Open Letter To Mr. Ruby

Mr. Earl Ruby, Sports Editor
The Louisville Courier-Journal
Louisville, Ky.

Dear Mr. Ruby:

Regarding your article of Sunday, Jan. 15, entitled "Second Guessing" in which you took Kernel Sports Editor Tom Diskin to task for alleged second guessing on the Orange Bowl and Tennessee game, I think you owe Tom a very definite apology.

Firstly, Tom was not second-guessing. He was reporting what he saw at Cocoa and Miami Beach.

Secondly, you said that Tom had plenty of time to report the fact that the team was overtrained. Ours is not a daily, Mr. Ruby. Our last edition before the holidays was on Friday, Dec. 16. The first edition after the holidays was on Jan. 6. There were no editions between those and no opportunity for Tom to write what he saw. And what if he had? Would Coach Bryant have stopped training the boys so hard? I doubt it. I think your criticism is unfounded, Mr. Ruby. I know Tom Diskin as a cool, level-headed writer who does not readily criticize until he is sure of himself.

We students at UK have a lot of faith in Coach Bryant and appreciate all he has done for football here. We don't want to see him leave. But when we see the football players limping around the campus with various injuries we have our proof that all work and no play leaves a crippled hallplayer.

Second-guessing doesn't bring laurels to writers, but honest reporting is one thing pounded into our heads in the Journalism school from our freshman year until graduation.

Sincerely,
BOB COX, Managing Editor
The Kentucky Kernel

More Student Drama

A demand for a student dramatic organization on the campus has been needed for a long time.

A student organization, the logical source of which might be the English Club, should be formed and should be used as an experimental ground for all students of the University interested in acting, directing, producing, and other phases of theatrical work.

A group of this sort would not conflict with Guignol which is, as it should be, an organization for major productions. Con-

There Is A Reason

Believers of the Orange Bowl game still rage on all sides. Newspapers from Chicago to Miami, including a Lexington paper, have discussed the lack of spirit displayed there by the University of Kentucky. And truth, as the hackneyed expression goes, is what hurts.

A Miami writer stated that our team lacked the "old college try" and that our cheerleaders were unable to gain even decent response from the Kentucky delegation. The Chicago paper, according to reports, used the word "cheap" to describe the school that refused to send its hand to the bowl and forced the cheerleaders to appeal to the public for funds in order to attend.

The local writer blames the failure to send the band for at least some of the bad luck the team suffered. Certainly when a high school band struck up a tune startlingly similar to the Tennessee fight song after the Wildcats' first touchdown, team spirit wasn't much improved.

We believe the ultimate truth is this—the University of Kentucky has almost lost sight of the human factor in education. Practically every activity has become impersonal and regimented. Student opinion is seldom asked on any issue. Twice in the last two years, SGA has approved major projects which have been cancelled by the administration with little reason.

It is time the University got over its growing pains and away from mechanization. If it is to remain prominent it must have a satisfied and spirited student body; one which can make more of its own decisions. Until that time students will display the same indifferent attitude found in all high-regimented and non-representative organizations.

Every really progressive school has a strong student body which is active in every aspect of its program. They have a feeling that the school is theirs as well as the staff's and that their decisions are of some importance in its administration. In turn they are critical of their governing groups, student newspapers and other organizations, but without the cynical attitude so apparent here.

SGA will remain ineffective, the Kernel will print routine news, the band will amount to a few credit hours, the athletic teams will resemble machines and an ultra-conservative University of Kentucky will slowly shrink if something isn't done to improve matters.

This is not the only university which has grown rapidly since the war—it was a case of necessity. But when the present surplus of prospective students ends, it must compete with other institutions. The adverse publicity from the Orange Bowl fiasco may hurt more than expected—bowl officials have to fill a stadium, and in years to come that will require color, spirit and pageantry from schools attending. It would be well to have a reputation for it.

Scabard and Blade, honorary ROTC organizations; a member of Lances, junior men's leadership society; Alpha Phi Omega, national service fraternity; the Profr Pre-medical Society; and the UK student Government Association, is the typical 1950 male student.

So also is Lexington the typical city of Kentucky and the typical soldier of World War II.

When I was a student the typical male student wasn't good enough for the social fraternities and unaffiliated men outnumbered the fraternity members by 3 to 1. Mr. Bassett is no doubt a fine young man, but is he typical?

