Foot patrol bill withdrawn as questions arise

By NATALIE CAUDILL
Staff Writer

Lawrence Bisig, president of Students for a Better UK, will withdraw his bill proposing a campus foot patrol because of the liability question raised at last week's SGA Senate meeting.

"As far as the lawyer's opinion goes, he advised the Senate to wait until we had documented support from Tom Padgett of the UK police," Kathy Ashcraft, Arts & Sciences senator for Student Government Association and cosponsor of the foot patrol bill, said.

"I can't believe that there's a student on this campus that wants their SGA to take a chance on losing $60,000 worth of student money because the sponsors of this legislation doesn't wish to wait a week for implementation," David Bradford, SGA president, said.

The bill passed the committee by petition and went to the Senate floor on Jan. 25, where it was tabled until this Wednesday's Senate meeting.

SGA lawyer Keith Baker passed out a letter to the SGA Senate advising against passing the bill at the meeting because the group lacked any policy statements indicating it would not use force to help victims, as does the Guardian Angels.

Bradford said he has invited Baker and a representative of Students for a Better UK to a meeting today to discuss the bill and the possibility of reintroducing it. Bisig also said his group may seek funds through the private sector. Bisig, along with former SGA president Jim Dinkle, brought a similar foot patrol bill before an SGA committee last year where it was defeated because of liability problems. However, he said: "There is a difference from the bill proposed last year — SGA would exclusively sponsor the patrol whereas this year the Students for a Better UK is sponsoring the patrol. We felt that this was the best way to handle the liability issue."

Bradford explained the controversy last year: "It came to our lawyer's attention about the foot patrols and with the controversy of the Guardian Angels, he felt convinced that there was a very large liability question and he didn't feel we should be involved with it," he said. "His legal advice was 'Don't sponsor this, it could potentially lose all our $60,000 of student money in a court battle.'"

"Basically, the sponsors of this legislation requested the SGA Senate to support this bill against the advice of our attorney," Bradford said. Bisig, however, said he believes

SGA's problems lie in politics and that is why he is withdrawing the bill from consideration. "It has become so entirely political, and we feel this issue is being mishandled," he said. "I've lost my faith in the system."

Students for a Better UK are also concerned about the passage of a bill financing an escort service. Alan Holt, a member of Students for a Better UK, said he did not understand the reasoning behind the SGA. See PATROL, page 5

Reagan seeks another term as president

By ANNA HARDY
Staff Writer
And the Associated Press

Ronald Wilson Reagan, 38th president of the United States, said in a paid political advertisement last night that he will stand for re-election. And several Kentucky Republican party leaders think he will get what he wants.

The former actor and governor, who will be 73 Feb. 6, announced his fourth bid for the presidency in a TV broadcast from the Oval Office. The Reagan-Bush campaign committee paid about $400,000 to air Reagan's 10:55 p.m. announcement.

Jim Bunning, head of the state Republican party, said in a telephone interview he does not think anyone that the Democrats nominate could beat Reagan. He predicted a good election, with a margin of victory that will be smaller than in the previous election, he said.

He said he thinks Reagan's chances for re-election are "excellent."

Lawrence Bisig, former president of Students for Bunning and an active campus Republican, agreed saying, "There's no one that can beat him."

Bisig said Reagan's strengths are the simple issues he ran on before such as inflation and the gross national product. He has also cured the economic "ills" of this nation, Bisig said.

Reagan's strengths are his ability to communicate with the people of this country and the excellent job he has done during the past three years, Bunning said.

Bunning said the president's biggest problem is the deficit spending that has gone on in the past three years. There will also be an outcry from the Democratic party about the Marines in Lebanon, he said. Bunning said he thinks the problem will be solved in the near future.

