of this world."

Of course, we all see the necessity of rationing leather and when we began thinking seriously about being allowed only three pairs of shoes in accordance with the new rationing program we realized that we didn't really need any more than that. The only problem was that there was a little rumor being tossed around even before the rationing went into effect. Shoe stores never had as much business.

As for the clothes rationing rumor, that was duly "stomped" upon when Sunday's Herald-Leader presented a full page explaining why rumors must stop. There was little bass to the clothes rumor. Nevertheless, stores were packed with hysterical customers who feared that they would not have enough clothes next winter to keep them warm or they couldn't have their customary Easter outfit. There was Lexington's Bluegrass Day when the stores made special offers to attract trade. It was a "hey-day" for customers, but it wasn't, Bluegrass Day ever since.

Now we're hearing that the dormitory girls will be moved into the vacated (after the majority of men leave) fraternity houses and that the University will rent the dormitories to the government for the housing of the additional soldiers who will be trained here. All well and good. It might happen, but in every conversation one finds a solution to the problem.

Along with this last word was the rumor that the quarter would be shortened so as to give University officials time to move the dorm women out and prepare for the entry of the service men. There is no basis for this, either. Does it seem likely that this late in the quarter such a change would be logical?

It all boils down to this. Why not let the University officials solve their problems. They are here to help us and to see that we are taken care of. We are only interfering where we are not needed.

Yes, we are the American government and we are the University. But let's do our own work and let our officials have a free hand to do theirs.—AW

JIMMY JAMES CONTRACTED FOR MARCH 12th PROM

To be able to satisfy all the public—and if not, then at least 51 percent of it—That sums up the ambition of Jimmy James, whose band journeyed down from Cincinnati next March 12 to play for our listening and dancing pleasure at the Junior-Senior Prom.

Several attempts were made by Ed Barnes, Pat Conley, and other students in charge of all the arrangements for this dance, to procure a really big-name band but due to the "No Six's" received from one of the big-wigs on the campus their attempts were futile. However, they were able to hook a less-known band for the Prom. The main reason for our not having an orchestra of a higher price bracket was the dropping of a number of students in the last two weeks because of the Air Corps but then again, there were enough students backing the committee to "throw a big one."

JAMES has been a member of the WLV staff since 1935, quitting a business career in other people's orchestras to start one of his own. There was Hal Kemp's band, for instance, with which he toured all the famous continental music halls and dining rooms of Europe in 1930. In the ranks also were John Scott Todd and Shamus Egan, who likewise were able to organize their own bands later on.

In addition to having been a member of the fine Kemp orchestra, JAMES has played clarinet and sax with Henry Bruce, Horace Hood and others. His arrangements of nursery rhymes in modern fashion are an outstanding innovation at WLV.

JAMES first went on the road with an orchestra at the age of 15. He moved into the big time after becoming 18 as a member of Henry This orchestra, then what Dorsey was given a fluke but didn't like it and passed it on to Jimmy. Next logical step from that was the clarinet, which Jimmy mastered after the flute got too easy.

In Which We May Serve

When the students of the University responded so well to the War Chest campaign, they did so with the firm impression that there would not be another such drive on the campus.

Now that they are being asked to contribute to the Red Cross, they feel that the promise of "no other drive" is being broken. That is not exactly true, because a drive brings to the mind the idea of high-pressure salesmanship, the "give-it-it-it" technique, the thought that you are not all you should be if you don't contribute.

In this instance, there is no high-pressure, and no frenzied pleas for the pennies you have saved to buy your spring shoes. All that is being done is appointing students in various organized houses and residence halls, so that you may have the opportunity to make your contributions in the most convenient manner.

The persons who are to take the contributions are not going into a song and dance to try to get donations. For the Red Cross there is no need for that.

Every one knows what the Red Cross does to alleviate the suffering of the people on the battle front, what it does for the recreational activities for men who are far away from home, living under an entirely different environment; how it strives to aid and succeed in getting food and medical supplies to starving people in conquered nations; how it manages to get messages from home to men in prison camps.

Other organizations are of invaluable aid to this nation and her allies, but the Red Cross is the one that goes to the front with the men who are fighting.

Those of you who went to see "I Married a Witch" this week probably remember the short on the services of the Red Cross, in which fighting or interned men were high in their praises of the organization. The submarine sailor who appreciated the lodging, food, and recreation provided when the men come in from a long sea of scouting duty; the fighting man from Guadalcanal who, through the help of the Red Cross, finally received word of his wife and new son; the correspondent who was kept in an internment camp and who was able to have books and small services provided by the Red Cross.

