Moving day is on the way

By Alison Kight and Brenna Reilly Staff Writers

Students living in residence halls who think they may have to study 24 hours a day for the next week might find themselves in trouble when they finish their last final.

According to the Office of Residence Life, rooms must be emptied and vacated on the day of a students' last final because of contract expiration, which means a fair amount of cleaning up and packing must be done along with last-minute cramming.

The Residence Halls will officially close at 6 p.m. on Friday, May 5, for all students who are not graduating or moving to Haggin for the four week inters-

"I am able to do it in spurts," said White, a Blanding III resi-dent, "I take stuff home a couple of weeks beforehand."

Although students must be out 24 hours after their last

"I don't stay around too long after finals," White said.

Check in for summer housing at Haggin Hall begins at 2 p.m. on May 7 and all other halls will close completely at 5 p.m.

Students who are checking out have two options. They may schedule an appointment with their resident adviser for a final checkout and inspection or use the express check-out method. the express check-out method.

Students using the express method will receive a key enve-lope to fill out and place keys in, and will not have to have an RA check their room before they leave, but rooms will be inspected later without occupants being present.

A checklist will be provided for students to complete before leaving for summer break.

Students are asked to clean rooms completely (i.e. dust, empty trash, sweep or vacuum and remove tape and other for-eign objects from walls.) Lights must be turned off and shades pulled down. Windows and doors also must be locked.

Students are asked to leave their forwarding addresses at the front desk, and mail will be forwarded through August. Magazines will not be forwarded.

Belongings must be removed from storage or they will be thrown away prior to the opening of the hall for the fall

But if they cannot have a whole week free from all classes and homework, a reading period may be the next best thing.

The proposed reading period will mean two days with no class-es or homework. The Thursday and Friday before finals would be the two designated free days.

Students could use the time

Students could use the time for studying and finishing projects or other assignments.

The SGA academic rights committee has been working on the project since last summer.

The committee has looked into other universities around the country who have implemented similar programs. They also polled professors and administrators for their opinions. A referendum was placed on the spring elections ballot on the issues, and was favored by nearly 90 percent of voters. 90 percent of voters.
"We hope that students would withdrawal from classes for the fall semester. This would give students a chance to review their grades and decide whether they should stay in class.

This proposal was also sent to a referendum and supported near unanimously.

"I support it because it is hard enough to study for finals in one week," Jennifer Pike, a dietetics junior, said. "Students need extra

Ali Amoli, co-chair of SGA's academic rights committee, said, "We go 12 weeks without a break. We need one."

With a midterm break, the first day of each semester's classes would start on Monday instead of Wednesday, Amoli said. The benefits of a break in the fall semester include a higher retention rate and a lower level of stress, he said. "We still have an extra long period of school without any break at all," Amoli said. "A break would be academically and psychologically beneficial." In the research found by the committee, the suicide rate at the University of Illinois decreased with the implementation of a midterm break. This may show the relationship between stress and academic relief.

Hennel said students get burnt out on school early in the semester when they go without any break, and she and Amoli believe the reading period vould result in higher grades. "From the research we have done, the benefits have been proven in other universities"

Amoli said.

The midterm break is not a new idea, however. In previous years, the break has been proposed to be an extended Thanksgiving holiday where students get the whole week off. Each of those proposals was voted down by the University Senate, howev-

The midterm break, as well as The midterm break, as well as the reading period, would help faculty too, Amoli said, because they would have the opportunity to catch up on grading and preparing lectures.

The proposals will not be complete until fall.

"By the new calendar year they should be working inside," Willis said.

The library will exceed the Chemistry/Physics Building as the largest structure on campus. Spread across 351,350 square feet on five floors and a basement level, the facility will need another year and a half of construction before it opens in the spring semester of 1997.

Inside the building, 37 miles of shelving will hold about 1.2 million volumes of books and periodicals resting within a methodically-designed facility.

The construction's $58 million price tag is driving the construction process at full speed.

