Kentucky's Best Investment

The University is Kentucky's best investment.

Not only does it provide education for the youth of the state, but it also has a program for adult education. It expends half the energy and time of its staff and budget in the promotion of the state's adult population.

The work of the College of Agriculture through the Agricultural Extension Division and the Experiment Station and of the College of Education through the Education Extension Department represent the major adult educational activities. The staff hopes in the near future to be able to render the same sort of service to business and professional men and women.

The Kentucky Kernel print shop supplies bulletins and other printed matter to University-sponsored organizations and services throughout the state. Everything from how to iron shirts to a long discussion on former presidents of the school is printed and distributed from here. The Kernel itself carries news of the school to alumni and friends.

The University Extension depart-

Undersecretary of Labor Keen Johnson, held in warm friendship by many in this community where he lived as a boy, sat at the big table with the President and his Cabinet for the first time recently. Secretary Schwel-lenbach had a cold, so Keen got the call. He said he "felt quite elated at this exceptional experience."

ment provides correspondence courses for adults in the state and for younger persons who cannot attend regular sessions of the school. The Sloan Foundation has made great progress in educational and teaching methods and surveys.

The Agricultural Extension division is constantly at work to provide farmers with new and better methods of crop and stock raising.

Home demonstration agents and county agents work with persons at their homes to help them establish these new systems. The 4-H clubs begin in grade schools to teach Kentucky's youth these new discoveries.

The University sponsors every year institutes and meetings to benefit the people of the state.

Among these are music festivals, farm and home week, junior week for 4-H members, speech contests, journalism clinics. Its facilities are open to other worthy organizations.

The University radio station broadcasts' programs which provide music and educational advantages to many who would not otherwise hear them. The radio listening stations in Eastern Kentucky are a well known work of the radio department.

University professors lecture at high schools and at club meetings through a service provided by the school.

While it does all this, the University also provides regular classes for students from Kentucky and other states.

All these things are known. What must become known is the lack of facilities to do all these projects and more. It is up to the people of the

Brilliant Career

The announced retirement of Dr. L. L. Dantzler, in the University of Kentucky student publication, The Kentucky Kernel, Saturday, will bring a feeling of regret to students, former students and alumni of the University.

Dr. Dantzler has been head of the English department since 1914. He was one of the most brilliant department heads the University ever had.

Dr. Dantzler was friendly with students. He loved nothing better than to help some student who was in trouble, no matter what the cause might be.

Many students have a fear of college English, especially when the instructor seems "tough" and hard to get along with. There are so many such professors who love to show their authority with dictatorial powers. Not so with Dantzler. He took students into his confidence and made them feel that English was the most important subject in the curricula.

Ill-health has forced his retirement after many long years of useful service. Those of us who studied under him learn of the news with regret, but our memories will always carry thoughts of a kindly, brilliant, college professor, who shunned promotion that he might serve the citizens of Kentucky. This he did with unstinted loyalty.

A QUARTERLY MAGAZINE DEVOTED TO THE INTERESTS OF THE ALUMNI AND STUDENTS OF THE UNIVERSITY OF KENTUCKY

Reunion Plans Are Announced For June 5, 6

Annual Banquet To Be Renewed, June 5

The University of Kentucky Alumni Association's first reunion banquet since before the war, will be held Thursday night, June 5, at the Lafayette hotel, preceding the commencement day festivities on Friday, June 6, according to an announcement made by the executive committee of the general association.

Speaker for the occasion will be the Hon. John B. Hutson, '17, former Under Secretary-General of the United Nations.

The commencement week program will open with baccalaureate services on Sunday, June 1. On Tuesday, the quarterly meeting of the board of trustees will be held in the offices of President H. L. Donovan, and on Thursday afternoon, from four to six o'clock President and Mrs. Donovan will entertain seniors, alumni and friends of the University at a tea at Maxwell Place.

Thursday night at seven o'clock the Alumni Association will sponsor a reunion banquet at the Lafayette hotel. It is imperative that the office be notified, as soon as possible, if you are planning to attend this dinner, as reservations must be in to the hotel before ten a. m. that day.

The banquet will be presided over by Chauncey E. Forgey, Ashland, Ky., president of the association. He will introduce the new officers that night, and the new president will assume office and introduce the speaker of the evening and the special guests.

A departure from the usual custom of holding the annual alumni meeting on commencement day has been made in this year's program, and the annual meeting will be held at the banquet Thursday night, in order that more alumni may have an opportunity to participate.

Friday morning the Alumni Association will hold registration, in the great hall of the Student Union, for returning alumni, and at 1 p. m. that day the University will entertain with the annual commencement luncheon, honoring seniors and other guests. All alumni planning to be present for this luncheon are also asked to check their intentions in the box below, clip and return to this office.

A special feature of the commencement procession this year will be the designation by class banners, of classes holding reunions, the banners to be carried in the procession by members of the reunion classes. University officials are hopeful that a large number of alumni will march in the commencement procession this year, and the inauguration of the line-up by reunion classes will become an annual custom if successful this year.

Commencement exercises will be held Friday night, June 6, at 7:30 p. m., on Stoll Field, and a decorative arrangement of flags, especially planned for the occasion, should add to the general beauty and pageantry of the commencement ceremonies.

Nov. 22, Ky.-Tenn. Homecoming Date

The Kentucky-Tennessee football game on November 22 has been chosen by the executive committee of the University of Kentucky Alumni Association as homecoming day for alumni during the 1947 football season.

A committee from the Alumni executive group has been appointed by President Chauncey E. Forgey to work with representatives of student groups on elaborate plans for the fall homecoming. James S. Shropshire, '29, is chairman of the homecoming committee, and L. K. Frankel, '00, H. C. Robinson, '06, and Helen King, '25, are members of his committee.

Since the August issue of the Kentucky Alumnus will be devoted entirely to the listing of the names of the University of Kentucky men who served in World War II, together with pictures and biographies of the 332 who lost their lives in service, this notice of homecoming plans will be the only one to appear in the Alumnus before Nov. 22; so all former students and graduates who wish to make plans to attend, must depend on information which will be contained in the autumn issues of the Kentucky Kernel, for detailed information.

The K-Club, organization of University of Kentucky lettermen which became inactive during the war, has been reactivated.

Highlight of the K-Club year is the annual Blue-White game in the spring. The athletes also enter a team in each intramural sport.

R. H. Hillenmeyer, '43, Chosen Head Of Greater Cincinnati Alumni Group

New Officers Named At Reorganization

By Cameron Coffman, '35

The Northern Kentucky Alumni Club, which has for some years been in a very dormant stage, suddenly blossomed—thanks to the efforts of Alumni Secretary Helen King and Robert Hillenmeyer, class of '43, who gave the Greater Cincinnati "red-headed step-children" a "hot-foot" March 1, at a luncheon in Cincinnati's Gibson Hotel.

The enthusiasm shown by 18 UK grads who turned out for the affair promises to produce one of the most active groups in the Blue Grass State. Those attending besides Hillenmeyer and Miss King were Dr. J. T. Faig, '94, Ernest Becker, '11, Allan Vogeler, '38, C. D. McLanahan, '27, Beatty DeLong, 'Ex., Tom Weather, 'Ex., Mr. and Mrs. James "Jimmy" Sales, both of '38, Mr. and Mrs. Al Vogel, '39, Vernon Nugent, '34, Mary and Edwina Gorey, '24 and '36, Cameron Coffman, '35, William Knaebel, '45, and William Kefauver, '22.

Various committees were appointed and an election was set to choose a board of directors. It was decided that meetings would be held quarterly with business sessions held to a minimum. Several social events were discussed with a reception and dance after the Kentucky-

Xavier game next fall coming in for a lion's share of favorable comment. Hillenmeyer was appointed to act as temporary chairman until the election.

The Association received its stamp of approval on March 27 when approximately 125 ex-UK'ers gathered at the University Club, Cincinnati, to see pictures of the Kentucky-North Carolina basketball game and the UK-Alabama football game and to elect Bob Hillenmeyer president of the rejuvenated organization for the coming year. C. D. McLanahan was chosen vice president, Miss Edwina Gorey, secretary and Allan Vogeler, treasurer. Directors selected for a two-year term include John R. Bullock, '28, William Kefauver and Joe Quinn, '37. Named to one-year directorships were Beatty M. DeLong, James H. Layman, '24, and M. M. Hughes, '15. The next meeting is slated for June.

