U.S. planes down 4 Serb aircraft

By Dusan Stojanovic
Associated Press

BELGRADE, Yugoslavia — NATO struck for the first time in the Bosnian war yesterday when two U.S. F-16 fighter jets downed four Serb warplanes that U.N. officials said bombed an arms plant near Bosnia's Muslim-led government.

NATO said the planes ignored several warnings to leave a U.N.-imposed no-fly zone over Bosnia or face attack and then were observed dropping bombs on a Muslim-controlled area.

Bosnian Serbs first denied involvement. But one Serb army official, who spoke on condition of anonymity, confirmed that four of their planes were shot down. Bosnian Serb leader Radovan Karadzic said Serb pilots might have been making "training flights."

NATO has frequently threatened intervention to back U.N. resolutions during the 23-month war, most recently to force Serbs to pull their artillery away from Sarajevo a week ago. But yesterday's attack was the first instance of NATO using military muscle anywhere during its 44 years of existence.

NATO and the United Nations say they are neutral in the Bosnian conflict and will act against any side violating U.N. agreements. But Bosnian government officials, who have appealed repeatedly for outside help for their outgunned troops, were exuberant.

"Better days are ahead of us," Bosnian Vice President Ejup Ganic said in Sarajevo, Bosnia's capital.

Russia, a traditional Serb ally that criticized NATO over its ultimatum to Serbs on the Sarajevo siege, reacted mildly to the clash. "If the Serbs did this, I see no justification," said Defense Minister Pavel Grachev.

Although Russia has warned that military intervention could worsen the war, Grachev said he did not think the incident would escalate the conflict.

U.S. Adm. Jeremy M. Boorda, the NATO commander for southern Europe, said the lesson to be learned was simple: "You ought not to violate the no-fly zone." He said NATO would not hesitate to fire on any other violators.

The ban was imposed in October 1992, after Bosnian Serbs had overrun about 70 percent of Bosnia's territory in fighting with government soldiers and Bosnian Croat forces. About 200,000 people have been reported dead or missing since the war began over Bosnia's secession from Serb-dominated Yugoslavia.

Boorda said U.S. pilots detected six planes by radar and broadcast three warnings for them to immediately land or leave Bosnian air space or risk attack. No response was received, and the Americans then saw the planes "make a bombing maneuver" and witnessed explosions on the ground, he said.

One U.S. plane then shot down three planes with air-to-air missiles and a second U.S. plane downed a fourth, Boorda said at a briefing in Naples, Italy. The two other planes escaped by flying west over Croatia and then north and back east over Banja Luka, a Serb-controlled region in northwestern Bosnia, NATO said. Many of the Western Serb aircraft are based in Banja Luka.

Police response inappropriate, 2 students say

By Jennifer Wieher
Staff Writer

Two students who live next door to the UK Police Station say they did not receive proper police assistance when they reported a prowler on their back porch last week.

Anissa Carver, an undeclared junior, and Wendi Gardner, a genetics senior, heard noises outside their apartment on Rose Street late Tuesday night. The apartment complex is located between the Alpha Omicron Pi social sorority house and the UK police station.

Gardner noticed the prowler when she saw shadows on the porch. She then reported the incident to UK police and called some of her friends for help, Carver said.

Carver said a campus police car came to the apartment's parking lot, but officers did not check for the prowler on the back porch.

"The police never even got out of their cruiser," Carver said.

Chris Weller, a sports administration senior, arrived just as the police were leaving. Weller and Danny Murphy, another friend of the students, checked on Carver and Gardner and then looked out back, Weller said.

Weller said the prowler was still in the back, but ran when he heard them approaching.

"If the police went around back, I think they would have caught the guy," Weller said.

UK Police Chief W.H. McComas said his officers probably responded to the call out of courtesy and for security reasons. He said, however, that they could not investigate because the area was not in the department's jurisdiction.

"We would be held extremely liable if anything happened," McComas said.

John Potts, a captain with the Lexington police department, said UK police wouldn't even be able to arrest the suspect if they caught him.

He advised all students not living on University property to call 911 in case of emergencies, so that city police can respond.

