Senate approves statutory ban on defacing American flag

WASHINGTON - The Senate overwhelmingly approved a statuto-ry ban yesterday on defacing the American flag after defeating a pro-posed revision that sponsors said could prove fatal in a future court

President Bush said he respected

The 91-9 final vote came after The 91-9 final vote came after maneuvering by Senate Republicans, who say along with Bush that amending the Constitution rather than passing a statute is the only effective way to counter last June's Supreme Court decision throwing out a Texas flag-burning law. The bill, which previously passed in the House, now calls for up to a $1,000 fine and a year in jail for burning or otherwise defacing the flag. Both houses will consider a proposed amendment to the Constitution later this month.

Democrats say they have careful-ly worded their bill to protect it against an expected new court chal-lenge on free-speech grounds.

At the White House, Bush called on Congress to approve the constitutional flag-desceration amend-ment he supports, despite the log-sided Senate vote.

"I respect the intention of those who voted for (a statutory ban). But I continue to believe such an approach is inadequate in light of the Supreme Court decision," Bush said. "I believe that a consti-

Koch said that while the the horse was destroyed because of Laminitis, an incurable inflammation of the hoof, he suspected that something else might have caused the disease. Test results from the autopsy will not be available for several weeks.

Secretariat was buried in the cemetery at Claiborne Farms. The horse was buried around the corner from his stablemate, Riva Ridge, and across from Swale and Round Table.

During his racing career, Secretariat earned $1,316,808 in prize money. He was the first horse in 24 years to win racing's Triple Crown in 1973, when he set world records in the Derby and the Belmont

He also set world records in 1 1/3- and 1 1/2-mile races. He was Horse of the Year in 1972 and

Buddhist monk Dalai Lama wins peace prize

By ARTHUR MAX

OSLO, Norway – The Dalai Lama, the spiritual and temporal leader of Tibet, whose title means Oceans of Mercy, won the 1989 Nobel Peace Prizz yesterday for deades of non-violent struggle to free his country from China. He said in response: "My case is nothing special. I am a simple Buddhist monk – no more, no less." He expressed hope that the award would focus attention on compassion in every human being. China called the award an insult and interference in its internal affairs.

gian Nobel committee was to deliver a message of support to the prodemocracy movement in China.

Analysts also said it might help eventually to break the deadlock between China, which has occupied the Himalayan nation since 1950, and the Dalai Lama, who leads an exile government based in India.

In its citation, the committee mentioned the Dalai Lama's rejection and of violence and his preachings of respect for all living things.

"My case is nothing special. I am a simple Buddhist monk – no more, no less."

Dalai Lama, Nobel Peace Prize

It praised his "constructive and forward-looking proposals for the solution of international conflicts." Past prizes have been used to encourage human rights activists and to support peace efforts. Polish Solidarity Leader Lech Walesa won in 1983; the 1987 prize went to Costa Rica's President Oscar Arias for his Central American peace plan; United Nations Peacekeeping forces were given last year's award. The Dalai Lama, 54, was born Tenzin Gyatso. The son of a poor farmer, he was named spiritual and temporal ruler as the 14th Dalai Lama at age 5, just before the Chinese army marched into Tibet. The February review included an extensive investigation of materials submitted from the University and a two-day visit from the APA.

The department received a full accreditation, which is the high-set level of endorsement. The duration of the accreditation can be from one to five years. The five-year accreditation was awarded to UK.

"The accreditation we received was the longest and strongest endorsement we could have received," Nonneman said.

The accreditation includes the undergraduate and graduate curricula, with an emphasis on the clinical psychology program. It marks a 20-year milestone for the department.

This is the fourth consecutive five-year endorsement for the clinical psychology program, in the clinical psychology program, which was one of the first U.S. programs, established in 1947.

One weak point mentioned in the evaluation was a deficiency in physical resources and space in the psychology department. "The APA basically said the faculty is much better than the facilities," Nonneman said.

As a result, a new building, owned by the University and recently vacated by the Kentucky League of Cities, has been set aside for the Psychological Services Center.

Students prepare for housing march

By MICHAEL L. JONES

Socially Concerned Students announced yesterday that the group's secretary, Keri Barron, will attend the Housing NOW! in Washington, D.C., on Saturday.