More than 400 UK graduates are living in Northern Kentucky with many hundreds of former students also earning a living in the Greater Cincinnati area.

In making the rounds of Cincinnati, Covington, Newport, Fort Thomas, Dayton, Bellevue and other communities along the Ohio River the newspapers are daily telling of the exploits of some UK alumnus. Andrew W. Clark, '38, who is practicing law in Covington, was recently elected president of the Kenton County Bar Association. Clark, vice president of the Covington Junior Chamber of Commerce, recently represented Kentucky at the International Congress of Jaycees in Dallas, Texas. Vernon Nugent, '34, former member of Coach Rupp's court fireballers, has been chosen president of the Covington Jaycees for '47. Nugent was recently appointed general manager and director of the Castle Auto Sales, Inc., in Cincinnati. Other KU'ers belonging to the Jaycees include Sam Rees, 'Ex., Cameron Coffman, and Charles Gates, '35, former UK track star, who now has his own business on Madison Avenue, Covington.

Dr. William S. Taylor '12, dean of the University of Kentucky College of Education, has received a vote of approval from Northern Kentucky educators as a candidate for the presidency of the National Education Association. The election will be held at the national meeting of the group in Cincinnati in July.

Another Covington firm with several UK "alums" on the payroll is the Cincinnati, Newport and Covington Railway Co., which has Dave Ringo, former UK tennis star, who is assistant general manager; Cameron Coffman, editor of the company newspaper; Jack Trotter, ex-'31, recently appointed sales director, and Ann Eyer, '46, a member of the general accounting department.

Art Muth, '35, is making a name for himself in the newspaper field with the Kentucky Times Star, as are Joe Quinn, '35, and Jimmy Miner, '33, with the Cincinnati Post. Gilbert Kingsberry, '33, recently hit out for greener pastures, having been appointed head of the WLW news bureau in Washington, D. C. Gil can be heard nightly bringing the capitol news from Washington over the "Nation's Station." Robert "Bob" Rankin has frequent by-lines in the Kentucky Enquirer.

Al Vogel and Jimmy Sales are affiliated with the Kelly-Koett Co., Covington, one of the world's largest manufacturers of X-ray equipment. Sales is the newly appointed personnel director. Slade Carr, '32, former head cheer leader of the Blue and White, is principal of the First District School, and Dick Carron, '31, is also in business in Kenton county. J. Park Strother, '33, is principal of the Fifth District School and Thomas R. Rusk, '40, secretary of the Montgomery Coal Co., was recently selected as chairman of the National Cancer Drive in Kenton county.

Across the river in Cincinnati, Johnny Bullock, one of the original "Big Men on the Campus" at UK, is making a real name for himself in the legal field, being affiliated with the firm of Taft, Stettinius and Hollister (Senator Robert Taft of Ohio, that is). Dr. Donovan Guest Of New York Alumni, March 21

Spring Dinner Held At Hotel Belvedere

BULLETIN

Elvis J. Stahr, president of the University of Kentucky Alumni Club of Greater New York, was named associate professor of law at the University by members of the Board of Trustees at their April meeting.

New York's loss is Kentucky's gain!

President H. L. Donovan, Mrs. Donovan, Coach Adolph Rupp, Athletic Director Bernie A. Shively and Alumni Secretary Helen G. King were present for the spring dinner meeting of University of Kentucky alumni of Greater New York Friday night, March 21 at the Belvedere Hotel. Elvis J. Stahr, '36, of Hickman, Ky., and New York City, president of the group, presided at the dinner which was attended by approximately 130.

Planned to coincide with the visit to New York of the University of Kentucky basketball team, playing at the time in the National Invitational Tournament in Madison Square Garden, the dinner was a great success.

The program opened with invocation by President Stahr, a call to order and announcements, and reading of the minutes of the December meeting by Duncan Stokes, '39, club secretary.

Miss King gave a brief talk on "The Importance of Alumni Activity"; Mr. Shively discussed "The University's Athletic Program"; Coach Rupp spoke on "Kentucky's Basketball Team"; and President Donovan, principal speaker for the occasion, discussed, "The University of Kentucky Today."

Other features of the program were the presentation of a group of Kentucky folk songs by Tom Scott, 'Ex., of Lexington and New York, well-known radio star, singer and composer; and the reading of a memorial to the late Dr. J. Harry Clo, '04 and '05, distinguished alumnus and member of the

Coach Paul Bryant Addresses Washington, D. C. Club

Russell Cox, '39, New President of Group

Head Football Coach Paul "Bear" Bryant was the featured speaker at the annual spring dinner meeting of the Washington, D. C., Alumni Club of the University, March 19 in the Everglades Room of the Annapolis Hotel.

Paul Keen, '26, of Glenn Dale, Md., president of the Washington group, presided at the dinner and an election of officers was held at which time Russell Cox, '39, member of the staff of the Reconstruction Finance Corp., was elected president. Other officers chosen were: George W. Meuth, '23, vice president, and Madileen Small, '41, secretary and treasurer.

Mrs. Sarah B. Holmes, '29, University dean of women, was one of the honor guests at the dinner, and made a short talk on the University's problems in regard to housing and classroom facilities.

Congressman Virgil Chapman, '18, introduced Coach Bryant, who discussed football prospects at the University for next fall. "I wouldn't trade my centers, guards and ends for any in the country," said the Coach, "but we're weak in tackles and backfield. We can't win in our conference with the backs we now have."

Committee on arrangements for the dinner included Leland Howard, '37, assistant director of the Mint and past president of the group; Charles K. Dunn, '16, general manager of an insurance company, and Mr. Cox.

Col. George Ewell, '02, was chairman of the nominating committee for the selection of officers of the club.

At the speakers table were: Mr. Keen, Coach Bryant, Dean Holmes, Donie Carmack, Washington correspondent for the Louisville Courier-Journal; Robert K. Salyers, 'Ex., past alumni secretary; Colonel Ewell, Mrs. Lillian Holmes MacVey, '36, and Mr. Cox.

include Leonard Weakley and Allan Vogeler. Charles Maxson, '34, formerly senior manager of the UK basketball team, is a manager of one of Sears, Roebuck's many stores.

Joe Gannon, '46, is etching a niche in the writers hall of fame as head of that department at Station WSAI. His marriage to the former Miss Ann Eyer, '46, took place April 26. Frank McCool, former UK grid great, recently turned up in Covington as a member of the Veterans Administration.

Roger Klein, '33, tennis coach at Bellevue High School, is putting his racketeers through their paces in preparation for the defense of their Kentucky Scholastic championship. William Dwight Sporing, '24, is another UK grad who is high on the list in the educational field, being principal of the Cold Springs school. Clyde Parsons, '33, is an electrical engineer with the Johnson Electric Supply Co., Cincinnati.

James Beatty Davis, '31, who came out of the Army wearing silver leaves, is practicing law in Newport, as is Tom Hardesty, '24. Richard "Dick" Neiser, '33, is also earning his daily bread in Newport and is active in many civic organizations.

Getting back to Covington we see the law shingle of Marion W. Moore, '27. Moore was an unsuccessful candidate, although running a good race, for the U. S. Congress last fall. Kenton county lost a very important political figure recently upon the death of Judge Johnst Northcutt, '17.

Joe O'Brien, ex-33, former tennis star at UK, is a salt seller (no pun intended) in the Cincinnati area. After leaving UK Joe hit the "big time" in the tennis world to receive a national rating, but "retired" after one tour with the brass hats of the clay court world. Joe claimed he had no intention of becoming a "tennis bum."

Paul Jenkins '28, of Louisville, football and basketball coach at Louisville Male High School for six years, has resigned. In revealing his plans Coach Jenkins said that he is considering two athletic jobs which will pay more.

2,000 At U.K. Pep Rally In Ashland, Honoring Net Team

UK Alumni Sponsor Meet At Station

More than 2,000 enthusiastic University of Kentucky basketball fans from Ashland and other eastern Kentucky towns attended a pep rally at the C & O railroad station in Ashland, March 15, honoring the Kentucky basketball team, there for a half-hour stop-over on its way to the National Invitational tournament in Madison Square Garden.

