UK expands plastic surgery to meet demand

By Kenny Colston

In response to the increasing local and national popularity of cosmetic medical procedures, UK's cosmetic-surger division is moving off campus. "Every year, for the past eight to 10 years, we've seen an increase in people wanting cosmetic surgeries, in reflection of a national trend," said Sherry Lackey, a clinical manager for Cosmetic Surgery Associates, which is part of UK's plastic and reconstructive surgery division.

This increase patients led to the cosmetic-surgery division move to UK Healthcare East on Prosperous Place, which opened several months ago.

Prosperous Place, which opened several months ago.

"Our patients complained of having parking issues and campus being a little far to travel," said Dr. Henry Vasconez, chief plastic surgeon of UK's plastic surgery division. "We moved in order to get closer to our patients."

A second expansion of the cosmetic-surgery center is set to open in the building in January, Lackey said.

The increasing popularity of cosmetic surgery, which was the impetus for the move, reflects a national trend. More than 10 million people had cosmetic procedures — including surgical and non-surgical procedures — performed during 2005, reflecting a 222 percent increase over the past cight years, according to the American Board of Plastic Surgery.

Reconstructive-surgery procedures, such as casses with burn victims, are still performed at Chan-

Surgery.

Reconstructive-surgery procedures, such as cases with burn victims, are still performed at Chandler Hospital in the Gill Building. More elective cosmetic surgeries, such as breast augmentation and liposuction, are being performed at the new location.

The UK Chandler Medical Center, like most niversity hospitals, is under non-profit laws. But coording to Vasconez, cosmetic surgery is more university hospitals, is under non-profit laws. But according to Vasconez, cosmetic surgery is more business-oriented.

"Cosmetic surgery is what many business people would call a 'profit-centered' business, 'Vasconez said, 'But the money is used to keep up with advances, to add services— and of course, with any job, you work to eat."

With cosmetic surgery, there is often a direct relationship between doctors and patients, according to Vasconez, since insurance does not cover many surgeries, and so patients pay all expenses out of heir pocket.

Amanda Nelson, news bureau deputy director for public relations at UK, said the relationship between a profit-centered practice and a non-profit medical center isn' complicated. The money from cosmetic surgery procedures helps cover expenses for reconstructive surgeries and other less profitable procedures, she said.

"Many of these patients (of reconstructive surgery) are people who are uninsured or underinsured," Nelson said in an e-mail. "UK Healthcare takes losses on those cases, and the money used from cosmetic procedures compensates for those losses."

The revenue obtained also goes into the general from cosmetic procedures compensates for those losses."

The revenue obtained also goes into the general pool for the hospital and usually helps pay for other services, Nelson said.

UK isn't the only university taking advantage of this upward trend in cosmetic surgery. Many of UK's benchmarks are doing the same.

At Ohio State University, applications for the plastic-surgery residency program have increased. For the 2007 program, more than 160 medical-school seniors from across the world applied, compared to only 100 for the 2006 program, said Peggy Grafmiller, the program coordinator for the residency, From the 160 applicants, 50 will be interviewed, and only two will be taken for the residency. "Every year, more students apply — 160 are the

To schedule a pickup, send an e-mail with the subject "Winter Break Shuttle" to ukparkading@lsvukg-du. Include your name, campus address, campus phone number or cell phone number and the date, time and location where you would like to be picked up. Pick-ups should be scheduled at least 48 hours in advance, and a representative from Parking and Transportation Services will call to confirm.

"People are just so stressed with finals and packing, it's just one less thing they have to worry about," Balding said.

standard that black women are subjected to.

The black standard of beauty is apparent in any rap or even R&B music video on the air. These music video seem to have no qualma about featuring the stereotypical black woman with a "big behind" and a waist small enough to put Batibe to shame. Though these videos have been highly criticized for their misogynistic misrepresentation of black women, among other things, they still manage to further the notion that this is the ideal woman. As a result, men believe women are sup-posed to look that way, and females wish they did. Nonetheless, there are more prob-

The object of affection, the main character or the featured girl will routinely be light-skinned and long-haired.

This aesthetic value is one that was internalized by the black culture back in the days of slavery. Slave women with light skin, long or wavy hair, and European or white features were allowed to work in the house; meanwhile, women with brown or dark skin and features specific to blacks (e.g. wider facial features and kinky hair) were made to work in the fields.

Finis racial categorization has brought on what is termed as the Lily Complex, defined as the belief that one has to shift, mask or obscure one has to shift, mask or obscure one has to shift, mask or obscure one's physical appearance to conform to the standards of society in order to be thought of as beautiful.

