Constitutional Revision Necessary, Dr. Dickey Declares

Summer Convocation

President Dickey told students Wednesday that revisions to Kentucky's Constitution are needed before the University can go forward. He was speaking at the Summer School convocation.

Kentucky has more stringent limitations on salaries than any other state, President Frank G. Dickey said at a UK summer school convocation Wednesday.

"If the Constitution is not revised and if the mandate of the Court of Appeals limiting salaries to the present Constitutional levels goes into effect this coming January, the University of Kentucky will be set back a half century," he declared.

President Dickey stated it is impossible to conceive of trying to operate a great state university in competition with business, industry, professions, and other universities if the school is limited severely in the compensation which can be given to professors.

"The University would lose everything which has been gained in faculty strength within a very short period of time," the president added. "Other educational institutions and school systems would be affected in a similar manner and health programs within our counties would suffer a serious setback."

Urging members of the Memorial Hall audience to help tell of the need for the revision, the president said the constitutional revision is one which will be subject to the review of the people.

He said not only do the voters of the state have the power to authorize the convention, but they also must approve the document after it is revised.

Dr. Dickey also stated that among some persons there appears to exist the belief that in education "quality and quantity, like oil and water, don't mix."

"Thank goodness, it is a small number of persons who think this, but they are very vocal," he said.

He listed a number of publicized prejudices which he said were nurtured by the assumption of a fixed set of standards for excellence in higher education. They included:

1. The smaller the institution, the better the education. Large schools, on the other hand, simply because they are large, cannot offer good programs.

Dr. Dickey said people who believe this completely overlook the fact that Harvard, for example, which is generally considered to be the best in the country, has an enrollment of over 12,000 full-time students.

He added that the quality of instruction depends upon the strength of the teaching rather than upon the school's size. If there is an advantage one way or another, he declared, it would lie with the larger school which can provide the instructor with better tools, such as libraries, to help him do his job.

2. Quality can be measured by the smallness of the teacher-student ratio. As a matter of fact, there is much to indicate that many students can be taught effectively by one instructor, he said, and the burden of proof is on those who claim the opposite.

3. Vocational and professional programs are a notch below traditional programs in liberal arts and sciences. Dickey said such academic snobbery can serve only to weaken valuable and important programs.

4. Education in public institutions is inferior to that offered by private schools. The president said that it is not surprising to learn that there is no evidence to support this belief. He said there are both weak and strong institutions in both areas.

The president said a concept must be developed which will permit each institution to be measured and evaluated in terms of its own objectives and aims.

Textbooks Tax Exempt

UK students and personnel will be exempt from the Kentucky sales tax on school books and essential supplies purchased from the two book stores in the campus area.

The Campus Book Store in McVey Hall will not collect the tax on textbooks and essential supplies, according to George R. Kavanaugh, UK associate business manager.

Joe Kennedy of Kennedy's Book Store said the same interpretation applied to his store.

He defined "essential supplies" as textbooks and other items required by University courses, such as engineering tools and zoology kits. He said pencils and notebook paper were considered "non-essential" items.

Kavanaugh said the present interpretation is subject to modification by later amendments or administrative rulings of the Kentucky Sales Tax Division.

Dr. Rose To Discuss German Existentialist

Dr. D. Glenn Rose will discuss the philosophy of German existentialist Rudolf Karl Bultmann, at the All-Campus Forum Tuesday night.

Bultmann, a contemporary theologian and philosopher is noted for his writings which include "Primitive Christianity and its Contemporary Setting," "Theology of the New Testament," "History and Eschology," and "Demythologizing and History."

All-Campus Forums previously presented speakers who discussed Jacques Maritain, Catholic existentialist, and Martin Buber, Jewish existentialist, this summer.

The Forum will meet in the Y Lounge of the SUB at 7 p.m. Tuesday.

This is the third program in a series of six forums concerned with "Religious Voices of Our Day," representing significant trends in Protestant, Roman Catholic, and Jewish thought.

Dr. Jewell Attending Political Convention

Dr. Malcolm E. Jewell, instructor in political science, left Thursday to attend the Democratic National Convention which opens Monday in Los Angeles.

Dr. Jewell is one of 14 "Convention Fellows" attending the convention under the sponsorship of the Citizenship Clearance House of New York and Eagleton Institute of Rutgers University.

The sponsoring organizations offer fellowships for graduate students and support political studies in order to stimulate interest in politics, Dr. Jewell said.