Sponsored by the alumni of Ashland, and headed by Chauncey E. Forgey, Ashland publisher and president of the UK Alumni Association, the thousands of cheering fans accompanied by the Ashland High School band, met the team as the group arrived in Ashland by special pullman, en route to New York.

Station WCMI, with Truman Morris, '40, at the microphone, interviewed Assistant Coach Harry Lancaster, members of the squad, Athletic Director B. A. Shively, Manager Humsey Yessin and others of the Kentucky party. Gifts were presented to members of the team and flowers were given to Helen G. King, executive secretary of the Alumni Association, who accompanied the group to New York.

Mr. Forgey made a short address, and Charley Eblen, former UK football star, led the spectators in several cheers. Among the alumni greeting the team were Tom Phipps, Catlettsburg, president of the Ashland Alumni Club and his brother Jack, both former Wildcat football stars.

Former UK Student Nominated 'First Lady' Of '46 In Knoxville

Mrs. Amelia Leer Caruthers of Knoxville, Tenn., has been nominated for the title of "First Lady of the Year" by the Knoxville chapter of Beta Sigma Phi sorority.

Mrs. Caruthers holds both the bachelor and master's degrees from the University of Kentucky.

She is president of the Knoxville chapter of the American Association of University Women and a member

Graduate Goes To Drake University

To Teach Political Science In Iowa

Dr. James Baylor Holtzclaw, Morehead, Ky., has been appointed associate professor of political science at Drake University, Des Moines, Iowa. He holds his bachelor of arts, master of arts and doctor of philosophy degrees from the University of Kentucky.

Dr. Holtzclaw taught at the University of Delta Kappa Gamma, honorary education society. She teaches in the Knoxville high school and is past president of the Teachers League; past historian of the James White chapter, Daughters of the American Revolution; state regent of the Daughters of American Colonists; member of the United Nations Committee of the city and the Conference of Christians and Jews.

University of Kentucky as instructor in extension, 1933 to 1935. Since 1935 he has been head of the department of history and political science at Morehead (Ky.) State Teachers College. He was on leave of absence from October, 1942, to June 1946 for military service.

His war service record shows that he enlisted as a private in the infantry, October, 1942, and was released as first lieutenant in June, 1946. For seven months he was assistant professor of military tactics, University of Kentucky. He also had experience in programs for re-education of German prisoners-of-war. He is now a first lieutenant in Infantry Reserve.

He is a member of the American Association of University Professors, American Political Science Association, Kentucky Academy of the Social Sciences, Pi Sigma Alpha, honorary political science fraternity. He was president of the Kentucky Academy of Social Sciences in 1939 and 1940.

Leonard B. Allen, '99, Retires As Vice President Of C & O R.R.

Leonard B. Allen, '99, of Cleveland, Ohio, vice president of the C&O Railroad, retired early in December, after having served in this executive capacity since April 1945.

Mr. Allen is a native of Lexington, Ky., and joined the C&O in 1899 shortly after he was graduated from the University of Kentucky with a B.S.C.E. degree. He had served as resident engineer on construction, assistant engineer maintenance of way, division engineer, engineer maintenance of way, division superintendent, general superintendent and superintendent maintenance of way, successively until 1926, when he was promoted to assistant to the vice president. From 1933 to May 1940 Mr. Allen served as assistant to executive vice president of the C&O, the New York, Chicago and St. Louis and the Pere Marquette, becoming assistant to the president of those roads on the latter date. From 1943 to 1945 he served as assistant vice president and assistant to the president of the C&O, becoming vice president of that road in 1945.

During his last two years at the University Mr. Allen worked during his vacations in the engineering department of the Southern Railway. When he was graduated a job with the Southern was waiting for him as clerk and masonry inspector. After three months with the Southern he went with the C&O, holding various assignments with that company under steady promotions.

Mr. Allen is a life member of the University of Kentucky Alumni Association, and his son, Leonard B. Allen, Jr., was graduated from the University in 1943.

Walter W., Louis E. Hillenmeyer, Jr., Head Civic Groups

Louis E. Hillenmeyer, Jr., '36, of Lexington, has been elected president of the Lexington Junior Chamber of Commerce. His cousin, Walter W. Hillenmeyer, 'Ex., is president of the Te Deum International, Lexington Catholic Forum.

Other University men, named to office by the Jaycees at a recent meeting, are: Don Buchanan, '39, John Hinkle, 'Ex., and Millard (Andy) Anderson, 'Ex., directors.

H. C. Robinson, '06 Heads Seal Drive

H. C. Robinson, '06, of Lexington, tobacco warehouseman, past president of the University of Kentucky Alumni Association and member of its executive committee, headed the Fayette county Easter seal sale this year, sponsored by the Kentucky Society for Crippled Children.

Mrs. Robinson was also honored by Lexington this spring by being chosen the city's "outstanding woman of 1946," by Chi chapter of Beta Sigma Phi, business women's sorority.

Dr. Niel Plummer, A.B. '28, M.A. '32, head of the University of Kentucky department of journalism, has been named vice president of the American Association of Schools and Departments of Journalism.

Come Back for June Reunions!

R.R. Industry Honors N. T. McKee, U.K. '03

Also Named Colonel By Governor of Ky.

Neal Trimble McKee, B.M.E. '03, honorary D.Sc. '46, has recently been featured in two railroad publications, with articles authored by the Kentucky alumnus, and sketches of his life and achievements. One appeared in the February issue of the Brotherhood of Locomotive Firemen and Enginemen's Magazine, and the other in the Elesco Times, house organ of the Superheater Company, of which Mr. McKee is vice president.

An additional honor came to Mr. McKee in December, when Governor Simeon S. Willis of Kentucky named him a colonel on his staff.

A biographical sketch of Mr. McKee, which appeared in The Elesco Times says, in part: "Neal Trimble McKee, a Superheater vice president in New York dug back into the days of early railroading to tell some of his experiences. In this issue we thought we would tell you a little more about Dr. McKee personally. He has jammed a lot of experience into his lifetime, and we think you'll enjoy reading about them.

UK Receives $1,000 In Thruston Will

The will of the late R. C. Ballard Thruston, Louisville historian and civic leader who died Dec. 30, left $1,000 to the University of Kentucky.

Other educational institutions receiving similar bequests were: the University of Louisville; Ballard School of Louisville; Berea College; Sheffield Scientific School at Yale University; Lincoln Institute; Pine Mountain Settlement School; Lincoln Memorial University at Harrogate, Tenn., and the Hindman Settlement School.

Delts Win Campus Sing, Ninth Time

Delta Tau Delta social fraternity at the University won the first post-war all-campus sing this spring, the ninth time out of the eleven events in which the Delts have been pronounced the winner.

Kappa Alpha Theta won the women's division, with Kappa Kappa Gamma as runner up in that competition and Pi Kappa Alpha second in the men's division.

D. Carl Ross, '20, Is Shrine Potentate

D. Carl Ross, '20, of Calhoun, Ky., has been elected Potentate of Rizpah Temple, Nobles of the Mystic Shrine. The election was held in Madisonville, Ky., January 9th., at which time he was also named representative to the Shrine Imperial Council meeting in Atlantic City.

Mr. Ross is serving his fourth term as county attorney of McLean county, and is a member of the Kentucky State and American Bar Associations. He is chairman of the University of Kentucky boosters group in McLean county.

Mr. Ross' son, recently discharged from the Marine Corps, is planning to enter the University of Kentucky next fall.

Lexington Mgr.
Chooses UK Grad

Richard P. Stoll

Richard P. Stoll, B.A. '42, LL.B. '44, of Lexington, has been named prosecutor for the City of Lexington by City Manager Will White, to succeed the late J. Keene Daingerfield.

Mr. Stoll is the son of Judge and Mrs. Richard C. Stoll, and is associated with the law firm of Stoll, Muir, Townsend, Park and Mohney. His appointment was made under provisions of the city's Civil Service ordinance which provides for the naming, by the city manager, of a person to fill a position requiring special qualifications.