Several student groups asked the UK Student Government Association Senate for $1,000 to send 20 students to the march, but $GA rejected it by a 17-10 vote.

During the march, Barton will carry a sign displaying how the senators voted.

"It holds the senators accountable

"It holds the senators accountable to the student body," said Chris Harrell, who came up with the idea of the sign. "It's a way of letting them know how the senators are voting. If they are ashamed of the way they voted, they shouldn't have voted that way."

Barton's transportation to the

He was freed from the Fayette County Detention Center Saturday after his family post a $1,000 bail. Bush rejected a proposal by the court to release him on a $100

"As it stands now we have no spokesman," Creech said, "and according to the University rules (Bush) cannot be a member."

Creech said that Bush was only a "guest" of the group.

Bush said yesterday in a phone interview that the SGA constitution, which was approved by Harris, allows non-students to be members of the group.
"I am claiming that I am a student and they say I'm not," Bush said. "I consider myself a community science student. Even if I wasn't, SCS has a had a policy of letting non-students be members."

The Registra's Office does not recognize those registered in the community science seminars as students. Bush said that anyone who pays money to the University should be considered a student.

I was sitting in front of the TV that evening in the comfortable confines of my home. The TV was tuned in to one of the commercial network, you know, the ones in which you are freed from the insan-ity of the program every 10 min-utes or so just to get bombarded by equally silly commercials. It was commercial time.

Wow, what a relief! Now, one doesn't have to worry about her hair when she is taken to the hospital after heat exhaustion in 90 percent humidity. Remember what your mother told you about clean meteroser?

your mother told you about clean underwear?

Next, I thought about the mink farmers. You know, the international market for fur is declining. Don't fret, mink farmers! The hair spray industry is there to help you. The almighty hair spray is going to provide livelihood for you. Of course, the mink furriers' business still in danger; sorry, cannot take care of everybody at the same time! Presumably, the minks can be slaughtered humanely for the purpose of extracting oil. Minks are tortured when they are killed for their fur in an effort to get blemish-free coat. Now there is no need for such torture. Mink slaughter can be at least as humane as cow slaugh-ter.

at least as humane as cow slaughter.

The SPCA would be silenced completely. Never mind that cows are slaughtered to provide food. Sables are wondering about this exalted status for minks.

Having mink in hair spray would also be comforting for status-conscious people. With some more innovations in the cosmetics industry, one can be attired in mink from head to toe, literally.

In summer, one has mink in her hair and in winter, on her shoulders. There is just no possibility of being mistaken for a commoner, no matter the season.

Enough of finding reasons to add mink oil to hair spray. Let u sget serious here. Animal rights activists are invariably labeled extremists and overzealous. Such accusations arise out of the practice of reductio ad absurdum.

Animal rights activists are questioned as to whether they are against eating meat, against tests on animals seeking to find cures for diseases, etc.

The answer is usually given hedgingly, sometimes defending eating meat and use of tests on animals in matters of medical research from the perspective of human survival. The philosophical inconsistencies of such a position are very easy to see and animal rights are doomed forthwith in their argument.

I am drawing an arbitrary line, acknowledging this line's philosophical absurdity. Somehow, medicine and nourishing food seem to me to be in a different class than sweet-smelling perfumes and after-shaves.

I dare anyone to argue that cruel and inhumane tests on animals, like the Draize test, are equally defensible or indefensible, depending on one's point of view, without considering the purpose for which they are administered.

If the aim is to produce longer holding hair spray, swim-proof mascara, moist-looking nail polish etc., then the tests are indefensible and the opposite is true when medical research is involved.

In the animal kingdom killings are almost always the result of struggle for survival of both the individual and the species. Vanity hardly ever enters the picture. This is one thing human beings seem to have forgotten through their evolution. However small the percentage of animal killing and torture for the sake of vanity may be, it is still too high.

be, it is still too high

be, it is still too high.

Some major cosmetics companies have sworn to limit the suffering of "lesser" creatures. I view this turnaround to be a result of activities by animal rights people and not as an indigenous realization within the cosmetics industry.

I would like to see the day when the social opprobrium against cruelty to animals in the name of vanity is so strong and pervasive that companies not subscribing to decent and humane practices would cease to exist.