Already, crews have begun pouring concrete into the hole that now replaces the former Clifton now replaces the former Clifton Circle area. "There will be a lot of steel

Derby race anyone's call

By Brian Bennett

After analyzing the racing After analyzing the racing form, studying past perfor-mances, pouring over the pedi-grees and charting trainers and jockeys, you might be left with one conclusion in picking Satur-day's Kentucky Derby winner:

Bet the name.
With such a wide-open, even-ly-matched field in the 121st Run ly-matched field in the 12 Ist Run for the Roses, it's difficult to single out a favorite. Even the experts are having trouble.

"Every horse you can think of, there's a hole in them somewhere," says handicapper Dan Liebman, "which makes for an interesting Derby."

"It's hard to predict what they're going to do because you don't really know how good they are," said Steve Haskin of The Daily Racing Form.

A handful of horses seem to be a notch above the rest, but even a notch above the rest, but even those thoroughbreds have some-thing going against them. Probably the top early choice is Canadian-bred Talkin Man. He won both the Gotham Stakes and Wood Memorial in impressive fashion, and has finished first in four of his past five starts. But the knock on this colt is that he hasn't faced much competition.

"Despite that, I still like him," said Liebman, research director of The Blood-Horse magazine. "He won the Gotham off the pace and he won the Wood on the pace, so he showed some versatility. He's a real docile kind of horse. He reminds me of (1990 Derby winner) Unbridled."

the same track where he won the Juvenile in November.
"He's a totally different horse on this track," Haskin said. "It's obvious just watching him gallop here. If he continues to improve, he'll be a strong contender."
Another Lukas-trained horse has caught the eyes of many: filly Serena's Song. A winner of her past five, including the Jim Beam Stakes, she would be one of the speediest in the race if she enters. "She definitely would have a

"I don't think that race was a fluke," Haskin said. "He's a better horse than people think."

And don't forget Arkansas Derby winner Dazzling Falls. Or Suave Prospect, trained by Nick Zito, winner of two Derbys this decade. There's also Eltish, another British colt who finished second in the Iuvenile. second in the Juvenile.
Whew.

So how do you pick the win-

"It all depends on the workouts," Haskin said. "I've never seen a Derby winner that didn't rain sensationally on this track.

"You can look at the racing form and the pedigrees all you want, but you're still going to come up with a clouded picture. The only thing you can do is look at which horse is ready to go on this track."

Or bet the name.

IN THE HUNT From right, Wild Syn, Suave Prospect, Tejano Run and Thunder Gulch take off for last month's Blue Grass Stakes at Keeneland. All four horses are possible entrants for Saturday's Kentucky Derby.

Possible Derby Field

Horses	Trainers	Lifetime	Pros	Cons
Talkin Man	Roger Attfield	8-5-1-0	Probably the early favorite after impressive wins in the Gotham Stakes and Wood Memorial, where he showed the ability to win from behind or out in front.	Has faced little competition so far, except in last year's Breeders Cup Juvenile, where he failed to finish in the money.
Serena's Song	D. Wayne Lukas	14-8-2-1	If Lukas decides to run his filly, she could be a contender. Won last five races, including Jim Beam Stakes at Turfway.	Can the filly compete with the colts for the whole mile and a sixteenth?
Jumron	Gary Lewis	8-5-2-1	Dominant in Great Britain, he finished third in a strong Santa Anita Derby field.	European horses have historically been busts in the Run for the Roses (see Arazi).
Timber Country	D. Wayne Lukas	10-4-1-3	Terrific as a 2-year-old, winning four races, including the Breeders Cup Juvenile at Churchill Downs.	Has yet to win as a 3-year-old. All three of his starts this year have been on the West Coast; a return to Churchill might be what the doctor ordered.
Tejano Run	Kenny G. McPeek	8-3-2-2	Won three times as a 2-year-old and has shown consistent improvement.	Finished third in the Blue Grass Stakes a Keeneland last month. Will train at Keeneland rather than Churchill
Afternoon Deelites	Richard Mandella	6-5-1-0	The West Coast's best shot, with his only lifetime loss coming to the injured Larry the Legend in the Santa Anita Derby.	Questionable dosage makes one wonder if this colt can go the distance.
Suave Prospect	Nick Zito	14-4-6-1	Finished second in both the Florida Derby and Blue Grass Stakes, and the irrepressible Zito always gears up for the first Saturday in May.	Again poor dosage, and the question of whether this horse is always a bridesmaid, never the bride.
Dazzling Falls	Chuck Turco	12-6-3-2	Won last weekend's Arkansas Derby, the same race that produced 1992 Derby winner Lil E. Tee. In the money all but one race.	Low dosage index, lack of high-quality competition.
Thunder Gulch	D. Wayne Lukas	9-4-2-1	Took the Florida Derby and Fountain of Youth at Gulfstream, showing heart in edging out Suave Prospect in both wins.	Disastrous showing as the favorite in the Blue Grass Stakes cost him public favor.
Wild Syn	Thomas Arnemann	6-3-0-1	Surprised all as the longshot winner of the Blue Grass Stakes. Impressive finish in that race.	Slow pace in the Blue Grass for a speed horse. Was it a fluke win?
Pyramid Peak	John T. Ward	5-4-0-1	Won the Flamingo at Hiawatha a month ago, has finished in the money every start.	The month-long layoff hurts, as does the fact he may be a bit outclassed by the rest of the field.
Eltish	Henry Cecil	6-3-2-1	Won three of four in Great Britain, and finished second to Timber Country in the Juvenile.	Hasn't raced since November.
Ski Captain	Hideyuki More	4-3-2-1	This Kentucky-bred horse has been raced exclusively in Japan, where he's dominated.	Last competed in February, and the trip from Japan figures to be a success only in international relations.