Young Mr. Stoll's father, Judge Richard C. Stoll, is also a graduate of the University of Kentucky in the class of 1895 and has served as a member of the University's Board of Trustees for 49 years and as chairman of that body's executive committee for 29 years. Judge Stoll and his son are both life members of the Alumni Association.

Federal recognition is now pending for the 202nd. Army Ground Force band, a 29-member unit to be located on the University of Ken-

"The 'Doctor' stands for his honorary degree of Doctor of Science which was conferred upon him last June by his alma mater, the University of Kentucky. In addition to that, Dr. McKee is an honest-to-goodness Kentucky Colonel, the commission having been given him in December by Governor Simeon S. Willis. However, he lacks the black string tie and the Stetson."

The article goes on to say that, "as much as any man in America, Neal Trimble McKee grew up with the steam locomotive. Ever since his boyhood days in Kentucky, when kindly engineers used to let him ride in the cab and occasionally handle the throttle, he has been affectionately tied to railroading and locomotives.

"... When World War I broke out, this country was largely dependent upon Germany for certain engineering data, and Dr. McKee was sent abroad to bring back the information necessary for the company to carry on. Six years later he returned to Europe, to organize companies in France and England. Since 1922 he has been busy with engineering, sales, service, manufacturing, liason with foreign subsidiaries, research and development.

"At a time when most men ease into retirement, Dr. McKee continues his role as a traveler. He makes about six trips a year to East Chicago, several to Sherbrooke, Canada, and to other points. At home, at One Return Bend, Bronxville, N. Y., not far from his office in New York, he indulges his fancy for photography and carpentry.

"... The steam locomotive is close to his heart. He grew up with it, saw it through its growing pains, took it apart, put it together again, and helped make it run better. Modern railroading owes him a great deal."

Dr. White Succeeds Dean Boyd As Head Of College Of Arts And Sciences; Dr. Dantzler, Ill, Retires

DR PAUL P. BOYD

Dr. Paul P. Boyd, dean of the University of Kentucky College of Arts and Sciences for 30 years, was granted a change of occupation on the eve of his 70th birthday, Feb. 25, by the Board of Trustees. This change is in line with the University's policy of permitting its faculty members to ease up in their duties when they reach the age of 70.

Dr. M. M. White, associate dean of the college and head of the psychology department will assume the duties of dean of the college at the beginning of the summer quarter, June 16.

Another recent change among departmental heads in the College of Arts and Sciences has come about through the request by Dr. L. L. Dantzler, head of the department of English, that he be given a change of occupation because of illness, and the appointment of Dr. George K. Brady to acting head of the department.

Dr. Boyd and Mrs. Boyd were guests of honor at a dinner given by the faculty members of the department of mathematics, of which department Dean Boyd is head, on his birthday anniversary.

Dr. White, the new dean of the college, is a native of Kyle, Tex.,

and received his A.B. and M.A. degrees from his state university, and his Ph.D. degree from the University of Chicago. He came to the University of Kentucky in 1930 as assistant professor of psychology, became an associate professor in 1931, a full professor in 1934 and in 1941 was made acting director of the department of personnel. Upon the death of Dr. J. B. Miner in 1943, Dr. White was named head of the psychology department. He was given the rank of associate dean of the arts college in the same year.

Dr. Boyd has been a member of the University staff since 1912, when he came to the campus as professor of mathematics. He received his Ph.D. degree from Cornell, taught in Park College, Mo., Hanover College, Indiana, and was named head of the University of Kentucky department of mathematics in 1912. On the retirement of President Barker in 1917 he served as acting president, and was chosen dean of the college of Arts and Sciences in the same year.

At the February meeting of the Board of Trustees that body also granted a blanket pay raise of $25 per month to department heads and teachers, and $10 a month for office workers, to become effective March 1.

Termed "cost-of-living" increases by President Donovan, the raises will increase University expenditures by $266,780 a year.

College of Education Reorganized At UK

Reorganization of the College of Education into six divisions, with each division to be directed by a chairman, has been announced by University officials.

The plan, approved by the Board of Trustees, was devised to make possible a more functional program, the announcement said.

Under the reorganization plan, Dr. Ralph W. Cherry becomes head of the division of administration; Dr. Ellis F. Hartford, foundations and education; Lyman Ginger, acting chairman of instruction and placement; Dr. Carsie Hammonds, vocational education, and Dr. Charles

Dr. H. H. Downing, '08, a member of the University of Kentucky faculty for the last 38 years, has been named head of the Department of Mathematics and Astronomy. He will succeed Dr. Paul P. Boyd on June 16.

A native of Lexington, Dr. Downing received his bachelor's degree at the University and his master's and doctor's degree at the University of Chicago. He joined the U. K. staff in 1908 as instructor in mathematics and astronomy.

Dr. Downing is the author of several works in the field of mathematics and astronomy and served for more than 25 years as coach of the University tennis teams.

By A & S Associates

DR. THOMAS D. CLARK

Thomas D. Clark, '29, head of the University of Kentucky's department of history, president of the Southern Historical Society and widely-known historian and author, has been named "Distinguished Professor of the Year" by his colleagues on the faculty of the UK College of Arts and Sciences.

Inaugurated two years ago in recognition of the "outstanding accomplishment in a chosen field," the selection of a distinguished professor is made annually by secret ballot in the college faculty from among candidates holding the title of assistant professor or above.

The recipient of the honor is granted a full quarter's leave from teaching duties in order to permit him to do "further creative and scholarly work," and at the conclusion of his leave delivers the annual Arts and Sciences lecture on an appropriate subject.

UK Annual Founders Day, Happy Occasion

Dr. John J. Tigert, president of the University of Florida and former University of Kentucky faculty member and football coach, highlighted the University's third annual Founders Day and 82nd. anniversary of the establishment of the school, at a convocation program Friday morning, Feb. 21. His subject was "The University Under Four Presidents."

The occasion was also chosen by University officials as the appropriate time for the dedication of the carillonic bells presented to the University in the fall by Alexander Bonnyman, Sr., 'Ex., of Knoxville, Tenn., in memory of his son, Alexander Bonnyman, Jr., killed at Tarawa.

In dedicating the bells, President Donovan paid tribute to the men and women who have contributed to the University through the years.

"There are many men and women in different periods of the life of the University of Kentucky who have contributed to its founding, and these contributions are still going on. We predict they will continue to be made in the decades ahead.

"It is appropriate on Founders Day," the University president continued, "to dedicate the beautiful carillonic bells that have been presented to the University by Alexander Bonnyman of Knoxville, Tenn., an alumnus of the University. These bells have been given by Mr. Bonnyman in memory of his distinguished son, Lt. Alexander Bonnyman, Jr., who, on Nov. 22, 1943, on a far-away island in the Pacific that few of us had ever heard of, sacrificed his life in one of the fiercest battles of the war that this country might remain the 'land of the free and the home of the brave.'

"Lieut. Bonnyman was a brave man. Even though he was in command and could have sent others on the dangerous mission in which he lost his life, he chose to take the risk himself rather than to assign it to any of his men. For his extraordinary heroism, courage and leadership in action, the Congressional Medal of Honor has been awarded this gallant marine for whom these carillonic bells toll every quarter hour of the day and in a short concert at the end of the day."

A plaque, cast in bronze, has been erected in the foyer of Memorial Hall, where the bells have been installed, and is inscribed with the name of the donor and the dedication. A picture of the plaque appears elsewhere in this issue of the Alumnus.

Emeritus President Frank L. McVey was introduced to the convocation audience, who, in turn, presented the speaker of the morning. Dr. McVey had been Dr. Tigert's superior officer when the younger man was a member of the University faculty, and President Donovan had studied under Dr. Tigert here.

Howard Stephenson, Midway, president of the Student Government Association, gave the invocation and benediction, and Mrs. Lela Cullis played the dedication hymn, "Eternal Father, Strong to Save," on the carillonic bells.

In his address, President Tigert pointed out that nine presidents have served the University of Kentucky, but that five enjoyed only a brief tenure. He confined his remarks, therefore, to the administrations of James Kennedy Patterson, Henry Stites Barker, Frank Lerond McVey and Herman Lee Donovan.

These four presidents "have largely borne the heat and the burden of the great struggle through a long history which has brought the University out of the shadows into the sunlight of the mountain tops," Dr. Tigert declared.