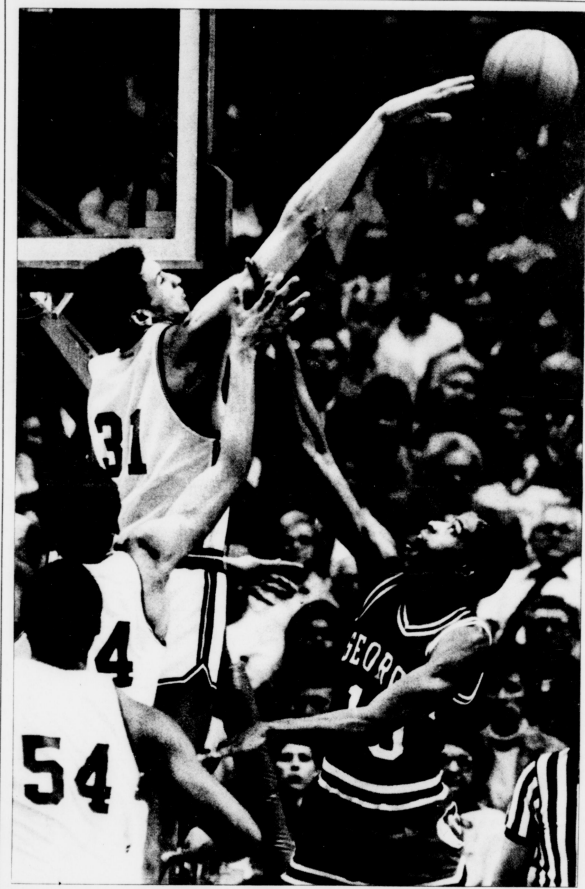

"I would like to see a little more leadership in the area of women's rights," Bisig said.

Bunning said Reagan will carry Kentucky in the election. "I'm going to work very hard to see that he does."

However, Bisig said he did not know whether the president would carry Kentucky or not. He did say that Reagan was strong enough that he carried Kentucky in the last election.

Reagan's strengths in Kentucky are the same as in other states, Bunning said. Kentucky's economy is recovering although it has not taken place as quickly as some other states, he said.

Reagan, who took office owing to stem the tide of ever-increasing government spending and to rebuild the nation's military, was coy to the last, telling GOP officials early in the evening: "We'll trust that everything comes together before the night is over."

Rejection sustained

UK's Sam Bowie blocks the shot of Georgia's Vernon Fleming during Saturday's nationally televised game at Rupp Arena. The Cats defeated the Bulldogs 64-40 on the strength of a second-half scoring flurry. The victory brought the team's record to 15-2 overall and 6-2 in the Southeastern Conference. ## Academically talented children take a specially designed program at UK

By GENIE SULLIVAN
Reporter

They drift into 211 Chemistry-Physics Building on a Thursday afternoon. Some eagerly grab a desk in the front row; others lag behind, savoring the last minute before class begins.

These students do not stamp out their before-class cigarettes or engage in last-minute cramming, like UK students. Many can walk between Sam Bowie's legs. They are third- through eighth-grade students participating in the Enrichment Program for Academically Talented Students, sponsored by the College of Education.

"It's an eight-week program—the students meet once a week for two hours," Molly Sullivan, director of the enrichment program, said. "We have no tests, no grades." At the end of each term instructors write student evaluations for parents.

The program is open to students from Fayette County and its surrounding counties. Eligibility is determined through achievement test scores or satisfactory enrollment in an accelerated program, such as Lexington public school's Quest program.

The classes offered to the students range from aerodynamics to world religions. Basic computer programing was a big draw this Spring, according to Sullivan. It was such a big draw, however, that some students were unable to get into it. Virginia Hill, of Lexington, had been in.

Dental school plan may bring savings of about $1 million

By ANDREW OPPMANN
Editor-in-Chief

A proposal introduced by the presidents of UK and the University of Louisville designed to keep both institutions' dental schools open could save the state about $1 million in expenditures, according to a preliminary report.

In a letter to the Kentucky Council on Higher Education obtained by the Kentucky Kernell, President Otis A. Singletary and UL President Donald Swain said the savings would result from efforts to eliminate unnecessary duplication, identify expenditure reductions and improve efficiency.

The letter, dated Jan. 21, is divided into two sections, the first being decisions that have been agreed upon by the two presidents. A second section outlines problems to be resolved before the Council's April deadline for the final report.

Singletary contacted yesterday, said two separate committees were involved in formulating the specifics of the proposal and estimating the cost savings. The dental schools' deans and a collection of administrators from the universities.

"Swain and I were the recipients of their findings," he said.

The preliminary draft of the Singletary-Swain proposal includes savings in the following areas:

- Elimination of duplication in post-graduate studies — One institution will be assigned lead responsibility for each postgraduate specialty except oral surgery, which the report said "clearly needs to be maintained on both campuses." A savings of about $25,000 should result from this move.
- Establishing a single departmental chair in most departments — The presidents agreed upon having a single departmental chair in all departments except oral surgery. The Deans' Committee recommended moving immediately to accomplish ish the proposal in periodontics and prosthodontics and asked that a joint UK-UL committee be appointed to nominate a candidate in pedodontics.

About $354,000 should be saved by the move, the report said.

Unifying continuing education programs — The two existing dental continuing programs will be merged into one statewide program with one director, appointed immediately, to coordinate and implement the program. The presidents said the idea will "significantly improve the quality of dental continuing education programs."

Although the programs are essentially self-supporting, the idea should result in a savings of about $50,000.

