TO CONTROL OR NOT TO CONTROL

A large majority of the measures enacted by the Kentucky state legislature affect us directly as young citizens of the Commonwealth, and one which especially does so is the Substitute Liquor Control Bill which was approved by the house a few days ago.

The National Prohibition amendment has been a thing of the past for some months now and since Kentucky voted overwhelmingly in ratifying the twenty-first amendment, the question before us now is not whether or not we shall have liquor, but the manner in which the dispensing of them is to be controlled.

This substitute measure, described by Prof. Forrest R. Black, of our Law college, is a prize winning among legal legislative proposals, would permit the sale of liquor by the glass with meals at hotels, restaurants and clubs, and in packages at licensed stores. The tax to be levied would be five cents a gallon on the manufacture of distillery spirits and of ten cents a gallon the manufacture of rectified liquor.

For years a fight was waged against the saloons; then came prohibition. Immediately the struggle began to repeal the eighteenth amendment and as the evils of the Volstead Act became more and more apparent, the wets at last achieved their goal. Now instead of sensible control legislation we give the pendulum a big push toward the position from which it swung in pre-war days.

As many evils as the Volstead Act accompanied, it is extremely doubtful whether conditions were as bad as in the saloon days. Even though we are aware of the fact that men and women for many years have drunk alcohol that was hardly fit for an ingredient of a good lacquer, and that racketeers collected the revenue that should have been going into the coffers of the government, we still doubt if these were worse than the ill effects, both morally and politically, of the old saloons. And legislation such as the substitute liquor bill is one of the longest steps that could be taken toward that greatest of evils, the saloon.

Study the causes of the flagrant abuses connected with the old saloon and you will discover that it was the inability to divorce beer and wine, and hard liquor which made reform impossible. The American people have indicated quite plainly that they are going to have their drinks whether or no, but there is no earthly reason why the lighter drinks and hard liquors should not be separated. It has been found in every incident where it has been tried that the results are infinitely more gratifying if beer and wine are publicly dispensed with meals, while whiskey and other hard liquors are sold only in packages that must be opened at home or other private places. No one denies that temperance, intelligently controlled action, is the thing desired in drinking as well as in most anything else and this can be in no manner be achieved if hard liquor is to be sold at every "hot dog" stand. (This is no exaggeration for any place where food is sold may be licensed to sell liquor.)

Young Americans never have drunk anything that tasted palatable, and if they have drunk at all it has been for the purpose of reaching some stage of inebriation, while Europeans looked on with raised eyebrows at the "barbarians." Now that we are to have legally a good quality of drink, steps should be taken to avert the people to intelligent action in exercising some judgment in temperance and developing their tastes accordingly. Making whiskey almost as easy to get as Coca Cola can not possibly do this.

There is some doubt as to whether this substitute bill constitutionally can repeal the Rash-Gullion state enforcement act, that will be decided by the State Supreme Court, but it seems certain that it is a step in the wrong direction for liquor control.

A LIBRARY OR—

With the recent gift of several valuable papers, manuscripts and a copy of the American Almanac of 1844, by a graduate of the University, attention is called to the fact that students neglect a valuable part of the University library. It will be the purpose of this article to call to the attention of the students the opportunity that they are missing in not perusing these valuable old manuscripts and papers.

For the most part, the student body does not appreciate the intellectual aspects of the library. They do not read these broadening assignments but rather to call to the attention of the students the opportunity that they are missing in not perusing these valuable old manuscripts and papers.

For the most part, the student body does not appreciate the intellectual aspects of the library. They do not read these broadening assignments but rather to call to the attention of the students the opportunity that they are missing in not perusing these valuable old manuscripts and papers.

Then there is the group of collegians, we will not use "students" here, who make use of the library to study alone but if he sees his fellows pursuing the same occupation it is easier for him to do likewise.

Never a thought to the valuable material within an arm's reach? We urge the students to take full advantage of the opportunity afforded them and at least to glance over these valuable volumes. The University library contains thousands of books, each of which will aid the student in broadening his intellect and which will give him much mental enjoyment. Take a few moments of some day and prove to yourself that the library is really a library and not a place to pass away idle minutes.

Jest Among Us

And then there was the freshman who didn't go to hear Doctor Meng at convocation because he "can't understand a word of Chinese."

We must hasten to advise certain individuals that National Y.W.C.A. leader, Miss Odoosh Burner is not the daughter of a Swiss yodeler.

Although electricity is constantly replacing man-power, science has not yet perfected a mechanical substitute that possesses the attributes of our good friend, the ice-man.

Guste says: "If wishes were horses, wouldn't the restaurant owners be in luck?"

Not since the last election have we been extended so extreme courtesy as we now receive from rival company bus drivers.

If it is true that the greatest men are notorious for their poor hand writing, we find that we have nothing to worry about after all.

Book Reviews
 The Mother by Pearl Buck, published by John Day. Again the author of "The Good Earth" has written a tale of Chinese life and customs that is destined to add much to her prestige as a writer. It's quiet simplicity and tense, yet deeply moving, style is the outstanding characteristic of this, as it was also of the author's other books. This, however, is not a sequel of the "Good Earth" series.

It is the story of a woman who was before all else a mother. Deserted by her husband, left alone to earn enough to keep herself and children alive, finally growing old and looked upon with contempt, she still can say as she holds her grandchild in her arms, "I guess my sin wasn't so great after all. Again I have a child in my arms."