In conclusion, Dr. Tigert said, "Now, a vista of the future unfolds, and I give you a preview of what lies ahead. I see new buildings and towers rising on this beautiful campus. I see other throngs of boys and girls laughing, learning, and, alas loving. I hear the voices of great scholars as they lecture and discuss the gigantic problems which the future poses. I see other leaders at the helm, but none more devoted to their task than those we remember today. I see an American university of the first mark."

Wildcats Of Other Years Gather For Founders Day

Col. McDonald, '15, Member Liquidation And Manpower Board, In Occupied Germany

Col. John W. McDonald, '15, native of Louisville, and a member of the U. S. Army since 1916, is now serving as a member of the Liquidation and Manpower Board in occupied Germany, American Zone.

Colonel McDonald has been an active member of the Alumni Association since his graduation, and last fall, when his dues came in from Germany, the editor of the Alumnus wrote and asked him about his assignment. His wife, the former Ethel M. Raynor, who is with him in Germany, has kindly furnished the office with some interesting information about his assignment.

Says Mrs. McDonald: "During the war, the Manpower Board of the Army fought constantly against waste in personnel, in all of the United States, in northern Africa, Italy, England and France. The work was that of efficiency engineers in industry, only during time of combat, the struggle was to reduce administrative personnel and to get men on to the field of action. The nature of the work was such as to require men of long years of Army experience, whose judgment was sound, authoritative and somewhat ruthless. Colonel McDonald was a charter member of the Manpower Board, formed in March 1943. He traveled everywhere it went then, and today, is with it in Frankfurt.

"In Frankfurt American women have opened a German Girls' Center for girls from 14 to 18, where a kind of Girl Scout-YWCA project is carried out with handicraft, sewing, art and English classes for the many young people who find warmth, escape and occupation away from the sordidness of bombed-out, cold, crowded homes. I spend many hours there each day and salve my conscience for being a drain on the occupation in those busy hours.

"Col. McDonald has a much happier enterprise. A graduate from Kentucky State in Agriculture, because he entered the Army in 1916, he never had a chance at farming. Now, after 31 years of Army service, he is pruning trees—apple, plum, quince and cherry—in sub-freezing weather, collecting specimens of diseased branches which he studies under a hand microscope. Saturday afternoons and Sundays, when he's not traveling, he spends many hours working on the 15 acres for which he asked (the land is within a compound and the Germans could not use it) so that he might raise good fruit crop to turn back as food to the hungry natives.

"I have a sneaking feeling that in a very few years, when he will have to retire from the Army, that I, once a Brooklynite, will be spending my future years watching John McDonald fulfilling a long submerged dream, that of being a happy farmer.

"The type of work is highly specialized and distinctly unpopular. Nobody likes his command to be reduced. Now that the war is over, the battle for administrative efficiency is none the less difficult. If a commanding officer is sufficiently interested in his job, he can see little reason for closing it out. As a matter of fact, he can always absorb more personnel. Here in Germany the stress is on allowing American civilians and German civilians to take over more and more of the burden of the occupation, with the Army acting as constabulary. The Army, however, still administers the occupation, through its own personnel, through military government and through German local governments. The battle, now, however, is to conduct a stable, effective occupation and at the same time avoid placing too great a strain on (Continued on Page 15)

Fire Destroys Little Theatre In February

Approximate Loss To Guignol, $40,000

Guignol theater and quarters of the dramatic arts department at the University were swept by fire Feb. 10, which flashed through the west wing of the University Arts Center on Euclid Avenue at an estimated loss of $40,000 to $50,000, 90 per cent of which was covered by insurance.

Believed to have started in the theater's projection room, the blaze was confined by firemen mostly to the west wing of the building, preventing extensive damage to the east wing which housed the department of music.

Approximately 200 students were in the building, a temporary structure of wood and composition materials, when the fire broke out at 2:50 p. m. Dr. Alexander Capurso, head of the music department, said that $35,000 worth of musical and library equipment was removed to safety by music students and faculty members.

Guignol Director Frank Fowler, however, reported that stage equipment, costumes, scenery, library materials, curtains and other equipment of the theatre and dramatic arts department were lost in the flames. Alumni will regret to learn that the beautiful and well-remembered patchwork curtain, a Guignol landmark since the early days of the little theater, was completely destroyed.

Guignol was constructed in 1926 and the first play presented there was "Sister Beatrice." Mr. Fowler recalled that actors trained in Guignol and now in Hollywood include Douglas Dick and Marjorie Weaver of the movies, and Tom Powers of the New York stage.

Elgan Farris, chief of maintenance and operations at the University stated that school authorities have been pressing for several months for architects' drawings of a new fine arts center to replace the structure destroyed in February. He said present plans called for receiving bids on the art building about May 1.

UK Holds Classes At Mammoth Cave

Approximately 110 prospective teachers of agriculture were given a three-weeks course at Mammoth Cave Park Hotel in January through a school operated by the University of Kentucky College of Education.

Placed at Mammoth Cave because the University's main campus at Lexington currently lacks space and facilities, the school was set up for students who have had previous training in technical agriculture and who have had successful farming experience, according to Watson Armstrong, state director of vocational education.

the German economy, thus crippling their efforts toward rehabilitation. The Manpower Board tries to solve these problems analytically.

"The life itself is a cross between luxury and want, and we live from day to day with fascination as to what will happen next, lacking many of the simplest necessities while our place abounds with servants. We see constant suffering from want, cold, hunger, shelter, clothes—and are increasingly frustrated by our inability to relieve this want except by minor individual acts. The winter has been long and harsh. It is an unhappy world, a world with little hope for the future."

$1,000,000 Dormitory For Women To Be Started At U.K. In Spring

Will House 264 Women Students

According to present plans, construction of a new $1,000,000 women's residence hall on the University of Kentucky campus, with accommodations for 264 students, is expected to be begun this spring.

The new residence hall will be built on a large plot at the rear of the Arts Center, site of the department of music and Guignol theater which was damaged extensively by fire in February.

The new building will front 223 feet on Harrison Avenue, and will be the fourth residence hall for University women. Future plans also call for the construction of a fifth women's dormitory on the site of the burned Arts Center, but these plans are still in the tentative stage.

The new hall will be four stories high and will contain a central dining unit, which is expected ultimately to accommodate all residents of the three present units, the new building and the proposed fifth structure. Six dining rooms are planned.

Of Georgian design, the new dormitory will have, on the first floor, suites for the supervisor and head resident; two reception rooms; dining room with kitchenette; laundry and parcel room and postoffice; supervisor's office, and trunk hoist in addition to miscellaneous rooms and conveniences.

Plans for the second and third floors are alike, with study halls at the end of each floor and a supervisor's suite in addition to rooms for approximately 85 women on each floor. The fourth floor, similarly arranged, will care for up to 20 women. In the basement will be suites for the dietitian and housekeeper, student laundry, game room and storage rooms.

Frankel and Curtis are the architects for this building, and both are University graduates. Mr. L. K. Frankel was a member of the class of 1900, and J. J. Curtis was graduated in 1910 and holds an M.E. degree obtained in 1912.

Dr. Claiborne G. Latimer, professor of mathematics at the University of Kentucky for the past 20 years, has resigned to accept a professorship at Emory University, Atlanta, Ga.

Ground For Field House Is Broken

Formal ground-breaking ceremonies for the University of Kentucky's new war memorial auditorium-fieldhouse were held Tuesday afternoon, April 1, with Governor Simeon S. Willis, chairman of the board of trustees, wielding the spade.

The program included brief talks by President H. L. Donovan, Governor Willis, music by the University band, and turning over the first spade-full of dirt. University trustees, in session on the campus April 1, and other notables witnessed the ceremony.

Members of the American Legion, Veterans Club and Pershing Rifles, crack military drill unit, participated. Invocation was offered by the Rev. T. W. Beeler, chaplain of Man O' War Post, American Legion, and benediction was said by C. Hoge Hockensmith, vice president of the University Veterans' Club.

Dr. John J. Tigert, president of the University of Florida and former athletic director and head football coach at the University of Kentucky, has handed in his resignation as president of the Florida school, effective next September.