The letter also said the schools will be receiving increased income from higher tuition rates already approved by the Council — about $390,000 by 1985-86.

Singletary and Swain also said they hope to increase research money from external sources by about $50,000 and the dental clinics will raise another $50,000 through increased fees.

The presidents recommended the establishment of a joint advisory group composed of representatives of the Kentucky Dental Association, the Council, the two universities and other appropriate groups to recommend future enrollment levels at the schools.

Topics still under discussion include student service, such as recruiting and admissions, visitations, publications, advising and counseling, curriculum modifications and sharing human and physical resources. Agreements in these areas could result in savings of between $300,000 to $400,000.

In addition, the presidents said about $90,000 of additional revenue will be generated by the two schools.

Appalachian Center director to be next president of Berea

By SACHA DEVROOMEN
Staff Writer

John B. Stephenson, director of the Appalachian Center and special assistant to the chancellor for academic development at UK, has been elected President of Berea College. Stephenson, who has been at UK for 17 years, said he could not resist the call of Berea College. "Berea is a very special place, it has a certain magnetism," he said. "It represents many things I believe in."

"Berea represents something different from UK," Stephenson said. "Berea is privately funded, students pay no tuition, it allows young people from the region who cannot afford to go to college to get quality education."

"Berea College requires its students to work ten hours a week. 'This is a principle I believe in very strongly,' Stephenson said.

He will be replacing Willis Weatherford, who intends to retire at the end of June 1984. Berea College has about 1,600 students with 80 percent coming from Appalachia or from around Kentucky. It is also strongly oriented toward interracial education.

Stephenson said a replacement for director of the Appalachian Center is under discussion, but it will not be resolved for a few months. "I have received assurance that the Appalachian Center will be continued in strength," he said.

Art Gallaher, chancellor of the Lexington campus, said he is not sure Stephenson's position in the chancellor's office will be continued.

JOHN B. STEPHENSON

It was a one-year position concerned with student recruitment, he said.

"He (Stephenson) is beautifully qualified, ideally suited for the job," Gallaher said about Stephenson's new position. "We hate to lose him."

Otis Singletary also commented on Stephenson's appointment. "He is a first-rate academic man," he said. "He has held several important administrative appointments here at UK, and has a particular interest in the Appalachian region. In my opinion, he is a natural for the Berea job."

Stephenson's wife, Jane, who is currently the director of the Human Relations Center will also leave UK. She said she feels some sadness about leaving, but is looking forward to the challenge at Berea. Jane Stephenson will be working at Berea on a volunteer basis. "I will be applying some of my knowledge to work with students there," she said.

Chicago poet to speak tonight

By SALLAJA MALEMPATI
Reporter

Haki Madhubuti, one of the most widely read poets in the world, will be the speaker tonight in a program titled "Poetry to the People."
The program, sponsored by the mayor's office, the parks and recreation department and the English department will be held at 7:30 p.m. at Carver Community Center.

The Black Graduate Students, with financial support from the Black Studies Committee, are sponsoring a reception after the program. Robert Hemenway, chairman of the English department, said.

Madhubuti, formerly known as Don L. Lee, will read his poetry and talk about how poets write poems.

Hemenway said. "He will talk about black poets who are writing today and addressing their poetry to the black community," he said.

Madhubuti's poetry "uses language that is very accessible to all people," Hemenway said. "His poetry is not the type that is meant to be locked up on a dusty shelf."

A native of Chicago, Madhubuti was very prominent during the 1960s in the Black Arts Movement. Hemenway said. According to Chester Grundy, director of Minority Student Affairs, "Madhubuti is probably one of the most significant poets to emerge from the Black Arts Movement, and he had three or four very popular works arise from that time." These works include Think Black, Black Pride, and Don't Cry, Scream.

Grundy said he thinks Madhubuti is "one of the best selling authors of poetry and non-fiction." He has more than 250,000 copies of his works in print.

Madhubuti is now residing in Chicago and is the editor of Third World as well as the director of the Institute of Positive Education.

The poet also will be involved in other activities while he is at UK. These include a workshop titled "Culture Consciousness in the Campus," which will be held on Feb. 1, 3 p.m., at 206 Student Center. The workshop will deal with popular culture and its impact on students, Grundy said. The keynote lecture, "Approaching the 21st Century: What Will Be the Role of Black People?" is scheduled for 8 p.m. the same day at 118 Classroom Building.

money totals identified in our final report will become a reallocation pool for the use of the two institutions to strengthen other programs areas essential to economic development in the commonwealth, as recommended in the MGT report," the letter said.

The Singletary-Swain proposal was submitted to the Council as an effort to prepare a report prepared by the consulting firm MGT of America that recommended closing one of the state's two dental schools, saving about $2 million a year.