"The Fellows are all teachers of political science," he continued,

"and are sent to the conventions in order to acquire a first hand knowledge of practical politics."

"Each teacher is expected to pay particular attention to the work of the delegation from his own state," Dr. Jewell added. "I plan to attend the Kentucky delegation's caucuses."

During a three day seminar before the convention opens and a session after its close, the 14 professors will write reports of their studies, according to Dr. Jewell.

The reports will be published through Eagleton Institute, he said. This will be Dr. Jewell's first trip to a national political convention.

He said he didn't care to "go out on a limb" and make a prediction as to the Democratic nominee.

Tomorrow Is Last Day To Enroll In Conversational French Class

Enrollment for three conversational French classes which began Tuesday will close tomorrow.

An evening class for adults in beginning French conversation and two day classes for children, one for beginners and one for advanced students, were held for the first time this week.

The adult class meets from 6 to 8 p.m. on Tuesdays and Thursdays. The beginners class for students in grades four through six meets from 10:30 a.m. to noon on Tuesdays and Thursdays, and the continuing class for children meets from 10:30 a.m. to noon on Mondays and Wednesdays.

Under the direction of Mrs. Eleanor Evans, teacher of languages at University High School, the classes will continue for four weeks.

Students will begin to learn the vocabulary and phrasing immediately. Emphasis will be placed on building typical French sentences and understanding French by listening. No textbooks will be required.

Students may enroll in the evening class office in Frazee Hall.

Fee for the adult class is $10 and for the children's classes it is $8.

Forum Speaker Discusses Jewish Existentialist, Buber

Men can achieve the I-Thou relationship to God as they relate themselves to their fellow human beings, Rabbi Milton H. Polin, Louisville, told the UK All-Campus Forum Tuesday night.

Rabbi Polin, who is spiritual leader of Keneseth Israel Congregation, spoke on the teaching of Martin Buber, Jewish existentialist. He said the concept of being is crucial in the I-Thou relationship.

The I-Thou relationship, he said is superficial, and relates to the tools "we use for personal gratification, such as science." The I-Thou relationship is a subjective, existential relationship, and denotes "a wholeness or exclusiveness."

This relationship, he continued, "is communion-like, and gives a deep personal experience." He compared it to the relationship of love, where two people have a need for each other.

Rabbi Polin described Judaism as an "historic example of an ongoing I-Thou relationship."

The Hasidic, or pious, movement in Judaism, has a group of people around the leader, who serves as a mediator between God and Man.

Rabbi Polin said Buber sees the historical Jesus, "not the Christ of the Church," as the prototype of the Hasidic leader.

God's existence is "not important as far as the transcendence-immance argument is concerned," the speaker said.

Stranded Student Finds Schedule Book Error

A UK student experienced some difficulty in finding the class in which he had enrolled for summer school.

He signed up for Commerce 173, automatic data processing. The schedule book designated Room 3, Funkhouser Building.

When the instructor failed to show up, the student finally inquired about the class. He discovered that the class was to meet in Room B-3, not Room 3, which is a men's room.

Grab Your Guillotine and

Celebrate Bastille Day With Cheese, Wine

By CAROLE MARTIN

Quite a few of the acquaintances are making like the prisoner who has only a few more weeks of his term left.

Calculations as to the exact number of minutes, hours and what have you that are left in the summer session are being inscribed on walls for posterity. Future archaeologists ought to have fun with these scratchings.

But raise thy steins, oh ye of little faith, for the 14th of July is almost upon us and that being Bastille Day calls for revelry and patriotic partying.

If none of you have ever celebrated this day of commemoration before you will find that there are a few simple ingredients necessary to make the festivities extraordinary:

First, the guillotine, extremely important in the proper execution of events. Then black bread, an adequate bit of wine, and properly aged cheese . . . these are party provokers even on July 13.

But seriously, without Student Congress, we-want-a-holiday riots, and test-stealings this summer things have fallen off so, that the leprechauns have resorted to hiding Renaults in chapter rooms as summer sport.

We may be thankful that the weather has turned into friendliness and good cheer, though, now what do we blame for the lethargy?

You will be highly elated, I am sure, to find that a Belgian scientist has discovered (after long tedious study) that most male hippopotami are henpecked.

June may have been a rather dreary month for most of us here, but the diapered cherub with the arrows seems to have made every hour count. This week's list of attachments is quite lengthy.