ASHLAND, Ky. — An 81-year-old Ashland Community College student has become the second-oldest collegian ever enrolled in Phi Theta Kappa, the national honor society for com-

Wallace Adkins, reared fatherless in the coalfields and a veteran of the Great Depression and World War II, resumed his education two years ago after the death of his wife, Billie. He earned his GED and is now on the honor roll at ACC.

Adkins quit high school after his junior year to work in a grocery store in his hometown of Williamson, W.Va.

"I had been working mornings and manings but the ground and the school and the school and the school are school and the school and the school and the school are school and the school are school and the school are school are school as the school after t and evenings, but the grocer told me I'd have to be full-time to keep the job," he said.

His mother couldn't encourage him to stay in school — the family needed the money. Later he hit the road as a salesman for Armour Meats, for which he worked from 1931 to 1977. That career was interrupted by Army service in the war. Adkins also moonlighted for five years oper-ating a mom-and-pop store.

Army service, his natural curiosity and a pene' nt for reading provided a solic sis for continuing his formal education. He is a veritable encyclopedia on Appalachian culture, ranging from the coal economy to unionism to the environment.

After retirement, he bought a farm on Mill Creek in Wayne County, W.Va., where he renovated one of the two houses and gave the other to a daughter. What he wants to do now is go to law school some four or five years down the line, if he can first nail down a four-year degree through Morehead State's Ash-land Center. Small, wiry and constantly talking, Adkins seems younger than his years. Charlie Howes, an ACC biol-

"He sat up there on the front row and took in everything," Howes said.

"He always had some interest-

"He always had some interesting thing to say, particularly about folk remedies, the things old-time people would do," Howes said.

In history classes, Adkins offered personal insight into World War II, which is getting particular scrutiny these days as the 50th anniversary of its end approaches. As an Army medical corpsman, he helped liberate the concentration camp at Dachau in

"I could smell it 10 miles away, but I didn't know what that terrible odor was until we got there. The combat troops came in and went out, but as medical personnel we had to stay. I saw the most terrible things you could imagine, and I have no desire on earth to go back there now." now

He says college today is about the level high school was when he left, "except for biology, with cells and genes. We didn't have all that. The other courses I can handle."

Still, he blames himself for imperfection. "I think I ought to score 100 on every test."

Adkins said young people in his classes have helped him "and I hope I helped them, too.

The completion of several years' hard work. For there is an emphasis on several production.

I wish I could say that I am graduating, but alas another May has arrived, and it will pass leaving me still a member of the young and the degreeless.