Singletary said the letter will provide the Council with an estimate of the money the proposal will save, in addition to keeping both schools open.

"I think that's what the Council on Higher Education will be interested in," he said. "They made it very clear that they wanted us to report the dollars saved . . . We are responding to the request on the dollars saved."

"We were instructed to come back with a report at the next meeting," Singletary said. "They wanted to know what we were going to do and what savings would be involved."

He said he feels the cooperation between the state's two major universities in formulating the proposal was significant.

Jack Dulworth, the Council's student representative and a finance junior at UK, agreed. "There's no question on the value," he said. "You can't put a price tag on the cooperation between the two presidents. Hopefully, that will filter over into other institutions, both public and private."

"The MGT report said we would save $2 million a year if we close one of the dental schools," he said. "I figure with keeping both open, we will be saving over a million—I think it would be well worth it."

The Council will meet at 10 a.m. Thursday in Frankfort to discuss the proposal.

standing in line to sign her seventh grader up for the programming class, when a parent claimed she had taken the last space available.

"It brought back memories of standing in line of class registration (in college)," Hill said. "You never know."

Though some students were unable to get into the classes they wanted, the response to the whole program was favorable.

Deanna Hackworth, a Lexington resident, said she heard about the program from a counselor at Tates Creek Junior High School, where her 12-year-old son, Kirk, is in the seventh grade.

"It's (the enrichment program) really outstanding," Deanna Hackworth said. Kirk said he took a science class during the fall term. It "sparked his interest incredibly," she said. "He's gone off on his own, reading extra material."

Class instructors are UK professors, graduate students, undergraduate students and area professionals. Some are even parents of the children enrolled in the program.

"I've had a child . . . participate in the program, and I was pleased," said Janet Blank, an elementary education junior who teaches "Algae, Mushrooms and Lichens" this term. Like other instructors, Blank will be taking her class on field trips and bringing in guest lecturers.

New ratings to feature intramurals

As a response to overall campus interest in intramural basketball, the Kentucky Kernel will present a weekly top 10 poll in each of the six divisions of the intramural league. The rankings will appear every week during the intramural regular season.

The top 10 squads from each division will be selected by a seven-member voting committee consisting of representatives from the intramural department, an intramural basketball official and a Kernel sports writer.

The ranking list will include team names, standings and total votes.

Wildcats down Georgia with second half outburst

By CONCEPCION LEDEZMA
Senior Staff Writer

While snow flurries were developing outside, the UK Wildcats were storming inside Rupp Arena Saturday with a 16-0 second-half spurt to overcome the patient Georgia Bulldogs, 64-40.

UK's 6-11 center Melvin Turpin led the five-and-a-half minute spurt with 10 points. He finished with a game-high 18 points and tied teammate Sam Bowie with a game-high nine rebounds.

"The guards (Jim Master and Roger Harden) were making good passes on fast breaks to break the game wide open," Turpin said.

"I personally feel that this was our best transition game of the season," said Bowie, who added four points in the spurt. He finished with 12.

Turpin, Bowie, and forward Kenny Walker (who had 11 points) made up from the inside — in terms of scoring — what was lacking on the outside.

"Our problem continued on our outside shooting," UK head coach Joe B. Hall said. "Even though Master and Harden didn't shoot well from the outside, they played a good floor game. Harden's 10 assists (game-high) was certainly a factor and he moved the ball well for us."

Harden and Master combined for 14 assists, but their field goal shooting (a combined five of 17 for 29.4 percent) kept the Bulldogs in contention before the deciding second-half scoring rally.

The 45-second shot clock created the shooting deadline for the Bulldogs.

"Georgia 6-1 point guard Gerald Crosby sank a 20-foot bomb from the baseline to cut UK's lead to 8-6; the shot-clock showed :08.

"Crosby then tied the game at eight with a 16-foot jumper, with :05 left on the shot-clock.

"Georgia guard Vern Fleming lobbed a 16-footer over Turpin to cut UK's lead to 21-18, :07 remaining on the shot-clock.

"Forward Horace McMillen answered a Kenny Walker free-throw with an 18-footer from the top of the key, with the shot-clock reading :09. UK led 22-20.

"Following a Master bomb, Fleming hit from 10 feet with only :01 showing on the shot clock. UK's lead was once again cut to 24-22 with 2:22 remaining in the first half.

UK went to the locker room with a 28-24 lead at the half.

"We came in here with a pretty good idea on how to beat Kentucky," Georgia head coach Hugh Durham said. "The score in the first half was pretty much how we wanted it to be."