But the standards don't stop there. Because blacks are in the minority and the dominant race in this country is white, black females are subject to be judged by the white standard of beauty as well. There is little representation in the media of minority women in major roles, and the ones that are present have a tendency to be consistent with the white

Even so, TV and magazines do not have the only role in projecting standards of beauty. Images of picturesque beauty are thrust into the receptive minds of young girls before they even become aware of what body image or self-esteem is.

As a society, our fixation with beauty is also prevalent in such innocent things as the fairy tales we tell to our children. Cinderella, Sleeping Beauty, and Snow White are all examples of beautiful fairy-tale figures that live happily ever after. They are also all white. Sadty, black women are not personified in these fairy tales, and so black girls are not seeing themselves in an optimistic light. Because the "beautiful princess" and "handsome prince" are rarely ever black, impressionable black children may have a hard time associating beauty with the color of their own skin.

So where does all of this leave

So where does all of this leave the girl who fits neither the black standard of beauty nor the white standard? Unless she comes from a strong base and is self-assured, she will undoubtedly fall prey to the willes of society.

I have been fortunate enough to realize that I possess my own kind of beauty, despite what the media says it should be. My hope for you is that you will do the same. Kayla Charleston is a journalism freshman. E-mail opinions@kykernel.com. So where does all of this leave Russ Williams questioned the motives of unions working with UK staffers in a Dec. 7 Kernel article, but I question Williams brotives.

Williams voted to approve the change in the governing regulations that blocked staff members from having any administrative functions at UK.
That wrecked our idea from the start and made sure the Staff Senate was never going to have any real say at UK.
When I presented the living-wage request to the Staff Senate on behalf of the low-paid workers, Williams spoke on behalf of the administration and against the living-wage increase request in the Senate.

Williams was also present at both of the recent trustee meetings and voted to approve the cut in staff disability benefits. He never protested and has never brought this cut in benefits to the attention of

Russ obviously has an anti-worker agenda, so it is no surprise that he is against the union.

I am still working to protect benefits and improve UK pay scales, and for that reason I have fight for my fellow workers, as other representatives seem to be blocking our interests.

As president of one of the local unions work-ing with the UK staff in its efforts to gain recogni-tion as a union, I would like to respond to Board of Trustees member Russ Williams' remarks in the Dec. 7 Kernel article.

working with the UK staffers. Our motives are consistent with all of our efforts on behalf of employees — we wish to provide them with a vehicle that gives them status to negotiate their pay and working conditions. The staffers involved came to us to aid them in accomplishing this goal.

"It's an attempt for the unions to get our employees' money." Williams said in the Kernel article. I reject this assertion and am insulted at it. Would Williams be upset if I suggested his opposition was to ensure his position remained relevant?

vant? Williams also was quoted as saying that "a union's job is to get members to pay dues." Again, I emphasize that our job, contrary to Williams' ascritons, is to provide a vehicle that aids employees in their efforts for fair treatment.

I would also welcome the opportunity to discuss in an open forum the history, role and goals of unions since it seems Williams is lacking in real knowledge on the issue.

Bridgewa-ters that resulted in a questionable call. Bridge-waters appeared to flop, and Jasper was whistled for a technical foul. And how did the UK crowd react? For the remainder of the game, they would boo Bridgewaters every time he touched the ball.

Normally, I would applaud such a loyal response from the UK faithful, but there is one detail that made this situation different. Bridgewaters is a Kentucky kid — he graduated from Adair County High School in Columbia, Ky.—and this game was his homecoming. He was playing in front of his family and friends for perhaps the only time in his entire college-basket-ball career.

UK basketball fans are supposed ong the classiest in the country. Cla UK basketball fans are supposed to re-among the classiest in the country. Classy fans don't boo one of Kentucky's own for making a heads-up basketball play. Bridgewaters handled the situation by leading a Chattanooga chadere that cut a 30-point Kentucky lead all the way down to single digits, and not once did he react to the chorus of boos that came from the hostile crowd. His display of class should be applauded, read hosefulle IW fans took note. crowd. His display of class should and hopefully UK fans took note.

SG expansion plans would benefit graduate students

The article about the Graduate Student Congress in Friday's Kernel should be an eye-opener for all people interested in student-body governments at UK.

For Student Government, it should be a clear ments at UK.

For Student Government, it should be a clear sign that there is a large group at this university that does not feel represented by the body that claims it is "committed to creating, supporting and maintaining activities and programs that unify our campus and serve the student body." For the GSC, it should show that there are people who are interested in graduate-student issues, even if it is only to attack SG. For the administration, it is a notice that graduate students are unifying, voicing their concerns with the state of affairs at this university and committed to doing something about it.

their concerns with ris whate of attrains at rins university and committed to doing something about it.