All these things, and many more, are the aims of the Red Cross. It is a worthy organization to which to contribute if you feel that you can possibly do so.

For the men who are going into the service, it will bring back value manifold; for the women who are remaining at home, it will be the feeling that you are helping someone you love.—P.S.

The Land Of Three Climates

"In no other country can one find three such different climates as in Peru," said Dr. Alberto Arca Parro, director of the Bureau of Statistics in Peru, speaking in the interest of the Committee of Inter-American Affairs. "One can eat breakfast at sea level, eat lunch at an altitude of 15,000 feet, and have supper in the jungle—travelling by motor car." Dr. Parro said, distributed that 1,000,000 plants were shown that grow in the country.

Dr. Parro described the transporting of rubber from South America to the Orient, where they were cultivated, and how the development of quinine as a medicine started in Peru.

The wife of a story became ill with malaria, the story goes, said Dr. Parro, and the native Indians persuaded the sick woman to take some of the brew that they boiled from the bark of the cinchona tree.

After her recovery, the story's wife returned to Europe with the seeds of this plant and the production of quinine for medicinal purposes started in Europe. It was not until some time later that the Peruvians realized their economic loss.

However, Dr. Parro explained the South Americans have compensated for their losses, because they in turn "borrowed" the art of tea-planting from the Orient. The last report, Dr. Parro said, showed that 1,000,000 plants were distributed that grow in the country.

Football is one of the favorite sports in Peru. Dr. Parro continued. He added that the Peruvians really play football—they call it English football—because the hands never touch the ball. International football is played and the university teams often travel to Argentina and Chile. There is frequently a crowd of 40,000-50,000 persons attending these contests.

Not overhauled in popularity a basketball. In 1934, Peru sent a team to the Olympic Meet in Germany where they were victorious over the Australian team. The role that sports have played in the lives of the Peruvian people has been of great importance, said Dr. Parro. —Indiana Daily Student.

I Am A Teacher

Editor's Note: The following is a reprint from the March, 1943, issue of the Journal of the National Education Association.

I am a teacher who left teaching last spring to get a job in Washington. As I stepped from the train at Union Station and as I walked through the depot, where I was seeing more tired people than in any other place in the world, I believed the "heart of the nation—where I can really do something to help things along." When I closed my books and locked my classroom on the Ohio river's finest excursion steamer, the Island Queen, which had a capacity crowd each night. Everywhere along the Ohio from Cincinnati to Louisville, people danced to the fine music put forth by the JAMES organization.

The Prom is one week from today, the 12th. You may purchase your bits at the Information Desk of the lobby of the Student Union. I don't think it'll hurt any fellow on this campus to put forth to see a fine band like JIMMY JAMES, who will be the last one held here on the campus for students for the duration of this war. I hope I'll see YOU there on the 12th.

Lend-Lease Of Food

Although lend-lease shipments of both food and munitions are of great aid to the Allies, they have not been a true cause of pending food shortages here, according to the O.W.I. The food shipments that are made to us are of the O.W.I. The food shipments that are made to us are of the O.W.I. The food shipments that are made to us are of the O.W.I.

Of the five meats soon to be rationed, beef, veal, lamb, mutton, and pork, the fattest pounds exported under lend-lease made up only 5 percent of the total United States supply.

Lend-lease exports of butter were less than 1 percent of the total supply. Out of every six pounds of butter less than one ounce went under lend-lease. The Russian army received almost all of this.

—Indiana Daily Student

For a sorrow-faced enlisted to serve to act like his call to duty is some great sacrifice—cheapest the red bravery of troops spending in muddy clothes for months on end, facing death every day.

Lip-sticked, sorely girls, bearing the fact that their puny is going away are ludicrous when you read about the millions of Russian women bombed out of their homes and driven to the back lines with no family, no possessions, and no hope whatsoever.

We know that the local boys and girls are not sissies and that they have enough sense to realize that the soft life they have had so far is considerably more than they deserve in the face of what others have had to go through.

We only wish that the Look-At-Poor-Little-Brave-Little-Me boys the girls are so ready to sympathize and that this tin-horn heroism, and realize that what they're doing is no more—and a hell of a lot less—than most other men of their age are doing.

Launching 63,000 Telephone calls

It has been estimated that 63,000 telephone calls are necessary in the building of one 10,000-ton cargo ship. And America is sending these vessels down the ways by the hundreds.