Work Begins On U. K. Fieldhouse

When local residents visit the campus of Kentucky's state university at Lexington in 1949 they should find plenty of room to meet in convention or to view athletic teams in action if the present schedule for construction of the University of Kentucky's new Memorial Auditorium-Fieldhouse is followed. The huge structure will seat 12,000 persons and will have, as one of its unusual features, adjustable temporary walls allowing the creation of auditoriums of various sizes.

U. K. Tells Of $2,703,000 Building Plans

A $2,703,000 program of new buildings and improvements at the University of Kentucky has been announced by University officials, following approval by the state attorney general's office on contracts for architectural phases of the work.

The program calls for a new $1,750,000 science building; a $420,000 building for the journalism department and Kentucky Kernel; a $268,000 addition to the education building; a $35,000 addition to the animal pathology building, and $30,000 for rewiring the older portion of the Agricultural Experiment Station building.

Frank D. Peterson, comptroller, said that the buildings were among those proposed by President H. L. Donovan in his often-mentioned plan to ask the 1948 Kentucky State Legislature for $10,000,000 in capital-outlay funds.

The plans-and-specifications phase of the projects are covered by Federal Works Agency funds, Mr. Peterson said. Money for actual construction of the science, journalism and education buildings is not available at present.

The animal pathology building addition and the rewiring project are covered by current funds, and work will be started on these as soon as plans are completed. The other buildings could not be started sooner than from one to four years, he said.

The journalism and Kernel building will be located north of McVey hall on the campus. Location of the science building has not been decided upon. Eventually the Journalism Department hopes to set up its own college, members of the journalism faculty said.

THE KENTUCKY ALUMNUS

Dr. Donovan Sends Reply To Criticism By State Candidate

An editorial which appeared this spring in the University of Kentucky Extension Bulletin, characterizing the state Constitution as "a despotic document which helps keep Kentucky from its place high on the roster of states offering more abundant living," was the subject of an attack by Jesse W. Knox, Frankfort, announced candidate for the Republican nomination as governor.

In a letter to President H. L. Donovan, Mr. Knox declared: "As a taxpayer, I would appreciate you advising me as to whether or not this false propaganda is being disseminated with public funds, and if so, by whose direction and by what authority of law."

'Have Right to Give Views'

Knox said in his letter, "The characterization of our great Constitution as a despotic document . . . is, of course, absurd and ridiculous and could only come from the mind of one who has no acquaintance with . . . the principles of democratic and constitutional government."

Knox continued: "All citizens, including those who edit The University Extension Bulletin, have a right to express their views on the question of calling a constitutional convention, but none of us have the right to propagandize our ideas on controversial political issues at the taxpayers expense."

Opposes Convention

He expressed confidence Dr. Donovan would agree with him "as to the proprieties in this matter" and would "take whatever steps are necessary to prevent the facilities of the university from being further used in an unfair and unlawful manner."

When Knox, native of Lewisport, announced candidacy February 13, he said he was opposed to the calling of a constitutional convention.

He recently resigned as a State Highway Department engineer. Earlier he had been manager of Ephraim McDowell Hospital, Danville, and a director and vice-president of the Kentucky Hospital Association.

President Donovan, in a stoutly worded reply to Mr. Knox, defended the right of professors to comment on social issues.

He said: "So long as I am president of the University of Kentucky I am going to protect the professors of this institution in their right of freedom of speech and academic freedom so generally recognized.

"I do not want our professors at the University of Kentucky to belong to the neuter gender. If they are so negative in character as not to feel the desire to express their opinions about great social and moral issues, then they would not be worth the salt that goes into their bread."

He said State law permitted the University to "publish bulletins, catalogues, and brochures of various kinds."

"When," he added, "did the discussion of the need for a new Constitution for Kentucky become a partisan political issue? Was it when you announced for Governor and made this one of the chief planks of your platform?"

"From my point of view, and I believe from the point of view of those professors at the university who have discussed this problem, it is a great social issue and not a political issue.

"Of course, nearly any problem that comes up for the consideration of society can be made a political issue if there are those who are inclined to pitch the discussion upon such a level."

Bulletin Setup Explained

Louis Clifton, director of extension at the University, said the statement over which Knox was concerned was an editorial supplement written by Gordon C. Godby of the extension staff, to the February issue of the monthly University of Kentucky Bulletin.

Clifton described the periodical as an outlet for discussions on topics of the day.

In this instance, it dealt with high-school discussion contests, theme of which was the State Constitution controversy. The Bulletin gave a

March Graduate Attended UK From Kindergarten Thru College

When Miss Martha Linney of Lexington completed her college work at the University on March 19, she closed a 16-year career as a student on the campus—and they didn't have to burn the buildings down to get her out, either!

All 16 years were legitimate, with no flunkings included, because Miss Linney began her University career in the University School kindergarten, and completed it across the street after four years as a college student. She is the first student to go through, from kindergarten to college, at the University.

"I never had any desire to go to another school and it is rather hard to believe that I won't be going to the University any more," she is quoted by a Lexington Herald reporter. "I am going to be sort of sad when the final day comes and I leave the University, that is if I do leave!"

Miss Linney started in kindergarten with six other students who went through high school at the training school, but who did not continue through the University.

report on the contests and was supplemented by Godby's editorial comment, Clifton said.

The University Extension Service has been sponsoring such contests for 25 years, Clifton said.

Following the receipt of Dr. Donovan's letter by Mr. Knox, the gubernatorial candidate threatened to file a lawsuit if the University of Kentucky continued what Mr. Knox describes as advocacy of a new state Constitution in its publications, according to an Associated Press story of March 3.

Mr. Knox made the threat in a letter addressed to Dr. H. L. Donovan.

Charging the University was misusing public funds, Knox declared in the letter that if it continues, "I as a taxpayer will take whatever legal action is necessary to protect the rights of the public and to compel you and your staff to live within the law."

Knox referred to Donovan's reply to the candidate's recent protest

Plans Completed For Merging College Of Pharmacy With U.K.

Plans for merging the Louisville College of Pharmacy with the University of Kentucky were agreed upon at a joint meeting of trustees and officials of the two institutions held April 1 at the University of Kentucky. The merger will become effective July 1.

In a separate session UK trustees voted:

1. To name the new dormitory now under construction on Washington street the "John B. Bowman hall."

2. Accepted final plans and authorized bids for the construction of a new fine arts building and a dairy building.

Under terms of an agreement for merging the College of Pharmacy with the University, the pharmaceutical school will be operated in Louisville until students now enrolled have completed their work. Freshman students planning to against University professors using publications there to advocate a constitutional convention.

Knox asserted in his letter that the reply "completely failed to cite any provision of the law which authorizes anyone at the University to expend public funds to propagandize their private views on controversial political questions."

The letter continued, in part:

"A man in your high position ought to understand the processes of democratic government and should set an example of law observance. However, you appear wholly unconcerned about the matter except that you want an increase in salary and are willing to use the facilities belonging to the taxpayers to attain your purpose.

"Although the people of Kentucky have voted four times in recent years to not increase your salary, you seem unimpressed by their sovereign will, and in defiance thereof appear to be leading the University on a course contrary to the expressed will of the people."

major in pharmacy will do the non-professional part of their work on the campus here.

The University agreed to provide a suitable building on the campus here and to make the College of Pharmacy an integral part of the University. The College will be headed by a dean.

Under terms of the agreement the College of Pharmacy will be operated to meet standards of the American Council on Pharmaceutical Education and it will be "of equal rank and dignity with other colleges of the University, with an adequate and impartial allocation of funds for its successful operation, with student fees commensurate with fees paid by students in other professional colleges operated by the University."

On July 1 the College of Pharmacy will convey all its property and assets used in connection with operating the school to the University.

Present faculty members of the school who are qualified to teach in an accredited college of pharmacy will be employed, upon recommendation of the dean and University president, if their services are needed.

Directors of the Louisville college will function as an advisory council to the dean.

The Louisville institution is the only pharmaceutical college in Kentucky and its present enrollment is 208 students with a faculty of 15. It was incorporated in 1873.

The merger gives the University seven colleges and a graduate school.

The School of Pharmacy, only one of its type in Kentucky, was chartered in 1873. It operates as a non-profit and private institution, without any connection with the University of Louisville. The latter is operated by the City of Louisville.

