PART 1. THE EMERGENCY CONSERVATION WORK

THE EMERGENCY CONSERVATION WORK(Continued)SIXTH DISTRICT, CIVILIAN CONSERVATION CORPS

FLOOD CONTROL PROJECTS IN VERMONT

Following emergency legislation in the summer of 1933 for a system of public works and creation of the Civilian Conservation Corps to alleviate unemployment, construction of flood control works was authorized in the Winooski River Basin, Vermont, under the technical supervision of the Corps of Engineers, U. S. Army, in cooperation with the State of Vermont.

The Winooski River has its source in the northeastern part of Vermont, flowing westerly a distance of about 90 miles, and emptying into Lake Champlain about 4 miles north of the city of Burlington, Vermont. The river and its seven tributaries have a combined drainage area of 1,080 square miles, about 12% of the total area of Vermont. Three of the largest cities in the State, Burlington, Barre, and Montpelier, are within the watershed.

Actual construction was performed by the Sixth District, CCC organized June 22, 1933 with headquarters at Montpelier, Vermont, while the engineering and supervision were performed by the Corps of Engineers, United States Army. In view of the exacting type of work to be done, only World War Veterans' CCC companies were assigned to the Montpelier-Barre area, so that the Sixth District was unique both in the magnitude of its task and in the personnel engaged. Twenty-nine companies, each with a strength of two hundred veterans, recruited from Maine to Virginia, were sent into the district, and commanded by officers of the Army, Navy, and Marine Corps, both regular and reserve.

Initiation of the work received impetus from the devastating flood of November 1927, which swept over New England leaving destruction in its wake throughout the Winooski River Valley. The rains of November 3d and 4th exceeded all previous records for Vermont. In Montpelier and Waterbury the river rose to 10 and 11 feet above the street levels in those sections adjacent to the river. Property damage was estimated at $13,500,000 and 55 lives were lost in this area. Approximately 25 square miles of the Winooski Valley were flooded in the catastrophe.

Three earthen retention dams were constructed, one at East Barre, one at Wrightsville, and another at Waterbury. Construction work was commenced on the East Barre dam in July 1933, soon after the establishment of the CCC camp close to the dam site. The dam is 1,200 feet long with a spillway 100 feet wide. Work was completed November 15, 1935. Operations were commenced on the Wrightsville Dam in August 1933. In clearing the site, houses had to be removed, new roads built, old roads relocated, a stream diverted, trees felled, and rock excavated. The dam extends across the valley 1500 feet, and 90 feet above the old bed of the river. Maximum width at the base is 750 feet. This dam was completed on October 29, 1935.

The Waterbury Dam is much larger than the other two structures. Work was started in April 1935 with a small force. As the East Barre and Wrightsville dams neared completion some of the men were transferred to the Waterbury project, bringing the total complement to about 2,500 men. The embankment is over 2,000 feet long and 155 feet high, having a maximum base width of nearly 1,000 feet. The spillway section has an overall length of 252 feet, and consists of a concrete overflow section and twin power-driven tainter gates, each 20 feet wide and $26\frac{1}{2}$ feet high. Power shovels, drag lines, trucks, tractors, and air-compressors used on the work were operated by veteran CCC personnel. The dam was completed and officially turned over to the State of Vermont at dedication ceremonies on October 19th, 1938.

The construction of a new concrete dam at Montpelier and removal of the old timber dam were completed on October 16th, 1934, while channel work was finally completed in the spring of 1938.

The first severe test and demonstration of the value of these flood control works occurred in March 1936 when the East Barre and Wrightsville Dams had just been completed. The severe winter of 1935-36 produced a heavy deposit of snow, which, followed by unseasonably warm spring weather, produced the greatest flow in the Winooski River and its tributaries since 1927, and without these flood control works would have produced flood stages and devastation comparable with those of 1927. The reservoirs, however, functioned as planned with satisfactory results. Again in September 1938 when a hurricane and heavy rains lashed the New England area, the Winooski River at Waterbury rose to within 3 inches of the height attained in 1936 with but slight resultant damage.

The savings thus effected and the security afforded to the inhabitants of the valley against loss of life more than repays the cost of construction of these dams and their appurtenances. The veterans' contingent of the Civilian Conservation Corps played a major roll in all this work. Except for the operation of certain machines, it performed all of the work.