The early part of the second half was still close. With 15:18 remaining, Master hit two free-throws to give UK a 34-29 lead.

Both teams struggled offensively for the next 5:24, as each team failed to score.

Then UK went on a tear, outscoring Georgia 16-0 and going ahead 50-29.

"That was the period where we lost control, if we were in control," Durham said.

The UK defense, which varied throughout the second half, held the Bulldogs to 25 percent shooting from the field in the second half, 33.3 for the game.

"The big key in the second half for us was that we were able to get our hands in their faces when they took their shots," Walker said. Walker finished four-for-six from the field.

"We put a lot of pressure on them and then we got our running game going."

Georgia attempted to run with the Cats after falling behind, but it was in vain, as the Bulldogs once again were outtraced by a 14-4 margin in a four minute, 40 second span as UK took a 30-point lead at 64-34 with one minute to go. By then the bench was cleared and the starters were celebrating on the sidelines.

Fleming, the SEC's No. 2 scorer with a 19.8 average, failed to score a field goal on eight attempts in the second half. He only scored a free-throw to give him a game total of 11 to lead the Bulldogs. He also led the team with five rebounds.

"They (UK) put Turpin on one wing and Bowie on the other in the zone and that made the difference," Fleming said. "They were in my face."

James Banks, the SEC's No. 4 scorer, was not a factor in either half as he went one-for-nine from the field for two points.

"I can't remember having such a bad game," Banks said. "It was tough to penetrate Bowie and Turpin because they are quick, strong, and can move. I was hesitant."

Crosby was also held in check as he failed to score in the second half. "I knew we couldn't keep it up from the outside like we were in the first half," Crosby said. "We tried to get it inside but we had some good challenges, they got a few dunks and the crowd of 23,776 got into it and got them pumped up."

The Bulldogs, who were handed their worst defeat of the season, dropped to 12-5, 4-4 in the SEC.

The Wildcats averaged to 15-2 and are tied for first place in the SEC with Auburn at 6-2. UK hopes to win its fourth in a row as they take on the Tennessee Volunteers tonight at 7:30 p.m. in Rupp Arena.

Lady Kats fall victim to No. 8 Old Dominion

By JASON WILLIAMS
Senior Staff Writer

NORFOLK, Va. — The Lady Kats finally managed to play hard basketball and good basketball at the same time, but in the end they were simply outmanned.

That was most evident three minutes into the second half of the Kats' 81-72 loss to the 8th-ranked Old Dominion University Monarchs Saturday night. With her team down 44-43, ODU head coach Marianne Stanley took out all five of her starters and inserted subs, who for 4:30 held their own.

With 12:42 left in the game, the Lady Monarchs were only down 53-51 when Stanley used wholesale substitutions to put all her starters back in. ODU then outscored the Kats 18-9.

Stanley said she was looking for five new people to spark the team after the Monarchs had been outplayed for 23 minutes.

"I don't care who is in the game," Stanley said, "if we've got the people on the bench in there or the starters, I just want those that are ready to play."

Junior Medina Dixon was one ODU starter ready to play. The 6-3 forward put on an all-American performance, scoring a career-high 34 points on 16-of-22 shooting, grabbed a game-high 12 rebounds, and had the only blocked shot of the game.

In one play late in the game, she stole the ball, headed for the basket, and jumped to rim-level for a lay-in that will probably be as close to a dunk as an ODU crowd will see in a women's basketball game this year.

That play was apparently needed to excite the crowd, which otherwise amused itself by throwing paper airplanes onto the floor.

Although the official attendance was listed at 10,258, a sell-out for the Norfolk Scope, there were several hundred no-shows and most of the crowd left after the ODU men's team won an emotional overtime upset over in-state rival Virginia Commonwealth University in the first half of the scheduled double header.

Lady Kat point guard Sandy Harding was almost disappointed at the attendance, especially since a record crowd of 10,622 witnessed UK defeat ODU in Lexington last season.

"The crowd didn't bother us like they thought they would," said Harding, who had seven assists while getting into foul trouble. "I really expected a lot more from them."

ODU did not expect as much from UK, which stunned the Monarchs in the first half by hanging with them on the boards, pressing and firing over their defense after ODU unexpectedly went to a 2-3 zone.

The Kats led 40-37 at the half after senior forward Lisa Collins hit a 12-footer at the buzzer.

"I was surprised that they were a multi-faceted team," Stanley said. "My team was surprised, too. I tend to think if somebody told me they were 8-8 (now 8-9 with this loss) and 0-5 in the Southeastern Conference, I'd say they were one hell of an 8-and-0-5 team."

In the end, poor defense was not the reason that the Kats gave up so many points as much as losing the rebounding battle 37-21. They did outshoot the Monarchs 62 to 51 percent, and they also executed very well.