McComas said his officers usually contact Lexington police when there is a problem with jurisdiction.

Potts, said, however, that Lexington

UK professor gets $30,000 fellowship

By Trent Knuckles
Staff Writer

UK physics professor Herbert A. Fertig has received a $30,000 Sloan Research Fellowship for his work on the properties of materials.

The fellowships are given to young scientists who excel in the areas of chemistry, mathematics, economics, neuroscience and physics.

Only 100 of these fellowships are given each year, and just 23 support research in the area of physics.

Recipients may use the grant for a variety of things, including laboratory equipment, travel and other research-related expenses.

Fertig, who currently is conducting research in Spain, was nominated for the award by physics department chairman Kumble Subbaswamy, who called the professor's work "a pure thirst for knowledge."

"(Fertig) is one of the best people of his generation for the study of physics," he said.

Fertig specializes in the unusual properties of electronic semiconductors when placed in high magnetic fields, an area that Subbaswamy called "vitaly important."

"The problem he deals with is one of the most difficult in the physics of solids," Subbaswamy said.

"In some sense, interest in this area of research is a good bet for the technology of tomorrow."

Besides the importance of his research, Fertig is highly regarded by his peers for his personal demeanor.

"I think he typifies the best you can find in a faculty member," Subbaswamy said. "He is extremely pleasant and mild mannered. He has tremendous drive and shows very high promise for years to come."

Fertig not only is an outstanding researcher, however, he is consistently praised by his students as an outstanding professor, as well.

"He brings the excitement of his research into the classroom," Subbaswamy said. "His role as a faculty member is invaluable."

Recipients of Sloan Fellowships have indeed shown to be outstanding in their respective fields. Sixteen have gone on to receive Nobel Prizes.

"It's like a young faculty members hall of fame," Subbaswamy said.

SGA gives students hotline to capitol

By Stephen D. Trimble
Assistant News Editor

If all goes well, state legislators will be bombarded this week with phone calls and letters from UK students demanding lower tuition, Student Government Association Governmental Affairs Chairwoman Tracy Rogers said yesterday.

SGA is making this possible today and tomorrow with booths where students can write letters or call a toll-free hotline direct to the state legislature.

The booths will be located in the Kirwan-Blanding Complex Commons, Margaret I. King Library, White Hall Classroom Building and the Student Center from 10 a.m. to 6 p.m. both days.

SGA officers also will make special trips to Frankfort to personally deliver letters written by students.

"The SGA really wants to make the legislators aware of the importance of higher education," Rogers said.

Legislators earlier this year approved a 3 percent budget increase at UK, which Rogers said was earmarked mostly for teachers' salaries — not to protect students from increasing tuition.

Meanwhile, the state Council on Higher Education passed an 11.2 percent tuition increase for the 1994 fall semester.

SGA wants legislators to provide money for UK's special projects, as well as to combat tuition hikes, said Rogers, a student intern for in Frankfort.

She added that the legislators usually make time to respond to calls from voters in their districts.

"It really means a lot to them to get calls or letters from people in their district," she said.

State Representative Ernesto Scorsone, D-Lexington, said the telephone calls are a good start for students to get involved with local politics.

Hemenway withdraws name from Ohio University search

Staff report

After a weekend visit to Ohio University, Chancellor for the Lexington Campus Robert Hemenway announced yesterday that he was withdrawing from consideration to be the school's next president.

Charlotte Eufinger, a member of Ohio University's Board of Trustees, said Hemenway cited "personal reasons" for dropping out of the race.

She said the board met with Hemenway for about four hours on Saturday, discussing topics that included Hemenway's management style and his philosophies concerning higher education.

Eufinger said Hemenway informed the board of his decision Sunday.

Hemenway would not elaborate on his reasons for dropping out of the search. In a written statement, he simply said he wanted to thank the Athens, Ohio, school's Board of Trustees for "forthright discussions which have helped me make this decision."

Hemenway was nominated for the job without submitting an application. He was one of three finalists for the position when he decided to withdraw his nomination.

Hemenway has been in the running for positions at three other schools since 1990.