My status as a professional undergraduate is somewhat of a joke among my family members. "College was the best nine years of my life," glares at me every morning from a mug my mother gave me for Christmas.
Of course, since she is graduating after returning to school only four years ago, this gift was a perfect expression of her true sentiment: "Na-na-na-na, I'm a timent: "Na-na-na-na, I in a better student than you are." And I would reply to that statement of gloat with, well I did a lot more than just skip class, Mom. I worked for the Kernel, I explored various majors (and expiored various majors (and minors), I held off-campus jobs and on and on ...," but then she would just smile. For she has carved a pedestal for herself out of the malleble clay of the col-

As a housemother for Lambda Chi Alpha, her caring support and down-to-earth attitude led the Interfraternity Council to the Interfraternity Council to select her as Housemother of the Year. She's also maintained a near-perfect GPA while pursuing her nursing degree. This is quite a rub for me—"Yeah, my mom gets better grades than me."

As if that weren't enough, she has also made quite a name for herself in the Student Government Association as a senator.

Being in the campus news business, I recall countless times after SGA meetings when members would come up and pat me on the back saying, "That's some bers would come up and pat me on the back saying, "That's some mom you've got there, Perry."

I beam proudly when I hear these things, believe me, I love the unusual, the obscure, life's little oddities. I seek them out.

But it is strange to go

But it is strange to to school with your mother. She hears about those er. She hears about those little things that most parents (and their children) are spared. If I went a week without went a week without or some SGA senator would fill her in on my week. My answering machine would be filled with such messages as "I heard you were driving some boy's car last week, did you cut your hair and why weren't you in class yesterday?"

Although she is graduating, I

Although she is graduating, I am the one leaving. In the fall, she will begin graduate school, and I will be off in some exotic city working as an intern. GTE and the rest of my family will be her only source of gossip, but I promise to keep in touch until I promise to keep in touch until I return in the spring to actually get the sheepskin.

It's been a unique experience, going to school with Mom. I'm going to miss it, but I'll always remember my college years as the years my mother validified her favorite saying: "Where there's a will, there's a way."

Several movies coming to the Kentucky Theater carry the whiff of romance, and in many cases opulence. Films like "Little Women" and "The Madness of King George" are surfacing on the reels, representing a trend in the industry toward grandiose themes and grand costumes.

The trend heightens the escapism experienced by most movie-goers; movies that are romantic and opulent seem to take people to other worlds.

Kentucky Theater manager Fred Mills said the trend in romance in major film companies probably started around the release of "Sleepless in Seattle" two years ago, when moviegoers were whisked to the top of the Empire State Building a la "An Affair To Remember."

Telecommunications junior Adam Recktenwald aspires to be a filmmaker. There is seldom a weekend when he doesn't visit the Kentucky Theater.

"I don't really see (the trend) as a comeback," he said. "I think companies are getting funds to do that sort of thing," Recktenwald believes, though, that the finery shouldn't necessarily make the film.

"It depends on who uses it. It's important that the filmmaker realizes you shouldn't rely on them," he said. "If you let the story be the story and the set be the set, you'll make a much better film."

Smaller, independent companies, as their films grow in popularity, are getting more funding. Fine Line Features, producer of "Death and the Maiden" and "Hoop Dreams," may be moving to add more visual elements of romance.

Science says that the universe and everything in it goes through birth and death. If there is a birth of any kind, simple logic would show there must be both a mother and a father of some kind involved. Make sure all parts of your life have both the paternal qualities of left brain impersonal truth and the maternal qualities of right brain interpersonal wisdom to be a success. If you don't, failure will be guaranteed.

Nowhere in the history of this planet is there an example of where only the left wing or only the right wing has been successful in running a government. How can we think the present is any different. Would Rush Limbaugh or Newt Gingrich dare try to fly somewhere on an airplane with only a right wing? If our government doesn't use the best of both the left and right, we should elect another. If President Clinton doesn't learn a head of state must use common sense with both truth and wisdom, then Dole or some other republican will after November 1996.

Summer school

It's not just for those who fail anymore

By Alison Kight

If students find themselves behind in credit hours or simply want to get ahead, there is another option besides taking 21 hours a semester during the fall and spring-summer school.