The pharmacy school, with an enrollment of 207 students, is housed in a single 100-year-old building which has been enlarged and remodeled several times. Its expenses are paid from student fees and donations from private sources.

President Wants Veterinary School Established On Campus

Tells Farm And Home Group Plans for UK

An over-all program for the University of Kentucky of the future, which would include establishment of a school of veterinary science, was outlined by President H. L. Donovan at a convocation of farmers in attendance at the annual Farm and Home Convention on the University campus in January.

He punctuated his outline, however, with a reminder that salary restrictions would have to be removed from the State Constitution to meet the demands of the University's teachers, and told the group that Kentucky needs a revision of that document.

"Kentucky is noted for its famous livestock," Dr. Donovan said. "Probably no institution in the nation is better located for the establishment of a school of veterinary science. Already there is a constant demand on the part of people in the livestock business for the University to train veterinary scientists."

The University head pointed out that a school for the education of veterinarians would not require "too great an expenditure," as the University's College of Agriculture already has a number of men working in that field.

He estimated that Kentucky's farmers' incomes have increased $50,000,000 a year as the result of University services, including those by the College of Agriculture, the Agricultural Experiment Station and the agricultural extension service. "I find the people of Kentucky want a good University," said President Donovan, "and I do not believe they are going to be satisfied until their University is equal to the state universities of those states bordering Kentucky."

"I know the people want a university free from political control; free from partisan politics, where professors and research workers can enjoy their teaching and research. They demand a university where men may seek the truth and publish their findings without censorship of any kind. This is the kind of university Kentucky must and shall have."

"Permission to pay faculty members salaries equal to those in other universities of this region is a need which we trust that the people of the state will grant the University by writing a new constitution."

Earle D. Jones, A.B. '28, M.A. '41, coach of the Maysville, Ky., high school's state championship basketball team, has been named "Kentucky Coach of the Year" by state sports writers.

Junior Medical School Proposed By Doctor For University Of Ky.

Never Considered, Says Dr. Donovan

A proposal by Dr. O. F. Hume of Richmond that the 1948 Ky. Legislature create a junior medical school at the University of Kentucky, to relieve the shortage of rural doctors in the state, has never been considered by the University, according to a statement issued by President H. L. Donovan.

Made before the sixth district organization of citizens of the state who are interested in raising a $100,000 scholarship fund to encourage more young men and women to study medicine in Kentucky, Dr. Hume's statement in support of his proposal, said, in part: "Two facts must be faced frankly. The first is that a four-year medical school cannot be established at the University of Kentucky until a public general hospital with charity beds is built at Lexington. The second fact is that the University of Louisville, under present conditions, cannot graduate enough doctors to meet rural needs in Kentucky."

Later in the week, Dr. Donovan said the University had never considered the establishment of a junior medical college, and that he would "prefer not to discuss the possible feasibility of such an undertaking without giving it greater study."

Scherago Appointed To Editorial Board

Dr. Morris Scherago, head of the University of Kentucky department of bacteriology, has been appointed to the editorial board of the Quarterly Review of Allergy and Applied Immunology, according to word received from the editor, Dr. Fred W. Wittich, Minneapolis, Minn.

The publication is the newest addition to the quarterly review journals devoted to the various specialties in medicine. The journals are international in scope and the editorial board members are selected from among specialists throughout the world.

U. Ky's. 1947 Net Immortals Honored By Alumni

Annual Dinner For Team Held April 5

Honors were heaped upon honors at the Alumni Association's 1947 banquet for the Wildcat basketball team, Saturday night, April 5 in the Bluegrass room of the Student Union. Features of the occasion were the presentation, by Coach Adolph Rupp, of All American trophies to three members of the squad: Ralph Beard, Alex Groza and Jack Tingle, and the presentation of the Jerome Lederer trophy for the outstanding member of the team to Capt. Kenny Rollins, chosen by his teammates for that honor.

Easter decorations featured the dinner tables, gay in spring pastels. Presiding over the program was H. D. Palmore, '14, of Frankfort, past president of the Alumni Association, alumnus member of the Board of Trustees and member of the Athletic committee.

Speakers included President H. L. Donovan who termed the 1947 Wildcat netters the finest group of athletes and gentlemen he had ever known; Coach Rupp who called the current Wildcats "the team of the century," and Captain Rollins; B. A. Shively, '36, athletic director, read the list of lettermen, to whom sweaters were awarded by Coach Rupp. Robert Davis of Lexington, presented the Lederer trophy in the absence of the donor from the city.

A floor show and dance followed the dinner.

Additional Honors Come To UK Netters

When the smoke of battle had cleared for the 1946-47 Wildcat basketball team, a number of individual honors had been gleaned, in addition to the copping of the first five places on the mythical All-Southeastern Conference five.

Ralph Beard, the gum-chewing little fireball guard, was chosen the outstanding player to appear in New York this season by the Metropolitan Basketball Writers Association, and was also selected on True's first All-American team, having received the highest number of votes of any man selected for this mythical squad. Groza and Tingle were also chosen on True's All-American team.

Beard and Alex Groza, Kentucky's elongated center, also won berths on the Trans-radio Press Service's All-American team and with Rollins had also been selected, earlier in the season, on the press service's All-Southern quintet.

Wallace Wah Wah Jones, Kentucky's All-Southeastern football and basketball star, together with Groza, were also named on the first all-tournament team at the conference.

America's No. 1 Team, Best Quintet In U.K.'s. History

By J. R. "BABE" KIMBROUGH, '29
Sports Editor, Lexington Herald

Only 16 points separated the 1946-1947 University of Kentucky basketball team from the title of "America's Greatest Cage Quintet."

It wasn't that Coach Adolph Rupp's Wildcats needed 16 more points to add to their record-breaking season's total of 2,536. What they needed was 16 points less on the totals of three of their opponents.

In 37 games—the heaviest schedule ever played by a Wildcat team—the Kentuckians registered 34 victories against three defeats. Two of these losses were by six points and the third was by four points, all heartbreakers.

After winning eleven games in succession by lopsided scores the Wildcats, National Invitational defending champions, journeyed to New Orleans to meet the Oklahoma A. & M. cagers in the Sugar Bowl classic. The Aggies, their record already marred by defeat, caught the Kentuckians off guard to hand them their first setback, 37-31.

But despite this setback, Coach Rupp's boys bounced back like the champions they were to win 10 more victories in succession—one of them a sensational 60-30 decision over the strong Irish quintet from Notre Dame.

This resounding victory over the South Benders again focused the national basketball spotlight on the Wildcats, already hailed as the No. 1 team of the nation. Then, two days later when they clipped the University of Alabama cagers—at that time leaders of the Southeastern Conference—in Tuscaloosa the lights became even brighter.

Riding the crest of the wave, the Kentuckians departed for Chicago to meet DePaul University, a team which they had beaten by 20 points earlier in the season at Louisville. And again it happened.

Rupp's Raiders were as flat as an Aunt Jemima pancake when they took the floor against DePaul that night in the Windy City. Their marksmanship was at a low ebb, their passing wild, their floor work sloppy. And when the final whistle blew they were trailing, 53 to 47.

Returning from Chicago, the Wildcats still had six games facing them—five Conference battles—before the SEC tournament. Again they pulled themselves together and disposed of these six opponents with comparative ease, scoring more than 80 points against three of the teams.

With the regular season schedule out of the way, Coach Rupp put his cagers to work in preparation for the Southeastern tournament. Although his boys were heavy favorites to cop their fourth consecutive Conference crown, the Wildcat mentor remembered the two defeats which they had suffered during the season and vowed to take no chances in the tourney.

Stepping into their first tournament game against Vanderbilt, the Kentuckians proved that the experts had not over-rated them by handing the Commodores a 98-29 drubbing. Then they whizzed through the second-round game with an 84-18 victory over the Auburn Plainsmen, polished off Georgia Tech, 75-53, in the semifinals, and won the loop halo by trouncing Tulane's Green Wave, 55-38, in the finals.

But winning the Conference title was not enough for this great Kentucky team. There were more honors in store for them.