Sincerely,
Oswald Jett

Letters To The Editor
An Ark

Dear Editor:

Can you tell me whether the University has let a contract for the construction of a bridge across the botanical gardens?

I have not heard any discussion to this effect, but surely such an enterprising university as this has long recognized the need for one.

In view of the current deluges of rain, which make the river from the west entrance of the gardens to the Fine Arts building practically unfordable, the authorities have undoubtedly perfected some plan to save the lives of hundreds of our shorter students.

Perhaps a quick course in swimming could be offered to non-swimmers as a temporary measure. I do not ask this for myself, as my height (6 ft., 1 in.) allows me to make the daily voyage without resorting to such exercise, but many students are not so fortunate.

If the University has not made any plans, may I inquire where I go to get a franchise to operate a ferry?

It is my intention to register an LST and convert it into a small scale luxury liner, for the comfort of students desiring to meet their classes at the Fine Arts building. This craft would be equipped with a snack bar, juke box, and a lounge with the latest travel booklets on the Caribbean.

This falling, I intend to construct a small raft with a sail sewn from one of the curtains in the Art Department. This would be a slower method of transportation, but nevertheless effective. For the overflow of students I had thought of distributing pogo sticks equipped with fog horn and lights.

Please inform me if you think this undertaking is worthwhile, or if the University has taken any measures on this line. Perhaps they could issue each student a pair of stilts, such as are sometimes used in Holland and other countries.

Yours for a somewhat less Atlantic Botanical Gardens,
John W. Tully

Librarians Say 'Alas' Exams Come To Pass

By Joe Lee

Relax. Go to a movie. You'll pass. The Kernel has just learned the scoop.

Obviously, a lot of people don't believe they will pass. The mad rush is on at the library. All hours of the day and night from here on out the study tables will be groaning under the weight of the elbows of tired students trying, blear-eyed to read a pertinent morsel of knowledge. (Pause for breath.)

Most of them will be trying to do in one or two days what they should have put off until they had only one or two days in which to do it. (It makes sense. Read it again.)

According to Dr. Lawrence Thompson, director of libraries, there will be no extended library hours this semester to take care of the rush. Last year when the library stayed open extra hours no one showed up to study.

Everybody was going to the movies, or somewhere. Everybody was sure everybody was going to pass, and as far as we know, everybody did pass.

Library circulation desk employees say that more books are coming in than are going out. It seems that

Latest Art Exhibit Shows Work Of Former Students

A collection of paintings by 20 former University art students is now on exhibit at the art gallery of the Fine Arts Building. Prof. Edward W. Bannels, head of the Department of Art, has announced.

The exhibition, which will run until Feb. 5, numbers 42 pieces, according to Professor Bannels, and includes 19 water colors and oils, 15 lithographs and drawings, 15 pieces of ceramics, two weavings and one woodcut. Also being shown are 11 paintings by a current student, John Gordon of Danville, and a collection of drawings by Chicago Artist Edmund Giesbert.

All artists whose works are featured in the former students exhibit attended the University within the past ten years while the art department was located in the Panhouser Biological Sciences building. According to Prof. Clifford Anny, member of the art department who is directly in charge of the exhibit, this display is more or less a history of the accomplishment of the UK art department during the last decade.

A number of former students whose works are in the showing are now residing or working in places far remote from Lexington. Former students who have submitted works for the exhibitions are Mrs. Jeanne Browne Craig, Lexington; Mrs. Betty South Jones, Louisville; Mrs. Helen Arnold Byrd, Fairmount; Dr. Ann Calhoun Papp, New York City; Mrs. Margaret Blair, Baltimore; Hollywood, Calif.;

'Easy Chair' Editor DeVoto Calls Writing Hard Work

"Easy Chair" editor, Bernard DeVoto, told an audience of aspiring writers at the Guildford theater Wednesday afternoon that there is nothing easy about the life of a professional writer.

DeVoto, former editor of the Saturday Review of Literature and current editor of the Harper Magazine feature "The Easy Chair," in the first of several talks he is scheduled to make on the campus this week, spoke on professional writing.

"Skill" (in writing), according to DeVoto, "is a product of experience, criticism and intelligence. It develops from controlled, corrected repetitions of an act for which one has some knack." The phrase corrected repetitions means that there is a great deal of work involved in becoming a writer.

Pulitzer Prize-winning historian, DeVoto, who is also a noted novelist, biographer and critic, is on the campus as guest of the University English Department. He is one of the featured speakers of the department's 1949-50 literary-dramatic series.

