

Scene 2. (Enter Augustus Simony L.)
Jonathan - Look ee here Heow (clow clow)

Augustus (aside) A country bumpkin. I suppose I must reblice him. Well sir what do you want?

Jonathan - Where'd you gib so many finer clothes?

Augustus. You are disposed to be impertinent -

Jonathan - Betton you'd pay about four dollars for ^{that} hat?

Augustus. You are an impertinent puppy, Sir; and I have a mind to cane you.

Jonathan - Want you starched & stowed agin the fence ^{to} chry?

Augustus. I forgive you for your impertinence for you are doubtless persaware that I am an English Probleman.

Jonathan - aroful Blim about the middle guess you ^{are} hungo

Augustus. I despise such low-bred fellows take that - (Strikes him with his cane Jonathan takes away the cane & swarthes his hat over his eyes)

Jonathan - a goblin jest konim out of the shubb.

Augustus. You shall pay dearly for this (exit -)

Scene Third.

(Miss Brown and Augustus discovered seated)

Miss Brown - Must I go to England?

Augustus - Of course I would prefer, my dear Elizabeth, that we should go back to my own country, and live in my own house - my grand mansion; but if you do not wish to go Elizabeth we will not - I will build you a beautiful house here in your own native land, and we will be very happy.

Miss Brown - What is your advice dear Augustus?

Augustus (aside) The old fool! the money is what I wanted

(to Miss Brown) & to Elizabeth. I would not do that. You know not at what hour disasters may overtake us and I may lose all I have. (aside) which is not much. Then, how nice it would be Elizabeth, to have your purse to fall back upon

I hope you will forgive me for speaking so plainly, but I speak for your happiness as well as the happiness of myself. Indeed, I already have fears of losing some of my property in England. If I should lose it, with your aid it can be requisite. Oh, my dear Elizabeth, do not part with your money Your brother & sister can get along. They are young while you are - that is they are able to work for a living. You will not dispose of your property in that way will you?

Miss Brown - nothing but that which is right & proper Augustus. (Sits his chair close to her & takes her hand)

My dear Elizabeth you have shown me favor; now let me if you will consent to our union. You have long delayed your answer on but all the while I have felt that you loved me - I have felt that we congenial spirits - say the word now Elizabeth & make me happy - say that you will be mine

(Miss Brown rests her head on his shoulder)

Miss Brown - Oh Augustus!

Jonathan - I got that on that straightened yet
Augustus - How dare you intrude upon us?

Miss Brown (Jonathan) Miss Brown - a few minutes Augustus. Yes you insolent fellow; get out or I will kick
you out. (Jonathan ~~Miss~~ Miss Brown)

Jonathan - I dare get a ten-acre field in turnips.

Augustus. Go you body or I shall cane you.

Jonathan - get through with your courtin. (Exit Jonathan)

Augustus - It is provoking that we must be interrupted by that Greenhorn, I wonder that your brother would consent to have such a person about the house.

Miss Brown - Will you continue in the same strain?

Augustus. My dear Elizabeth - I had asked you to be mine and was awaiting my answer you had consented commenced to speak I will repeat the question.

Miss Boson - She talk that way.

Augustus (aside) What a Confounded old fool!
(Aloud) Light of my life - Star of my future - dearest Elizabeth!

Miss Boson - Those beautiful words.

Augustus. Dear Elizabeth - will you consent to make me happy? will you be my wife.

Enter Jonathan help me get her out. Augustus. Stand aside! go into the probability?

Miss Boson - You may proceed.

Augustus. Our words will have to be short - and to the point - Will you consent to marry me?

Miss B. (Augustus takes her in his arms) Boson of a nobleman.

Enter Jonathan - One of us look an awful like you

Augustus (in a passion) God you shall pay for that