People are puppets in the hands of the cosmetics industry. The industry demands by appealing to the consumer's vanity. In the process of satisfying such demands, almost by necessity, issues such as inhumane treatment of animals and unnecessary use of animal products are totally ignored in the quest for larger profits.

Honestly, is there a great demand for a hair spray that would work 18 hours in 90 percent humidity? If yes, is it such a essential demand that if had to be satisfied without regard to an animal's well-being? I

For many UK students, Keene-land's fall meet is an event they look forward to all year.
"I like to go out there to relax and have a good time with my friends," UK senior Greg Herbek eaid.

said.

UK senior Curt Sitlinger said:
"Normally, we head to the fratemity house for a pre-Keeneland party and then go to the track and maybe grab something to eat on the way home."

home."
Students planning to attend the meet said betting at Keeneland wasn't that important; having a good time was their chief concern.
"I pretty much lose my shirt when I go out there," Sitlinger said. "I'm hoping one day I'll get lucky and win it all back."
"We draw very well from the University," Williams said. "We hope to keep (students) as racing fans after they graduate."

In addition to having patrons from the Lexington area, Williams said Keeneland attracts a large part of its racing crowd from Louisville and Cincinnati.

and Cincinnati.
Keeneland officials expect about 23,000 racing fans on the grounds tomorrow. Williams said about 4,000 additional patrons are expected on afternoons of UK's two night football games: Rutgers University on Oct. 14 Louisana State University on Oct. 21.
UK previously had scheduled tomorrow's game against Auburn University in the evening but had to move the kickoff time to 12:40 p.m. because of the Southeastern Conference's contract with WTBS.
But Williams said Keeneland officials were not upset at the decision by UK. "We understand the University's need to move the game and we're happy they are getting the national coverage."
Students and fans who had planned to attend both events were disappointed, but many thought the neland officials expect about national coverage of the Wildcats was more important.

"I was looking forward to going both opening day and the game until they moved the game," Herbeck said. "It's unfortunate that you have to choose between the game and going to the track, but I can always tape the game."

"It's tough to decide if you should go to the game or to Keenaland, especially if it rains," said UK senior John Pisscrita. "But at least at Keeneland if it rains, you can go inside."

Over the summer Keeneland underwent physical renovations to improve the environment for racing fans, including a rear enclosure of looking the paddock areas.

A heating and air-conditioning system was added to the renovated area to provide a climate-controlled environment, Williams said.

Aside from the physical changes made on the grounds, racing fans can expect to see some of the sport's finest horses compete in the seven stakes races during this year's fall meet.

have to do is keep them frustrated for one more week."

That's a very tall order considering that UK is averaging only 234 yards per game in total offense, while the Auburn offense is averaging more than 420 yards a game. "We've got to play a perfect game, not a near perfect game, but a perfect game to beat Auburn Saturday," Burks said.

"We'll, it's going to be their strength (offense) going against our strength (defense)," UK defensive guard Jerry Bell said. "We'll find out on Saturday who's stronger. It's definitely going to be a big challenge for us."

"We're really working on tack-"We're really working on tackling, mainly because we had a lot of missed tackles against Tennessee," Auburn defensive back Frankie Stankunas said. "We're especially working on stopping the running game because Tennessee ran all over us."

Tiger linebacker Quentin Riggins said: "I think (UK) is going to run exactly the same stuff Tennessee ran last week so we are going to change up our defense a little."

The Tiger attack is led by senior quarterback Reggie Slack, an AllSEC selection last season. Slack (31.4 percent) for 0.2b yards and six touchdowns this season.

"Slack has been doing a real fine job throwing the ball for them," Claiborne said. "In fact, statistically, he was first in the nation before the Tennessee game. And he's got some good receivers too."

Burks said: "He can do it all. He

They also have a good short passing game. But they are still a tail-back-oriented football team, and they will run basically the same running plays as we do. They'll run the sprint draw and isolation play, as well as the power sweeps. "Defensively, they have a young football team, but they are getting better. They run the 5-2 defense with three down linemen and the two ends standing. They will blitz, but they play you mainly straight up. In the secondary, they play some man-to-man, but they play mostly zone on your receivers."

can drop back and tear a defense apart because he has a very strong arm or he hit the receivers while he's scrambling because he's also a very accurate pusser."