In November, Hemenway was a finalist for the presidency at Florida State University but was not chosen

36th annual Grammy awards showcase Sting, few surprises

By Nina Davidson
Arts Editor

The 36th annual Grammy Awards will have plenty of Sting, but not much bite.

The toothless Grammys, which air tonight at 8 on WKYT-TV (Channel 27), continue the tradition of nominating established industry singers year after year instead of taking risks with new artists.

Rock singer Sting is nominated for six awards: Record of the Year; Album of the Year; Song of the Year; Best Pop Vocal Performance, Male; and Best Rock Vocal Performance, Solo.

Hoping to repeat Eric Clapton's feat of multiple Grammy awards last year, Sting's "If I Ever Lose My Faith in You" from Ten Summoner's Tales, and "Demolition Man" from the Demolition Man soundtrack are nominated as songs, while Ten Summoner's Tales is nominated for Album of the Year.

R.E.M.'s "Automatic for the People" is nominated for the Best Album of the Year Grammy. The Grammys air at 8 p.m. today.

The other Grammy nominees include old timers Billy Joel, Neil Young, Meat Loaf, Rod Stewart and Tina Turner. Joel's "The River of Dreams" is nominated for Record of the Year, Album of the Year, Song of the Year and Best Pop Vocal Performance, Male. The Best New Artist category remains the last hope for a transfusion of youthful vitality. Belly, Blind Melon, Toni Braxton, Digable Planets and Sisters With Voices all are nominated. Digable Planets, with its fusion of funk and rap, is a sure bet to enter the orbit of stardom.

With the addition of awards for alternative music and rap music, the Grammys are hoping to appeal to a wider audience. Unfortunately, some of the nominees for alternative music seem very mainstream. U2's Zooropa and R.E.M.'s Automatic for the People are nominated for Best Alternative Music Album, along with truly alternative works by Belly (Star), Smashing Pumpkins (Siamese Dream) and Nirvana (In Utero). It'll probably a toss up between Siamese Dream and In Utero.

Smashing Pumpkins also is nominated in the Hard Rock category for the track "Cherub Rock" from Siamese Dream, and the band should be a clear winner over '70s relics AC/DC ("Highway to Hell") and Robert Plant ("Calling to You"). Other songs nominated are "Leave it Alone" by Living Colour and "Push" by Stone Temple Pilots.

Nominees for Best Rap Performance by a Duo or Group include "Revolution" (Arrested Development), "Insane in the Brain" (Cypress Hill), "Rebirth of Slick (Cool Like Dat)" (Digable Planets), "Nuthin' but a 'G' Thang" (Dr. Dre & Snoop), and "Hip Hop Hooray" (Naughty by Nature). "Rebirth of Slick (Cool Like Dat)" is a slickly produced song with a catchy riff that surely will snag the award.

Aerosmith is nominated for two songs in the same category of Best Rock Song. The love ballad "Cryin'" and the rock anthem "Livin' on the Edge" both are nominees. Other nominees are Lenny Kravitz's "Are You Gonna Go my Way," Meat Loaf's "I'll Do Anything for Love (But I Won't Do That)" and Soul Asylum's "Runaway Train."

"Runaway Train" should receive the award without being derailed by Aerosmith's double whammy.

Senior inside guys leave mark on UK

Martinez differs from mates: He's always been a Wildcat

By Brett Dawson
Assistant Sports Editor

Gimel Martinez stands out among the seniors on the 1993-94 UK basketball team.

Travis Ford transferred from Missouri. Rodney Dent transferred from Odessa Junior College. Jeff Brassow was recruited by Eddie Sutton, then spent five years under Rick Pitino.

And Martinez? He came to Lexington four years ago and is about to finish up his fourth season. And then he'll be off.

And that's perfectly normal. For most players. But in this group of seniors, it makes Martinez downright unusual. He stands out for being like everyone else.

But Martinez doesn't attract much attention. He never has. And once again, he'll likely be overshadowed when he and his fellow seniors are honored tomorrow night during UK's annual Senior Night.