Students have the choice between a four-week intersession in which classes meet every weekday and an eight-week intersession in which meeting times for class vary.

Students can attend summer classes at UK and community colleges around the state. Last year, approximately 2,450 students attended the four-week intersession at community colleges and 2,957 students attended at UK's main campus. More than 12,000 students attended the eight-week intersession at community colleges and 5,532 students attended at UK's main campus. Students who wish to enroll in summer classes may register using UK VIP until the day before classes are scheduled to

Some students wrote a lot, others less. In the end, the best grade went to the student who put only his name on the blue book then turned it in. The moral? Figure out what your professor really wants. Then deliver.

Of course, there are certain nuisances for faculty members around exam time. Some students ask for extra credit options

(I often doubt the sincerity of these late requests). Others want to know exactly how many points they need on the final to get an A in the course (Skip the math, I say, and study the material). And then there are the occasional excuses, some frivolous, most not.

I remember a call I once received the day before a final

My initial hello was greeted by a long silence on the other end of the line. Just as I was about to hang up, I heard a tear-

"Professor Troland, I'm pregnant!"

Now this unexpected declara-tion brought several thoughts to my mind.

For one, I am a respectable member of the University community (at least in the minds of some). So I felt certain that my responsibilities in this affair were limited.

But why should a student share this most personal news with me? And why was she cry-

Perhaps you can guess. The news of her condition was quite recent and quite inwelcome to her. And tomorrow was the exam.

Of course, I've never been pregnant. But I can imagine what pregnant. But I can imagine what it must be like to study for a final while thinking of how to break news like this to parents, friends and to one's sweetie. So I was understanding.

I said she could take the exam later, and she did.

Let's face it. Finals suck, especially studying for them.

But if the night grows long patience grows short, there's always a burger with your name on it at Tolly-Ho. With a little cholesterol, some sodium, a heavy dose of caffeine, who knows? You might just pull it here is little doubt that, for most students, this week is the most stressful period in their young - finals week.

Good luck and bon appetit.

Give us a break

For many, final exams can make a lot of difference. That precious and much sought-after A can be sus-final exam goes. For others, finals can be that last desperate effort to save face and pull a decent grade out of a course.

With all this on the line, hard to imagine how many escape from cracking under the pressure.

But all that could be lessened by a simple policy change.

First, with so much riding on these grandaddies of exams, that week before, which has disingenuously been called "Dead Week," should be a time for students to prepare. Right now, it is

Professors commonly make important papers and projects due during this week, and many even give exams (we've all had profes-sors do this), which is a flagrant violation of University policy

With all this on students' minds, there often is precious little time to prepare for finals. We have advocated before, and feel we must again because of its timely nature, that Dead Week should really be dead. Pro-fessors should not be able to make assignments due during that period.

Further, although there is little controversy over whether classes should be held at all during that week at all, one thing is clear: If classes are held, they should be an attempt to help stu-dents do well on the final and prepare for the rigorous week ahead.

The result? Students tained depending on how well a certain IN OUR OPINION opportunity to prepare for finals dur-ing a week that is, theoreti-cally, supposed to be set aside for that purpose to begin with.

However, if this is not feasible, there is another appropriate plan. Former Student Government Association Executive Director of Academic Affairs Avi Weitzman offered a proposal for a reading period.

This would mean that students would be given several days off before finals, instead of the whole week, for academic preparation. While an entire week is certainly preferable, from a student's point of view, giving students a few days to prepare is much better than the status quo. We students, as well as administrators, should leave this year enlightened. For students, the expectation is this: If you support these ideas and think that they would be beneficial to your academic future, and futures of those who come to this University after you, then getting involved and making sure some type of proposal is implemented should be your mission.

The future can be a little brighter if we all get involved.

Good luck on finals.

YEAH? WELL, IN THE REST OF MY DREAM, I HAD A DREAM THAT I WENT TO MY EXAM IN MY UNDERWEAR AND I WELL, I HAD A DREAM WHERE I WAS WELL-RESTED AND WELL PREPARED AND I LAUGHED AT SOME MORAN WHO HADN'T STUDIED AND WAS REALLY EMBARRASSED! SOME CONDESCENDING AND UNSMPATHETIC JERK GOT A BULLET IN THE HEAD! WAS TOTALLY UNPREPARED!