Sophomore center Dawn Cullen struggled at first but was the only other player for the Monarchs, 12-5 to light up the stats sheet with 13 points and six rebounds.

Diana Stephens led UK with 15 points on the strength of four outside shots in the final minutes as the Kats desperately tried to save the game. Collins played the entire game, hitting on seven-of-11 for 14 points and dishing off nine assists.

Karen Mosley snapped out of a slump to hit seven-of-nine field goals for 14 points and Leslie Nichols and Jody Runge — each scored 10 points.

The Kats' balanced attack and good play left hope for the rest of the season. They face New Orleans, the winner of last year's National Invitational Tournament, tonight at 6 p.m. in Memorial Coliseum.

Foot patrols offer the system a chance to prove its worth

Sometimes the system has trouble with solutions. An example is a recent proposal for campus foot patrols. The patrols, proposed by Students for a Better UK, would be made up of pairs of students.

The patrollers would serve as extra pairs of eyes for the campus police. If they came across any suspicious activity during their nightly patrols, they would use radios to contact the police.

It would be a type of neighborhood crime watch, only the neighborhood in question would be the UK campus.

There is no doubt about the need for this type of community service. Campus crime is rampant. Bicycle thefts, vandalism and thefts of University property top the list of offenses. When it comes to prevention of these crimes, the slogan should be "the more the merrier."

But there are some significant problems. Students for a Better UK need money to buy their patrollers flashlights and radios. They requested $500 from the Student Government Association to pay for that equipment. The SGA Senate tabled the motion.

It seems there is some question of liability. The patrollers would be placing themselves in a potentially dangerous situation. SGA does not want to be held responsible for any injuries that a patroller might sustain during his nightly rounds. That is entirely understandable.

Patrollers would be in hazardous situations. Under the proposal, they are not supposed to get involved with the actual apprehension of suspects. But in a violent situation such as a rape, the lines between patroller and concerned citizen become blurred. The possibility of the patrollers actually getting involved in violent crimes is a real one. And the problem of liability is just as real.

SGA has a budget of about $60,000 — money that comes out of the pockets of UK students and taxpayers. If SGA was involved in some type of legal action involving the foot patrols, that $60,000 could be forfeited. Although the question of liability has not yet been resolved, SGA is understandably concerned about it.

But the situation can be worked around. If, indeed, SGA could be held liable, Students for a Better UK could sign waivers of responsibility. The individual patrollers could sign similar waivers.

But the groups need to work together. Right now, the two seem to be working in an adversarial relationship. The president of Students for a Better UK has said he "lost my faith in the system." That certainly will not achieve anything, and it certainly will not help the students in any way.

If there is a way to get the foot patrols off the ground, it ought to be pursued vigorously. If the groups cannot work together, perhaps they should try to work separately.

There are other sources of funds. Fund-raising projects or student donations might get the job done. Students for a Better UK might try those avenues.

Maybe those avenues will succeed. But the "system" has a rare chance to prove itself in this case. It would be shame if it lost this chance to affirm everyone's faith.

Foot patrols; proving that the system can work

President may be sitting on a hot stove

Pardon me if I squirm as I write this, but I'm sitting on a hot stove.

Yes, I know it's stupid to sit on a hot stove, but I'm visiting a friend's house, and there was no place to sit because of all the clutter.

"I'd offer you a place to sit," my friend apologized, "but the only place that isn't piled up is the stove."

"That'll be fine," I answered. "I don't know. It's pretty hot."

"Great! The hotter the better." The moment I sat on it, I wished I hadn't. After all, it was hot. But I didn't want to insult my friend's hospitality.

"Are you sure you wouldn't want me to clear a place off the sofa?" my friend asked.

"Wouldn't think of it. I'm just getting used to it."

"You don't look too comfortable." "What?" I answered angrily. "You think I'm the kind of guy who'd sit on a hot stove one minute and jump off the next?"

"I don't think I would sit on it." "Nothing to it," I replied. "Why don't you turn up the heat a bit?"

As my friend began to give me a lecture on third-degree burns, my mind wandered to president Reagan and the hot stove he's sitting on in Lebanon.

Shelby R. WHITE

The Israelis heated up the stove with their expulsion of the Palestine Liberation Organization from Beirut. The Israelis and the PLO have been keeping things cooking in the Middle East for years.

Trying to keep the stove from burning down the house, President Reagan sent 1,800 Marines to Lebanon to keep the fire from getting out of hand.

Unfortunately, Lebanon is just too big a stove for 1,800 Marines to sit on.