The deadliest combination in the nation right now is Slack throwing to Alexander Wright. Wright, a 60, 188-pound senior, is averaging 33.4 yards every time he catches the ball. He also has five touchdowns so far this season.

"Wright is amazing, he truly is," UK defensive back Chris Tolbert said. "He runs the 40-yard dash in 4.17 seconds, plus he has really good hands and can jump. It's going to be a real challenge to stophim."

To win the game, Claiborne said the Wildcats must be able to run the ball better than they did against the Cirnson Tide's defense. Here's Claiborne's look at what the Aubum offensive and defense will do against UK:

Regular sleep cycle important, doctor says

BY VICTORIA MARTIN Staff Writer

Students who wake up the same time every day probably will perform more consistently and will get better grades, according to Dr. Robert Granacher, medical director of Saint Joseph Hospital's Sleep Disorder Center.

"Try to keep a regular schedule of sleep," Granacher told more than 20 people Tuesday night at a lecture. However, if you disrupt (your sleeping schedule), you will pay the price. But if you restructure your free time and wake up at a consistent time, you will be more productive."

Granacher startled the crowd by saying: "The bedroom should only be used for two things: sleeping and sex."

Noisy surroundings and a hot room also can disrupt sleep, Grancher said. A room's temperature should be around 65 degrees for comfortable sleep.

Drugs like alcohol, nicotine, sleeping pills and caffeine limit rapid eye movement sleep, or REM stage sleep, causing you to feel less rested, Granacher said.

"You're kidding yourself if you think you can maintain normal sleeping habits with a lot of caffeine in your body," he said.

People who need caffeine to stay alert during the day should drink one or two cups of coffee or soda per day at the most, Granacher sug-

The belief that people sleep better with alcohol in their bodies is a myth, Granacher said. In fact, alcohol destroys sleep rhythms, causing fragmented rest, he said. People feel tired the day after they consume alcohol because hangovers are a form of sleep deprivation, he said.

Granacher said "mother was right" if she said drinking milk before bed would help you sleep because milk contains an amino acid that enhances sleep.

Sleeping more than the body requires, however, is as unhealthy as not getting enough sleep, Granacher said. night before. He also discouraged "napping."
"Naps don't help, because you usually won't get any REM sleep during naps." Granacher said. "Those (naps) markedly affect nighttime sleep." Depression is the main cause of sleep disorders because it limits REM sleep, Granacher said. Four out of every five people will develop a form of mental illness, including sleep disorders, within the next six months, said Dr. Catherine Martin, of the Kentucky Psychiatric Association. Future of dry beer in U.S. is unclear in the U.S. market. More than a year after the Japanese dry beer craze crossed the Pacific, there's only one nationally distributed dry beer in the United States.

Michelob Dry accounts for more than 80 percent of total dry sales. The rest of the small segment is divided among more than a dozen domestic and import labels. Sales trends are sketchy and the beer industry is waiting to see if the dry segment takes off, as light beer did, or fades into obscurity like lowalcohol beer.

Precisely how many local and regional brands there are is hard to say.

Mark Phipps, brewmaster at Hudepohl-Schoenling brewing in Cincinnati, said the distinguishing features of dry beer are its lack of aftertaste and a high degree of drinkability.

That's contrary to just about everything a brewmaster traditionally has tried to achieve in developing a full-bodied beer with a distinctive bitter aftertaste. "Dry beers are more thirst-quenching than regular beers," he said.

Beer flavor consists of three parts – aroma, body and after-taste. By adjusting the brewing process, parts of the flavor can be accentuated or downplayed. With dry beer, the goal is a less-sweet product with aroma and taste up front but which seems to disappear after it's swallowed.

The motorcycle jacket has had an illustrious and relatively short life, popularized by everyone from Six Vicious, the late bassist for the Sex Pistols, to Peter Fonda in the movie "Easy Rider."

Dating from Marlon Brando's "On the Waterfront," the jacket has represented a form of rebellion against the status quo. But today the jacket has become part of mainstream popular culture.