"He's never gotten the marquee attention of (Jamal Mashburn) or Travis (Ford) or John Pelphey, for that matter, but he's been very much in support of all of those guys," UK head coach Rick Pitino said of Martinez. "He's been a major part of this program."

Martinez seems content with the time he has spent as a Wildcat. He's seen great players come and go. And he's been involved in some of the greatest moments in UK's storied basketball history.

"I've had a great time," Martinez said of his UK career. "I've played under a great coach and played with great teams. We've had so many high points during my career."

Among those were arguably the finest college basketball game ever (the UK-Duke matchup in 1992), a Final Four appearance in 1993 and the rally to end all rallies, a 31-point comeback and eventual 99-95 win over LSU this season.

For Martinez individually, his four years at UK have included vast improvements as a player, a few facial hair changes and a roller coaster relationship with the UK fans.

"I guess (the fans) were kind of down back in my first year here," the 6-foot-8 forward said. "They didn't think I could (play here). I think that motivated me a lot to work harder to prove to them that I could."

And he did. He went from an undersized center in his freshman season to a versatile frontcourt substitute. Along the way, he developed a smooth up-and-under move and a solid three-point shot.

"He's probably gotten the most out of his ability that he could possibly get," Pitino said. "He's become a real good three-point shooter. He's become an excellent passer, a good four shooter."

His development was hindered from time to time by a series of nagging injuries. He suffers from a severe case of scoliosis, which eventually may require surgery. He sustained a hairline fracture in his foot last year.

And the salvo of whacks Martinez's nose has taken in his time at UK have become near-legendary.

"He's gotten about two inches smaller because of the scoliosis in his back, but his nose has grown about two inches because of all the shots he's taken to it," Pitino said.

If Martinez is famous for anything, it's for his penchant for fouling. Pitino even went so far as to speak with the Southeastern Conference's league office earlier this year to ask the referees to take it easy on Martinez.

"It's a common sight to see the forward stare in disbelief after being whistled for a back. 'I just think he's very funny when he never thinks he fouls anyone,'" Pitino said. "He thinks the referees are totally against him. He thinks they don't like Cubans."

Martinez's future looks bright. He said he is "about a year" from his degree, and next January, he plans to marry his fiancée, Missy Diehr, a UK senior from Columbus, Ohio.

He hopes to go into coaching someday, and for now, playing professional basketball in abroad is on his mind as well.

"If the opportunity is there, I would love to (play pro ball)," Martinez said. "I wouldn't mind going overseas. I think it would be fun to see other parts of the world."

But that doesn't mean he's anxious to move on from UK. After all, unlike his peers, he attended only one college, and he spent just four years in blue and white.

"I would love to keep playing here," Martinez said. "This is a great place to play. I wish it could keep going."

Injured Dent moonlights as a coach

By Doc Purcell
Staff Writer

Around him a whirlwind of teammates, coaches and trainers inquired of his condition, perhaps wondering if they wanted to know.

Dent, after all, was the UK basketball team's omnipresent inside force. At 6-foot-11 and 240 pounds, he combined height and bulk, a feature no other Wildcat post-player could boast.

And this was his senior season — the swan song of a collegiate athlete. It was to be a special one. He had gathered two years of playing experience at Odessa (Texas) Junior College, a basketball factory that had produced current NBA star Larry Johnson.

Then it was on to the Bluegrass, where he started 32 of 34 games and contributed more than six points an outing for a talent-stocked team that reached the NCAA Final Four.

His second and final season as a Wildcat also began with great success. Through 10 games this year, he was averaging more than 10 points a night and was one of coach Rick Pitino's starters.

It was the 11th game of the campaign — a Southeastern Conference match-up with long-time adversary Vanderbilt — that proved to be Dent's Waterloo.

He tangled with Commodore forward Bryan Milburn then slumped to the court early in the game.

His teammates and coaches soon got the dreadful news, the Cats' center, known affectionately as "Moon," had torn his anterior cruciate ligament, bringing his senior season to an abrupt end.

He sat quietly on the sidelines in the second half, watching the other UK players, knowing that Rupp Arena was no longer his domain.

UK won that game in easy fashion, but went on to struggle in conference road match-ups with Georgia and Florida, its stars seemingly unable to shine without Moon's presence.