Now, no one doubts the Marines' courage. I've yet to meet a Marine who was afraid of anything.

You find a hot stove, and the Marines will sit on it.

And they won't move until Allah moves the mountain or the Second Coming, whichever is last — or until they get orders.

But for the present, Reagan and the Marines are getting their buns toasted.

Everybody remembers Vietnam, which was a very hot stove indeed. No one wants to get burned that badly again.

Getting off the stove is no problem. All you have to do is stand up, but there is the problem of what people will think.

Texas Republican John Tower, chairman of the Senate Armed Services Committee, recently returned from a trip to the Mideast and said that he was told by both Israeli and Arab leaders that if America withdrew from Lebanon now, it would be interpreted as a sign of weakness.

That America is a paper tiger, that America didn't have what it takes to sit on a hot stove.

What Tower was told is probably true. In international affairs, there is always the danger that if you don't stay on this stove, the next stove will be even hotter.

This puts Reagan in a tough position, and there are only two ways out. One is for him to turn the stove off and sit there as long as he wants. The other is to get off, but do it in such a way so that no one will think America is gutless.

Unfortunately, the control knob of the Mideast stove seems to be out of Reagan's reach right now, so that leaves him with the option of figuring out how to get off the stove with some semblance of dignity.

Meanwhile, the stove keeps getting hotter and hotter.

Just to keep things interesting, this is election year. A lot of people think it's bad luck to sit on a hot stove in an election year.

In fact, Reagan probably realizes that if the heat gets turned up too much higher, come November his political backside might end up with a toasted imprint of an electric range.

As for me, I'm still sitting on the stove. My friend's still talking, and I'm still smiling, but I'm starting to smell burned meat.

Could someone bring me some ice water?

'Gifted' Raiders weren't only punishers

Joe Theisman, the orally-gifted quarterback and the Redskins were flirting with immortality before the Super Bowl. Hard driving, hard working coach Joe Gibbs was not even sleeping at home several nights a week.

The Redskins made no pretensions about their intentions. Their desire was to whip the Raiders the same way they had humiliated the Rams and overcome the 49ers.

This Raiders team was not to be denied. They were the classic strong, silent types who would not reveal what they were going to do to their attackers. If they knew where the gap in Washington's defense was, they were not revealing themselves. They merely bided their time, drooling for the moment they would make contact with the Redskins.

About the time America was tuning into the Super Bowl, someone placed a newborn baby boy in the basement of a New York City housing project. Shears will be used to cut through the tiny body in an upcoming autopsy.

The encounter began like any third-rate romance, both sides spent a few minutes feeling each other out. It did not take long for the Raiders to climb on top after they managed to strap the Redskins down. After a blocked punt exposed the Redskins' ball, a Raider player snatched it up for a quick Oakland seven.

Darrick McCALLY

Elsewhere last week, a double jury in Caldwell, Idaho, sentenced two men, 18 and 21, for the rape and murder of someone's 13-year-old daughter.

Aroused still, the Raiders showed more. They refused to let up. After a 50-yard pass, they came up with another score.

Washington refused to turn over and go to sleep. Using a series of short jobs and plunges by John Riggins to supplement the air game, the Redskins began to bang away at the center mound of the field. It appeared they might come from behind.

For the Redskins, their last major play of the first half proved to be a sharply painful one. Head coach Joe Gibbs contrived a daring pass play to slip a man through a perceived gap in the Raider secondary. As 72-920 fans gasped in awe, a surprised Raider linebacker intercepted and took it for another big score.

In a move that may eventually disrupt future Super Bowls, World Series and NBA championships, the U.S. government recently launched a satellite-killing weapon into space.

The Soviet Union had the audacity to not wait past Super Bowl Sunday to accuse the United States of opening a new avenue of the arms race.

After the halftime rest, the Redskins made the only real penetration they would be allowed to make the rest of the evening. The Skins had made a valiant effort to come from behind.

Fans ultimately can kill a team's momentum if they give up. The partisan NFC crowd did just that. On a broken play, which turned out to be the national climax of the night, the Raiders squeezed the last wind out of the crowd. With frantic spectators shrieking and hollering during Marcus Allen's 74-yard spurt, the stadium rumbled to a quick, giant vibration. The battle was over. With the score now 35-9, mastery was held cruelly out of the Redskins reach. For the Raiders faithful, the orgy was complete.

Four Europeans touring Kampala, Uganda, Sunday, will never get to hear about Allen's run. Their bodies were ripped open by terrorist bullets as they were driving two cars en route to a yacht club.

Raider quarterback Jim Plunkett, envisioning no impending surprises, just ran the offense to keep holding the ball and the final tally was 38-9.