The Massachusetts author and critic has written a dozen books, the majority dealing with the development of the American West. Among his better known works are "Across the Wide Missouri," which won three national prizes, including the Pulitzer prize for History in 1948; "Mark Twain at Work," and "The Year of Decision."

Dr. Herman E. Spry, head of the UK English department, says DeVoto: "so far as I know, no one has been rash enough to try to tag or classify him. He is a biographer, historian, novelist, literary critic, social critic, short story writer, editor, humorist, satirist and pessimist. But he is not exclusively any one of these. He is an individual, a roarer and a snicker—a deliberate one I think, as deliberate as George Bernard Shaw."

DeVoto was born in Utah and lived until 1930 in the West. He taught English at Northwestern and Harvard universities, but for the past 15 years has been engaged entirely in literary activities. He is now at work on a new novel and a book on the famous explorers, Lewis and Clark.

In the principal address of his visit to the University Thursday night at Memorial Hall, DeVoto discussed the numerous legends surrounding the Webb, or white, In-

Have you ever talked to someone that gets saved in half every night? Isn't bragging to say that I have because it leaves you with a waxy feeling of wondering just who is being fooled. But believe me this girl from Raleigh, N. C. is together and quite well put together, too. Maybe you might remember her as the girl Blackstone saw in half.

Miss 1/2 and 1/2 (shall we call her 1/2). It's all done with illusions, but many times I've seen grown men faint in the audience when the saw starts buzzing down the table. This isn't the half (can't seem to get away from that word) of it though. Miss 1/2 and 1/2 has had some dramatic acting background and it helps to make the groans and screams more like life.

Just between you and me though, wonder what it would be like to go home and have to check to be sure that the rest of you really was there. Just one thing—did anyone see Robert E. Lee riding down "Lee Boulevard" yesterday on his white horse, ummm? Shall we dare?

Oh, poody. Classes are over and we can all look forward to multi fun during jolly old exam week. Yes, I have a psychiatrist! Really, though, when it comes to examinations I get a great deal on the head with a hammer. It feels so good when I sleep.

And as for the radio racket around here, I reckon I'd better hang out a few lines on the old trieprietor and palm it off as publicity or something. It seems that with everyone bracing for the grand ordeal next week there's not much activity around the University Radio station and consequently the chess count is low and there's not a

What with Tennessee lowering the boom once again there doesn't seem to be too much to smile about but maybe the silver lining will shine through some SEC tournament time. And when we get those Vols up here about Feb. 11—well, it'll probably be Katy bar the door. At least that's what we're hoping.

But to return to the (ugh) jokes, here we go one more time. And leading off now about this one.—Patient: Well, Doc, was my operation a success? Voice: Sorry, old man, I'm Saint Peter.

Chaplain: My man, I will allow you five minutes of grace before the electrocution. Condemned Man: Fine. Bring her in. And of course you all know that you can't tell how far a couple have gone in a car by merely looking at the speedometer.

Fresh: Something seems to be wrong with the motor. She: Don't be foolish. Wait until we get off the main highway. Guard to prisoner about to be electrocuted: Do you have any last words? Prisoner: Yeah, I'd like to offer my seat to a lady.

A shoulder strap is a piece of ribbon which keeps a person from becoming a sensation. He: Darling, I'm groping for words. She: Well, you won't find them there. "Just a minute, I'll ask him."

They had been sitting out in the garden together for more than two hours. Finally, he became desperate and leaned over and kissed her. Immediately she began to shriek. "Stop it, please," he begged. "I promise never to do it again."

Man (over the telephone): Doctor. Come quick! My son just swallowed my fountain pen. Doctor: I'll come at once. What are you doing now? Man: Using a pencil.

Dick: That last issue of the joke column must have been pretty good. Albert: How do you know? I thought you never read it.

Dick: I don't, but the writers were kicked out of school. She: I'm perfect. He: I'm practice. Very stern father (sarcastically): Say, young man, it's way past midnight. Do you think you can stay with my daughter all night? Innocent young man: Gosh, I'll have to phone my mother first.

A man and his wife were sitting together in the living room one evening. The phone rang and the man answered. He said: How on earth should I know? Call the Coast Guard. Then he hung up and returned to his newspaper. The wife asked: Who was that, dear? The husband answered: I haven't the slightest idea. Some silly jerk wanted to know if the coast was clear.