But that was then, and this is now. The Wildcats have found their niche, and so has Dent.

"He's a very funny person," UK forward Gimel Martinez said. "I think he has recovered a lot. He has made great progress with his knee."

While his teammates boast a No. 7 national ranking and are readying themselves for the madness of March, Dent knows he can't be a part of that — at least not in the box scores. He has, however, found himself in an equally meaningful role. No longer can he be seen sitting somberly on the bench wearily watching the other Wildcats.

"I want to sit over there and coach if I can't play," Dent said. "(I) help coach Pitino out, holler at (my teammates) and get them sparked up and ready to play."

"He's always there encouraging us and cheering us on," senior forward Jeff Brassow said.

His sideline demeanor certainly was saddening just after the injury, but now he is seemingly the wildest Cat of all, taking on a role as an emotional spark and a worthy Pitino assistant.

His turnaround was fast and brash, much like his play on the court. His knee is rapidly improving through rehab, and he hopes to begin running in several weeks.

One small ray of hope remains for Dent to suit up in a UK uniform again. The University plans to send an appeal to the NCAA in hopes of earning him a medical redshirt — and ultimately another year of eligibility.

No matter what the outcome, however, the Moon has and surely will continue to shine light around the UK bench this season.

Diplomat to speak on threat of Korean nuclear program

By Perry Brothers
Staff Writer

Korean Consul General Chang Ho Lee will discuss the nuclear threat posed by North Korea in a campus symposium this evening.

The diplomat's speech will introduce a two-hour symposium on modern Korea that also will address political and economic issues.

The College of Arts and Science and the Korean Student Association are sponsoring the event as part of "an initiative to strengthen the (university's) East Asian program," said UK political science professor Chung-In Moon, a coordinator for the symposium.

Lee has served in the Korean foreign service since 1970.

His previous foreign service positions include a four-year tenure as secretary to the president of the Republic of Korea, director general of the Treaty Bureau, and director of North American Affairs.

He was appointed consul general in May 1993.

Following Lee's address, Iowa State University political science professor Young-whan Kihl will speak on North-South Korean relations.

Kihl is the author of 12 books and more than 150 articles dealing with Korean and East Asian politics.

Roy S. Shin, a professor at Indiana University, will shift the focus from politics to economics with a discussion of "Technology and International Competitiveness in South Korea."

Peter Hayes, a senior researcher at the Nautilus Pacific Research Institute, will close the symposium with "The Korean Nuclear Dilemma: Real or Contrived?"

Karen Mingsat, a UK political science professor, organized the symposium and will act as moderator.

Panelists will be UK professor Larry Burmeister and Hee Yol Yu, a representative of the Korean Ministry of Science and Technology.

The symposium begins at 4 p.m. in 206 Student Center.

SGA

"The telephone calls are an excellent idea," he said. "It speaks well of the SGA to facilitate it. Contact from constituents always have an impact."

But Scorsone added that even while he supports lower tuition, it will be an uphill climb this year to get price reductions through the state legislature.

For students who may not remember the names of their senators and representatives, Rogers said SGA will provide a map showing districts and names of legislators.

One UK student, biology sophomore Bryan Mason, can't wait to offer his advice to his legislator.

"Most of us cannot readily accept this large increase in tuition so fast," he said.

Mason said his first question to the legislator will be, "Do you all stop to consider the little guy in this situation?"

Students also may call the hotline from home. The number is (800) 372-7181.

ton police had no record of a call from UK police about the prowler Tuesday night. This does not mean that a call was not placed, McComas said.

Carver and Gardner identified the prowler as a white male with medium-length hair. They have noticed him three times on their porch and, each time, he was dressed in black.

He also has been spotted by neighbors, Carver said.

American soldiers dwindle in Somalia

By Terry Leonard
Associated Press

MOGADISHU, Somalia — Beside the blue-green sea, in a port below the crumbling walls of an old prison, American soldiers work feverishly toward the day they leave this inhospitable land of biting sun and angry gunmen.

The dusty, squalid streets of the fractured capital once teemed with Americans in their armored personnel carriers, and U.S. helicopters ruled the skies.