To the Redskins, the final field goal was merely a final spit in the face by the Raiders.

Starving deer feeding at emergency stations near Salt Lake City, Utah, are being viciously shot to death and abandoned by as yet uncaught good 'ol boys. It is hoped these thrill seekers stayed in Sunday before last to watch the Super Bowl.

On the "CBS Early Morning News" the following dawn, a camera zeroed in on an exhausted and tearful young woman. She was mourning the Redskins' loss.

Reagan budget goes to Congress

WASHINGTON — President Reagan sends Congress details of his new budget proposal this week, but attention also will focus on the first round of deficit-reduction talks between White House officials and a bipartisan delegation from Capitol Hill.

In legislative action, a sweeping anti-crime package will occupy the Senate while the House considers a bill to compensate Vietnam veterans exposed to the defoliant Agent Orange.

On Wednesday, Reagan sends Congress his budget recommendations for the 1985 fiscal year that begins Oct. 1, setting off a parade of administration officials to appear before various House and Senate committees for the next several weeks explaining details of the plan.

Outlines of the $925 billion budget already have leaked out, including a projection of a $180 billion deficit. The red ink in the fiscal year that ended Sept. 30 was a record $195.4 billion.

It is the prospect of more such deficits that increased pressure in Congress for action to close the budget gap.

Reagan has invited a bipartisan group of legislators to meet with administration officials to find ways to trim $100 billion from the deficits over three years.

Democrats, wary of an election-year trap, want to see the budget and other deficit proposals before they jump into the discussions.

O'Neill calls Reagan 'a divider'

WASHINGTON — While Republicans applauded President Reagan's decision to seek a second term and predicted victory in November, House Speaker Thomas P. O'Neill Jr. warned, "The American people will reject four more years of danger, four more years of pain."

O'Neill, one of Reagan's harshest critics, was quick to respond to Reagan's re-election announcement Sunday.

"Ronald Reagan has been a divider, not a uniter," the Massachusetts Democrat said. "He has divided our country between rich and poor, between the hopeful and the hopeless, between the comfortable and the miserable. He has not been fair and the people know it."

"By making his announcement in the dead of night on a Sunday evening, the president obviously sought to insulate himself from public criticism and public scrutiny," O'Neill said. "He can announce his candidacy this way. He cannot run his campaign this way. The president can run. He cannot hide — in the Rose Garden or anywhere else."

Senate Majority Leader Howard H. Baker of Tennessee, one of those likely to have sought the GOP nomination if Reagan had not, said he was pleased with the president's announcement.

"He has clearly earned the right to finish the job he began over three years ago, and I pledge my wholehearted support for that effort," Baker said.

Pi Kappa Alpha Escort Service Bill passing. "We're (the patrolers) just observers, they (the PKA escorts) are responsible for the girl or whomsoever they are escorting," Holt said.

"With the PKA bill, we felt that the issue of liability was not even mentioned, whereas the first thing we hear is 'liability liability!'" Bisig said.

Bradford, however, pointed out a distinction between the two services. "The difference, first of all, (is) the PKA house has offered this service for over a year and escort services have been offered by student governments throughout the U.S.," he said. "It is like the phone directories and book exchanges, it is a basic SGA project throughout the country."

Both Holt and Bisig said they approved of the SGA-PKA Escort Service because it would promote what they were trying to achieve — campus safety.

John Cain, an SGA senator at large, disapproved of the group's withdrawal of the bill. "I think he (Bisig) hasn't given the system a long enough chance. Our system is not designed to rush things through and our system keeps us from doing just that."

Cain said SGA feels campus safety is important. "Student Government is as concerned about the students as much as they are (the Students for a Better UK)," he said. "It concerns me that SGA is being put in a position against campus safety when that is simply not the case."

Bisig also placed Tom Stephens, a member of the group, in charge of the patrol project. "Tom's an extremely responsible young man and he would do justice to the patrol," he said. "The Students for a Better UK have several different projects we're working on and some authority needed to be delegated."

"It's one of our ideas to make this campus safer without spending a lot of money which the University seems reluctant to do," Stephens, campus safety chairman for the group, said. Another factor in the controversy is the use of the bill for a "political ploy." Ashcraft said. "As far as political ploy, it may be a way of getting the public's attention but it's (the foot patrols) also a legitimate project. Larry (Bisig) may be but no one else in the organization is."

Bisig denies using the foot patrol for political gain. "I introduced this bill a year ago and I want to show our sincerity for the project."

"We felt that some of the erroneous rumors that were being spread were doing a lot of damage to the proposal and we felt that that was not the proper atmosphere to continue to discuss the bill," Holt said. "Really that's our primary purpose for withdrawing."