Tennessee, Georgia Upset Kentucky Quintet

By Kent Hollingsworth

Time was when a Kentucky could dribble a basketball all over the South without anyone ever coming near him. People used to come and watch Kentucky teams trample the homefolks only to find out how many All Americans Coach Rupp could jam on the floor at one time. But that was long ago.

Noreadays, Kentuckians can't even check up a routine SEC victory without some Southerner wanting to argue about it. Last week, they talked loud, long, and convincingly. The Wildcats, who once rang terror in the hearts of brave men, couldn't scare up a nickle for a cup of coffee. Their long consecutive win streak was spliced at 65 games by a 1-0-69 score.

Of course both defeats can be laughed off as upsets, but many more hard knocks like these and Kentucky's Sugar Bowl crown will be jostled right down over their ears.

The Tennessee loss could easily be expected; a bunch of sophomores who had come through seven straight games with all the pressure of a hydrogen bomb on them, just don't operate like a Swiss watch. They slow down sometimes, speed up at others, their potentialities glimpsed only in flashes of their peak form. And then, Tennessee is no pick-up team.

The Georgia loss is a little harder to explain away however. The Cats had torn Miss State's Maroons into pink ribbons in Owensboro two weeks ago, and the Mississippians had beaten the Bulldogs easily, only due to coast in by a 20 or 30 point margin. Nevertheless they suffered their second SEC defeat in three games, and their first loss to Georgia since 1921 when they scored 25-16.

A start and stop Kentucky team was stopped for the third time in 13 games last Tuesday night, dropping a 71-60 decision to a foaming Bulldog quintet in Athens.

The Cats fought up hill all the way, as Georgia's Schloss, who dumped in 28 points for high scoring honors, kept the Southerners in front almost all the way.

Only once did the Kentuckians pull up even with the Bulldogs, but back from an intermission score of 38-31, the Wildcats tied the eight-time while tacking a lid on the Georgia basket.

However Schloss hit two quick ones, and Rainey swished one from far out to throw cold water on the wily spark Kentucky could turn back during the whole game. Georgia then slowly pulled away, the final 11 point margin being the largest score ever separating the two teams.

Plucky Bobby Watson led the Wildcat scorers with 15 points, followed closely by steady Walt Hirsch who tallied 14. Lever Line was next with 10 markers to his credit.

Big Bill Spivey, operating in front of the home folks in front of the Warner Robbins, was considered nowhere near his best brand of ball, and was playfully darkened by his center's flashy 28 points.

Win One Rupp's riflemen had a hard time finding the range, but once connecting, they spurted ahead to a 61-47 win over the Georgia Tech Engineers last Monday night in Atlanta.

It was a nip and tuck affair throughout the first half, with Tech going ahead 26-24 after the rest period. Spivey tied it up, Barry and Watson made it 40-38, and then Hirsch and Line took over.

The two left-handers fired from all over the court, leaving little puffs of smoke, and left the dejected Engineers far behind as they pushed the Cats out to a 51-40 lead.

Tennessee Volunteers fired the shot heard round the sports world, dropping the Kentuckians dead in their tracks after they had been walking rough shot over SEC teams for the past five years, scoring a sound 66-39 victory last Saturday night in Knoxville.

The Yols hopped out to an early 13-3 lead and kept it pretty close to ten points throughout the entire game. Only once did the Cats twitch showing faint signs of life. Early in the second half, Hirsch and Watson narrowed a 14 point margin down to a 45-39 score, but Tennessee called time out and Burris scored two quick field goals when play resumed to tie the decision.

Big Art Powell and Louisville's Dale Powell undoubtedly played their greatest games for Tennessee. Burris tallied 28 times and controlled both back boards to tie the deciding factor in the game. Powell hit a spectacular percentage of his shots.

K Club Plans Donkey Game

The K Club of the University of Kentucky will sponsor a donkey basketball game in Alumni Gymnasium March 17, it was announced recently by President Jerry Claiborne.

Athletic Director Bernie Shively, Coach Bear Bryant, and other members of the coaching staff will compete against K club members in that figure.

The donkeys will wear rubber shoes and play on a protective tarpaulin covering the floor. The spectacle has not been staged in Lexington in 12 years.

Chlaiborne also stated that plans were being made for a match the following night between two down-town business clubs. Admission price will be $75 for students.