At the peak, there were 25,000 American servicemen and women in Somalia, providing security to feed the millions facing starvation after civil war, anarchy and famine left the nation in ruins and killed 350,000 of its people.

Yesterday, only 3,228 of the American soldiers, Marines and airmen who first arrived in December 1992 remained ashore — and most were packing. In about three weeks, America's military role in Somalia will be a memory and another chapter on lessons learned for future missions of mercy.

Col. Steve Rausch, the American military spokesman, said all the soldiers and their equipment are scheduled to be gone by March 25, six days before President Clinton's March 31 deadline.

Many of the vehicles that tried and failed to keep the peace in Mogadishu are being hoisted down at the port for the long trip home. Helicopters that once patrolled the city's skies are being sealed in plastic sheeting to protect them from the corrosive salt air on the return voyage.

"When we left the Gulf, the men felt a lot of pride and patriotism," said Spc. Roy Poe of Springville, Ala., a 25-year-old veteran of Operation Desert Storm during the Gulf War.

"Now there is still a feeling of pride in being an American soldier, but it is really frustrating to feel it has been fruitless here, that it will be back to where it was in six months," he added.

"We see children we came here to feed and they are the ones who are throwing rocks at us and yelling curse words at us in our own language. It is not a sign that they feel very much gratitude," said Poe.

As he talked, Poe's comrades with the 4th Infantry Division's aviation brigade wrapped a Cobra helicopter gunship in white plastic until the lethal bird of prey resembled and oversized Christmas present.

Most of the men and women will leave aboard ferries headed for Mombassa, Kenya, and then catch flights home. Others will board huge C-5A aircraft for the long flight back to the United States.

Under a leasing arrangement with the United Nations, the Americans will leave eight helicopter gunships, 30 M-60 tanks and 80 armored personnel carriers behind with coalition forces in an attempt to help bridge the gap created by the withdrawal of American military might.

They'll also leave a few other vehicles burned and punctured by hostile fire along Radio Mogadishu Road, grim reminders of the disastrous Oct. 3-4 battle that left 18 Americans dead and convinced Washington to abandon Somalia.

He pulled out of a search for a chancellor position at the University of Missouri in 1992 and also withdrew his name from consideration as a presidential candidate at the University of Nebraska in 1990.

Hemenway said he "has 20 years invested in the University of Kentucky" and would not take a decision to leave lightly.

Hemenway also said he is not currently involved in any searches for positions at other universities.

Subbaswamy says Fertig's honor also says a lot about the professors at UK.

"It shows we are getting good faculty members who would usually see at higher institutions."

Fertig has been a professor at UK since 1991. He received a bachelor's degree from Princeton University and completed his graduate work at Harvard.

UK Senior Challenge Historical Marker Project

"Senior Challenge is our opportunity as the class of 1994 to leave our mark on the University. For a modest contribution of $19.94 we can start a tradition that will last forever."
— Jeff Brassow

Senior Challenge Co-Chair

"Hopefully all of us as graduating seniors will come to realize that we can make a substantial difference in the future of UK by making this important donation to Senior Challenge. The signs chosen as the senior gift will give past, present, and future students a glimpse of the rich history of the University of Kentucky."
— Ann Hall
Communications Senior
Senior Challenge Co-Chair

"As a classmate and a senior who is looking forward to our graduation ceremony, I encourage each of you to contribute to the UK Senior Challenge. This gift will allow both past and future students to better appreciate the significant history of our institution. No greater statement could be made by our class than a contribution to show our support of the University of Kentucky."
— Lance Dawdy
Management & Marketing Senior
President, UKSGA

Our University is set apart from others by a spirit that is rich in history and tradition...one that echoes the past and holds promise for the future.

Through the Historical Markers project, a series of signs will be erected on campus. These historical markers will denote some of the many milestones of the University.

You will be contacted by a fellow member of the Class of '94 sometime in the coming weeks. Help the Class of '94 leave its mark on the U of K campus by contributing to UK Senior Challenge. Anyone interested in volunteering for UK Senior Challenge call 257-6288.