We cannot build additional facilities because materials for telephone equipment are going into war weapons. Yet today the men and women of the Bell System are handling more telephone calls than ever before—about 90 million conversations a day. It's an important wartime job. It will continue to be done well.

After long absence we resume this corner about where we left off with an apology for our sudden digression.

Have you heard the sighs of appreciation when the B.M.O.C. comes whizzing by in his sleek coupable, grinding around corners, balanced perilously on one wheel?

After long absence we resume this corner about where we left off with an apology for our sudden digression. The explanation is a very hazy one composed of train rides home, etc., but let's forget them and begin again.

The Sporting Way

By BAXTER MELTON

Kentucky a hot spot for basketball officials? Heck no. Alumni gym is no worse than any other place...

When a cage fan passes his admission to a tilt, that ticket carries with it the right to verbally approve or disapprove any decisions...

Every night, from mid-December through March, the Cumberland college graduate can be seen calling 'em at some net battle...

With a background like this Chest should bear listening to on basketball's outlook, and he is very enthusiastic in insisting that "Southern basketball is coming to the front."

Chest himself is a rabid basketball fan, thinks there's nothing like the hardwood game. At Cumberland he was a member of the varsity team.

In Tahan's case the situation is somewhat different. The Cincinnati official is the hated guy at three different sports—basketball, football, and baseball.

During the football campaign he appears mostly in the middle-west, particularly in Ohio. Ohio University, Miami, the University of Cincinnati and other schools of that region call on him frequently.

In the basketball whirl he goes no farther than Atlanta. He was at one Kentucky high school state hoop meet and may be present for this year's prep wind-up.

'Cats Play Great Lakes In Season's Last Game

Big Blue Journeys To Armory Again To End Activity

By Baxter Melton

For the first time during the current season, Kentucky's net squad will enter the tilt as the underdog...

The Bluejackets, who have won 23 and lost only two, are considered by most cage enthusiasts as the country's top hardwood outfit.

The setting for this year's Great-Lakes-Kentucky clash will be the same, but the side lights will be somewhat different.

The Bluejackets achieved a 38-47 triumph without too much trouble. This year the Ruppmen are meeting the mariners a week after the SEC meet...

Chances are that Kentucky will enter the fray in much better physical condition than in defense of the title last year.

Though Mel Brewer's arm is still "not what it oughta be," it is much better than it was last year.

The season record now reads 14 and four for Rupp's Riveters. The boys plan to make it 15 against the Great Lakes basketers.

Although these three netters are the only seniors, chances are that most of the others will be making their last showing in a Kentucky uniform for a while—how long, of course, no one knows.

It's hard to pick out the outstanding player on a squad made up of former All-Americans complemented by a host of other standouts.

However, Eddie Riska, ex-Notre Dame great, is probably best known to most fans.

While the 'Cats were relinquishing their SEC diadem in Louisville last Saturday night, the Jackets were toting mighty Minnesota, 46-41, in an overtime.

But Darling that red head really was my cousin from Vicksburg. "I'll be a minute, officer."

"I don't need to study for that test."

CAT FENCERS TRY FOR THIRD WIN OF SEASON

Swordsmen Meet Georgia Tech Here Saturday

Kentucky's fencers, who defeated the University of Cincinnati, 9-7, last week-end, will be trying for their third win of the season when they meet the Georgia Tech swordsmen in a return match in Alumni gym Saturday.

The Wildcats will have the advantage of covorting on their home grounds and should be at their best when the two teams meet.

Should they defeat the Yellow Jackets, the 'Cats will complete one of their most successful fencing seasons in several years.

The Alpha Gamma Rho netmen let go with both barrels Wednesday night at Alumni gym when they won both the A and B League crowns in the Intramural Basketball tournament finals.

The K Club, who lost only two regular season tilts, beat the Western Thorobreds in the finals to take the Independent League diadem.

A determined last-half drive proved the deciding factor in AGR's triumph over PKT in League A.

With the score knotted at 12-12 during intermission, the Ag boys turned on in the second period and pulled away to a 27-24 victory.

The K Club started like a depot store in the Independent finals and led the Western Thorobreds, who were defeated only once during regular season play, 18-6, at the half.

The Thorobreds made a desperate last period drive, but were unable to halt the torrid K Club netmen.

The 'Breds were outscored, 19-14, in the final half, and the cooler read 27-20 at the finish.

After leading 12-4 at the half, the SAE's went on to take PPT in tow 26-12 in the loop C finale.