But most of all, it should be a call to everyone that there is a desperate need for SC to be restructed and expanded. The GSC has grown, and there is some interest from students, but it would take years for it to receive the same standing in the university as Comost notably with its voice in the university as Comost notably with its voice in the control of the con

One of the most consistent areas for the Cats in the game — and the rest season — was their defense. UK held IU to 30.6 percent shooting — the Hoosiers took 72 shots and missed 50 of them — and played its best defense in the game's final minutes.

After IU's Joey Shaw hit a lay-up with 1:59 remaining to pull the Hoosiers for the rest of the game with a block and a steal, and by forcing two tough 3-point attempts.

Long-distance futility was a problem for IU throughout the game. The Hoosiers went 4-of-25 from behind the

"We really felt like we did a good job of contesting shots," Smith said. "They took a lot of threes, 25 of them, so we knew they were a good 3-point shooting team. We really had to be out on them and contest their shots."

As the Cats did a soid job of locking down the Hoosiers on defense, they allowed IU to hang around with offensive rebounds.

IU had 22 offensive characteristics.

IU had 22 offensive rebounds — two more than they had on the defensive end — which led to 14 points.

On one plan they had on the defensive end — which led to 14 points.

On one plan 152-48, Smith could be heard us seading 52-48, Smith could be heard us to a single sear a pelling at his team to box out as IU's Earl Calloway stepped up to the free-throw line.

When Calloway's short missed, DJ.
White, who led the Hoosiers with 23 points and nine rebounds, tipped in the rebound.

"That's definitely one of our prob-rebound.

"That's definitely one of our prob-lems, giving up second shots," said junior center Randolph Morris, who had his sec-ond double-double of the season with 16 points and 10 rebounds. "That's how they stayed in the game, with so many second and third attempts."

I'U coach Kelvin Samson said he thought his team did enough to win except put the ball in the basket.

"When you are on the road — we did two of the three things we needed to dot og et a win — you have to defend, you have to rebound, and you have to make shots," Sampson said. "I thought we deshots," Sampson said. "I thought we deshots," Sampson said. "I thought we rebounded well, enough to win. I thought we rebounded well, enough to win. We just didn't make shots."

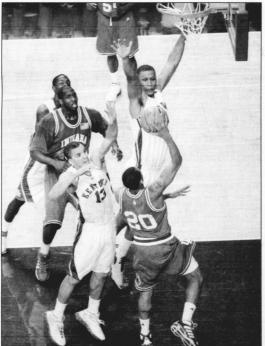

With the win, the Cats beat a team that destroyed them by 26 points last searson. It was their closest margin of victory of the year.

Nonetheless, UK did win a game that many, including the team, felt they had to win.

"I think the weight has definitely win.

"I think the weight has definitely been taken off our shoulders," Morris said. "It feels good to win a close game against a very solid team and one of our rivals. It was definitely a statement for us to pull out a close one under pressure."

a big play defensively."

Yeah, and he saved your butt

a oig play ucleissvery. Yeah, and he saved your but too. Ramel.
The point here is this: The Cats didn't make those two key plays because they were necessarily better than IU. They made them because they were more desperate. The Cats had to win on Saturday, or this great desperation would have turned the Commonwealth into a state of Great Depression. So instead of Great Depression, the state gets Civil War. With one rival down, the rival looms on the schedule. I hear the Cardinals are coached by some guy who used to live in Lexington. And they tell me that UK and U of L don't have such a good relationship right now will be much the same as UK's against Indiana. Two evenly-matched rivals. And games like that usually come down to two things. Being at home and being despate.

things: Being at home and being desperate.

The game is at Freedom Hall, but UK is unquestionably more desperate. With a loss, big brother will have been swept by little brother in the three big nose. — football and both men's and women's basketball. That won't fly in Big Blue Nation.

So, as big as the win over Indiana was, the Cats need to beat Louisville. Desperately.

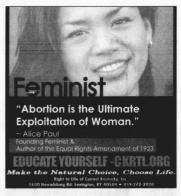

Junior forward Randolph Morris and senior forward Bobby Perry attempt to block a shot by Hoosier junior guard A.J. Ratliff.

IT'S THE FINALS COUNTDOWN

After more than 100 days, the fall semester is almost over. All that remain are the dreaded final examinations — and all the stress that goes along with them. But you can't spend every second studying, right? Go ahead, sit back and take a few minutes to relax with a crossword puzzle or a sudoku. And if you can't remember when your finals are, there's a schedule on page 2.