Kernel years memorable had four years to think up my last column, to painstakingly sculpt my final sendoff, the crowning testament by which everyone will remember me, and here I am, rushing to put something together under threat of deadline. Somehow, it seems appropri-

I was combing through old issues last month looking for my best work to send to the newspabest work to send to the newspa-pers I was applying to (excluding, of course, anything that would make me look like a dangerous freak — "I'd hire you, but I have a little puppy, Sparky, whom I adore with all my heart, and that column about welding puppies to the ceiling offended me so much that I couldn't look little Sparky in the eye if I validated such psyin the eye if I validated such psy-chopathic behavior by bringing you to our paper. Sorry!"), so I you to our paper. Sorry:"), so I took the time to simmer in a little nostalgia while I looked.

I feel like I've made a lot of progress since I started writing for the Kernel. This is the best laboratory way could ware set for laboratory you could ever ask for, and I'll tell you this: If you're a journalism student, or even if you're just interested in writing, you're just interested in writing, and you aren't absolutely tearing down the door of the Kernel for a shot, then you're an idiot, you're a screw-up, and you obviously don't care all that much.

You can scribble in journals that you keep to yourself all you want, but there's no substitute for publication, for putting it out in the open and taking the chance that people might say that you suck. That pressure makes you better. I hear endless comyou better. I hear endless complaints about how the opinion pages are useless, and it seems odd to me that a University of what, 23,000? — can't scare up a dozen good columnists.

Get off your asses, people.

I can barely look at half of my early stuff. It amazes me that I could've thought that they were so wonderful then. Of course, in 10 years, I'll wonder how I could've thought this semester's output was so wonderful.

John Abbott Kernel Columnist ▼

But there are a few keepers, ones that still make me that still make me giggle. That's an accomplishment, to be able to still find your own jokes funny; I mean, you probably scanned my columns once or columns once or twice at the most, but I, in the course of putting

course of putting it together, probably stared at each line 500 times, trying to make everything about them absolutely, overwhelmingly perfect, and most jokes aren't gonna hold up 500 times.

T've turned into such a pretentious artiste in my time here. I'll argue passionately with my editors about my columns because that exact combination of words is the only one that achieves the specific effect I want, so why are they trying to rip up my jewellike prose? I've actually been spoiled here — what reaches y'all is closer to what I originally wrote than I have any right to spoiled nere — what reaches y all is closer to what I originally wrote than I have any right to ask, so I'm going to feel real crummy when I run into editors who aren't so accommodating.

It only seems natural that I,

the terminal recluse, a man for whom paranoia isn't just a job

(it's an adventure), would find a hobby that vastly increases my public visibility. Not that it isn't colossally neat-o to have complete strangers approach me in public places and tell me that I'm the greatest thing since Snickers the greatest thing since Snickers bars or that I'm a moronic goofball who couldn't write a decent joke if my life depended on it, because it is. I've enjoyed my microscopic sliver of celebrity.

I remember the first time someone recognized me from the newspaper. She called me a dumbass, but that doesn't mean I don't treasure the memory.

dumbass, but that doesn't mean I don't treasure the memory.

Makes me kind of nervous, though. I am anything but a people person. My sister, she loves people. I'd rather bury myself in a deep dark hole with a television that only broadcasts MTV, old "Night Court" reruns and New England Patriots games, and a lifetime supply of turkey sandwiches. I've never had birthday parties, for instance, because being the center of attention seemed like such an unnatural, uncomfortable thing to do.

I didn't want them all looking at me!

I don't feel like this is the end. I don't feel like this is the end. I'm still going to keep writing: if not columns, at least something. Ideally, you'll be able to see my smiling (or scowling) face on the shelves of your local bookstore someday. You can pick up a copy of my latest effort and tell your friends that you can remember. friends that you can remember me when.

Or deny everything. I may not turn out to be someone you'd want to claim as an acquaintance. I may turn out to be weird.