Cats Face DePaul, Notre Dame, Xavier Fives; Next Home Game With Georgia January 28

By Bob Gerhart

The Wildcat eagles, after their recent not-a-100-successful swing against Southeastern Conference competition, tangle with three non-conference foes in six days before a rematch against the Georgia Bulldogs in Alumni Gym on Jan. 28.

The toughies who will be trying to work the old spider-and-fly game on the much-traveled Cats are DePaul, Jan. 21; Notre Dame, Jan. 23; and the Xavier Musketeers on Jan. 26.

The Cats will be out to repeat their earlier 49-47 win when they meet DePaul's hot and cold Blue Demons in the Chicago Stadium tomorrow night in the first game of a twin bill. Loyola, who handed the Cats one of their two defeats last year, meet Toledo in the nightcap.

At the present time, DePaul's record stands at seven wins and seven losses.

Kentucky was behind four points at 41-45 with three minutes left in the first meeting, but came on to edge out the Demons in a hard-fought battle.

Leading the DePaul team is their four-time star guard, Bob Gorfardaric, who has a constant throb in the Kentuckian's side at Louisville and the nation's sportswriters.

Law prohibits a candidate from being elected to more than two consecutive terms as state treasurer of Nebraska.

After dropping four straight games, the Irish romped over DePaul, 50-41, and later topped DePaul, 58-33. Kentucky holds victories over the same teams, but not by as big a margin. The Cats came from behind to edge DePaul, 49-47, and led all the way in winning over Purdue, 65-54.

The sophomore-studied Kentucky team, handicapped by lack of experience, has had to get it the hard way by playing 13 of their first 16 games on foreign courts.

They have played brilliantly in win games they were supposed to lose, and then reversed themselves to drop tilts they were supposed to win. But they have acquired themselves magnificently while before hostile audiences and on unfamiliar hardwoods.

Had the majority of the early games been played before the home-folks in Alumni gym, they might have even a better record than their 3-2 standing at the present time. There's nothing like playing in your own backyard to gain those all-important factors, poise and confidence.

Facing the Musketeers this season, a center-guard, 6-5 Guard Bill Hefner, 6-5 Center Gene Smith, 6-4 Forward-Center Dick Korb, and 6-1 Jim Karthall.

Expressed to be eligible for competition that night is 6-4 Bill Cady, X's No. 2 scorer last season; Guard Leo M. Chamberlain, UK vice-president.

Xavier has three seniors, six juniors, and four sophs on the squad, which averages 6-11.

After the Xavier battle, the Cats return to Lexington for only their fourth home game in their first 17 battles.

On Jan. 28, they are scheduled to meet the Georgia Bulldogs, who pulled one of the biggest upsets in recent years by beating the Blue and White, 71-60, in Athens last Saturday.

The Bulldogs, led by their big 6'8" center Bob Schloss, who poured in 28 points, took a lead in the first minute of play and were never headed, even though the score was tied, 39-29, early in the second half.

From that point on, however, the Georgians were on command with margins running from three to eleven points.

The Bulldogs had dropped a 51-40 decision to Mississippi State a team the Wildcats had trimmed handily, 87-58. But this seemed to make no difference as the "Dogs chewed the Cats viciously to atoms for the many humiliating defeats handed them by Kentucky in the past. It was Georgia's first win over the UK cagers since 1921.

Had the majority of the early games been played before the home-folks in Alumni gym, they might have even a better record than their 3-2 standing at the present time. There's nothing like playing in your own backyard to gain those all-important factors, poise and confidence.

Facing the Musketeers this season, a center-guard, 6-5 Guard Bill Hefner, 6-5 Center Gene Smith, 6-4 Forward-Center Dick Korb, and 6-1 Jim Karthall.

Expressed to be eligible for competition that night is 6-4 Bill Cady, X's No. 2 scorer last season; Guard Leo M. Chamberlain, UK vice-president.

Xavier has three seniors, six juniors, and four sophs on the squad, which averages 6-11.

After the Xavier battle, the Cats return to Lexington for only their fourth home game in their first 17 battles.

On Jan. 28, they are scheduled to meet the Georgia Bulldogs, who pulled one of the biggest upsets in recent years by beating the Blue and White, 71-60, in Athens last Saturday.

The Bulldogs, led by their big 6'8" center Bob Schloss, who poured in 28 points, took a lead in the first minute of play and were never headed, even though the score was tied, 39-29, early in the second half.