The author's knowledge of Chinese life, especially of the poorer class, is extraordinarily accurate. Numerous critics have marveled that one not born a Chinese peasant should be able to depict their life so completely and realistically.

OLD ATTICES
 An old attic with its stillness, Remains of time and chance, With its dreary, oak-webbed ceiling Has something of romance.

For surely there's a story too Within that shabby chest, Sweet remnants of a trousseau dear Old lace once on the best.

Little rosebuds now all wilted Where tucked on silk 'just so', A bunch of faded violets Still tied up with a bow.

Each queer old object once so dear Some secret charm now lends, Though old and dusty, to my heart A thrill of romance sends.

MIDNIGHT SOLILOQUIES
 When I bemoan the deathless stars
 That burn their way through endless space,
 I see another, finer world,
 Than that bequeathed by our race.

A world of order, truth, and light,
 And see the limpid reason all enthroned;
 Where justice with her sword so bright,
 Does peace divine, her mistress own.

Or when I contemplate a leaf,
 And see the matchless skill and might
 That here does live, and breathe,
 and beat.

With skill divine, I see a light.
 To know the working of the winds,
 That blow us round of life the strand,
 Is still to know that nature's plans
 Ne'er run amuck, but that it's man's!

Oh Man, that has been given the right
 To all this world, what would you find,
 If only with an eager step,
 You would pursue an open mind.

But you must follow mad chaos,
 And embrace folly, sin alone;
 You blindly chase the phantom
 wealth,
 And yield your reason to a stone.

Oh now I know I needs must seek,
 My fancy world in other bends
 'Twill not be found in mad world's week.
 I'll hope to find it in my friends.

One again the annual state high school basketball tournament is at hand. The 16 teams which have successfully gone through district and regional tournaments will battle for three days in the basketball building to decide the champion of Kentucky. As in college play, perhaps, the tournament is not the most successful way of determining a champion; but it is far more fair in scholastic athletics than in the institutions of higher learning.

Not all the outstanding teams in the state were able to reach the state meet, but there are several teams entered whose records for the past season are very impressive. Corinth, Hazel Green, Hazard, Paris, Ashland, Danville and Horse Cave, who were present last year, are back again. Ashland, with practically the same team, is the favorite in pre-tourney odds. However, one of the other teams may present an upset. The rest of the teams are: Lexington, who has won four championships in other years; Highlands of Fort Thomas; Ives, Dupont Manual, state champs in 1931, and also winner of four state crowns; Sacramento, Bardwell, Calvert City, Central City and Tompkinsville.

GREEK CONCLAVE SPEAKER NAMED

Dr. F. W. Shephardson, Who Was Principal Speaker Last Year, Accepts Interfraternity Council's Invitation

Word has been received by the Interfraternity council from Dr. Francis W. Shephardson, Granville, Ohio, national president of Beta Theta Pi, that he has accepted their invitation to be the principal speaker at the annual Greek Conclave to be held here April 29. Besides being president of Beta Theta Pi, Doctor Shephardson is president of the American Association of College Honor Societies, editor of Baird's "Manual" and "Banta's Greek Exchange," and is one of the oldest senators Phi Beta Kappa. He is considered the "dean" of the fraternity world. An invitation also has been sent to Dean William L. Saunders, dean of men at Ohio Wesleyan university, who was the principal speaker here last year, but no reply has been received from him.

Y.W. Social Service Groups Will Meet 3 p. m. Wednesday

Members of the Social Service committee of the YWCA will meet at 3:30 p. m. Wednesday at the Women's building before leaving for a swimming party at Margaret Hall, Versailles. All girls planning to go are asked to notify Rebecca Dudley or the YWCA office in the Women's building today. Virginia Freeberg, leader of the Book Hobby group, was the guest speaker at a waffle supper given Monday night at the Women's building. She talked on outstanding books which should be read by college women. Among those given special emphasis were "The Autobiography of Lincoln Stephens," "Anthony Adverse," by Hervey Allen, and "Intelligent Women's Guide to Socialism and Capitalism," by George Bernard Shaw. Marquette Goodfriend presided over the meeting and introduced the speaker.

U. OF C. PROF WILL SPEAK

Prof. George Heder, head of the Department of History at University of Cincinnati, will address the social science faculty of the University on "The Experience of University of Cincinnati with the Orientation Course" at a luncheon meeting Saturday, March 24.

"WHEN A FELLER NEEDS A FRIEND"

If you're forced to go choline in the interests of art, let a pipeful of BRIGGS restore masculine poise. BRIGGS Pipe Mixture has a rare and Rabelaisian gusto that's tempered by long aging 'til it's genial, mellow, biteless. When a feller needs a friend there's no blend like BRIGGS.

Not like others..

Even so.. you can say Chesterfields are "not like others"

NO two people in the world look alike... act alike. So it is with tobacco... just like folks. No two leaves are the same. And it's the same with cigarettes... no two brands are alike. Furthermore, not only are the tobaccos different, but the way the tobaccos are handled is different. This, you can understand. You know just as well as we do that no two manufacturers use the same kinds of tobaccos, or blend them or cross-blend them or weld them together in the same manner. We do everything that science knows and that money can buy to make CHESTERFIELD as good a cigarette as can be made. We hope you like them. They are "not like others."