When the votes were counted for the All-Conference team five Wildcats headed the list—the first time in history that one school had dominated the mythical quintet completely. At the forward spots were Joe Holland and Jack Tingle. Wallace (Wah Wah) Jones, who had played as a substitute for Alex Groza and ended up with high-scoring honors for the tournament, was given the pivot post, and Capt. Ken Rollins and dashing little Ralph Beard were named as the guards.

Groza, who was allowed to play but very little in the tourney games because of a back injury, won a spot on the second team.

After the Conference meet, the Wildcats were carded for one more game—a post-season affair with Temple—before going to New York to defend their National Invitational crown. They met the Owls in the Jefferson County Armory at Louisville, out-matched the Philadelphia quintet in every department of play, and chalked up their 32nd victory, 68-29.

Arriving in New York, the Kentuckians found that they were heavy favorites to repeat in the National Invitational, but they were warned that their toughest foe might be Long Island University, the team they had to face in the opening round.

The dopesters weren't far off on the Blackbirds, either, for they put up a whale of a battle and the Kentuckians were forced to call upon all their resources to win a four-point victory. A long shot from the corner of the court by Jones and a crip by Tingle in the closing seconds of play did the trick.

Remembering the scare which the Long Islanders gave them, the Wildcats were more cautious in their semifinal game with North Carolina State and had little trouble in disposing of the Wolfpack, 60-42.

Then came the finals pitting the favored Kentucky team against the Utah Utes, a quintet which had knocked off two seeded teams, Duquesne and West Virginia, to reach the top round.

From the very start of the game it was apparent that the Wildcats were badly off form. They appeared tired, were unable to work their plays as the fighting Utes hung on their heels, tracked them up and down the court, stole rebound after rebound and walked away with a 49-45 victory to give the basketball world one of its greatest upsets.

Loss of the Invitational was, of course, a great disappointment to the Kentucky players and fans. But looking back over the season the 1946-1947 Wildcats have nothing to be ashamed of, for they gave the University the greatest record in history.

Those three defeats were tough, yes. But don't forget the 34 victories;—they were sweet.

New Post Offered Coach Rupp By Louisville Professionals

"Maestro" Postpones Decision For Time

Stating that "I'm in the midst of a fairly successful season here at the University, and have no comment to make on any offers at the present time," Coach Adolph Rupp, head basketball mentor at the University for the seventeen most successful years in its net history, postponed until the end of the current season the coaching offer made in February by the colorful "Baron of Basketball" by Willis W. Wyant, Chicago, Ill., president of the newly incorporated Louisville professional basketball team, the Louisville Dads.

In commenting on the offer to Coach Rupp, Mr. Wyant said, that "we are out to get the best coach in the business, and Rupp is our first choice. We are willing to pay him more money than any other basketball coach ever has received. We will offer him at least 50 per cent more than he is making at the University of Kentucky. With salary and bonus, he could make $15,000 a year with us. Our guaranteed offer will be a five-year contract at $10,000 a year."

Sponsored by Dad's Root Beer, which plans to open a Louisville bottling plant where members of the team will be given off-season employment, the Louisville Dads have been promised the first new franchise granted in the National Professional League, Mr. Wyant said.

The bottling official also stated that if Rupp declines the offer, he will be asked to serve as advisory coach, a capacity in which he could retain his job at Kentucky. "As advisory coach Mr. Rupp would have the privilege of naming our coach for us and assisting himself whenever time from his college duties permitted."

FLASH!

On April 18, Coach Rupp announced that he has decided to remain with the University of Kentucky!

Come Back for June Reunions!

All-Kentucky Wildcats

The thing that we principally like about the Southeastern Conference's all-tournament team selections is that the all-Southeastern is also an all-Kentucky team.

There is no disposition here to show a preference over those out-of-staters who have added to the brilliant Wildcat aggregation that has caused thrills to all who have seen them on the basketball floors this year. They have all established their right, in the Blue and White jerseys, to be called Kentuckians always, whenever and wherever they choose, under the old axiom, "once a Kentuckian, always a Kentuckian."

But it does answer any charge that might be brought up that Kentucky has had to go out and scour the country to bring in basketball players to establish a winning team. It shows that at the University of Kentucky basketball is an integral part of an athletic program which, though it could be and ought to be greatly enlarged, is there for the Kentucky boys to enjoy and to display their prowess in basketball. The same thing is true of football too. Of course, these Kentucky boys want to have colleagues from out of the state. There is nothing provincial in their attitude. It is true, too, that basketball breaks up provincialism.

Nevertheless here is Wah Wah Jones, of Harlan. One Eastern sports writer had referred to the Wildcats as a team of tall mountaineers. Jones fits the description but is the only Eastern Kentuckian on the all-Southeastern Conference five. Kenny Rollins is from Wickliffe, a progressive town on the Mississippi river. Joe Holland is from Benton, in Marshall county, also in the First Congressional district. Jack Tingle is from Bedford. Ralph Beard, native of Hardinsburg, is now from Louisville.

So the selections are well divided, geographically, and there could be no better way to illustrate how the University of Kentucky serves the entire state. Congratulations to this tournament team and to all of Rupp's boys on a magnificent showing.—Lexington Herald, Mar. 5, 1947

125 Men Report For Grid Preps

When Head Coach Paul Bryant and his able staff of assistants called spring football practice in February, 125 hopefuls reported.

The Kentucky staff has traveled far and wide since the close of a successful football season in November, scouring the countryside for prospective material, and while many candidates were present for spring practice, the bulk of the material is scheduled to report for drills after high school graduations in June.

Wilbur "Shorty" Jamerson, 17-year-old grid star at Barret Manual Training High School in Henderson last fall, is expected to be among those young hopefuls reporting to Coach Bryant following commencement in June. In addition to being an outstanding high school football player, and probably one of the most highly publicized Ky. high school stars last fall, Jamerson is also outstanding in basketball, track and baseball.

25,000 To Sit At U.K. Grid Games

Although actual enlargement of McLean stadium probably will not be possible before 1948, seats for about 25,000 fans will be provided for 1947 football games at Stoll Field, according to an announcement from Athletic Director B. A. Shively.

This will provide an increase of about 6,000 over last year's seating capacity, made possible by the school's purchase of movable steel bleachers.

The new steel bleachers will be erected in four sections as wings to the existing concrete stands, each containing 30 rows of seats and extending almost as high as the concrete sections. Wooden bleachers will be placed again behind the end zones at the ends of the playing field, in the location where the steel bleachers will be used after the stadium is enlarged.

Art Nutting Named Co. Vice President

Arthur Nutting, chief engineer, American Air Filter Co., Inc., has been appointed a vice-president of the company in charge of engineering according to a recent announcement from W. M. Reed, president.

Born in Louisville, Ky., Mr. Nutting, a graduate of the University of Kentucky, received his B.S.M.E. in 1927. Following his graduation, he served a short time with the State Highway Commission before becoming affiliated with AAF in 1928. Since 1937, when he was made chief engineer, Mr. Nutting has been in charge of the American Air Filter

"Wah" Jones Given Lions Club Trophy

Wallace (Wah Wah) Jones, winner of all-conference honors in both basketball and football the past year, was awarded the Lexington Lions Club trophy as the most valuable player on the University of Kentucky football squad during the 1946 campaign.

Presentation of the gold statuette took place at the club's weekly luncheon-meeting at the Lafayette hotel in January, being made by George Horine, a member of the Lions Club and an ardent Wildcat fan who was one of the Salesmen's Club leaders in a financial campaign conducted last year in behalf of U.K. athletics.

An award for the most valuable member of the U.K. grid squad each season was established by the Lions 10 years ago, but no awards were made during the war years.

Jones, whose selection was made in a secret ballot conducted among sports writers and radiocasters, has played regular right end for the Wildcats for the last two years. He was described by Head Coach Bear Bryant during the past season as one of the best flankmen in the nation, and at the close of the campaign was named on the first all-American team selected by the Central Press, on an all-Midwest team chosen by another press service and on The Associated Press all-Southeastern Conference first team.

Last winter, as a freshman, the Harlan youth played regular center on the Kentucky basketball team and was accorded all-conference honors at the close of the annual loop tournament in Louisville.

Company's engineering and research programs.

Mr. Nutting is widely known in the air filtration field and has been a prominent figure in ASH & VE activities, becoming a full member in 1930. He served as a member of the Air Filter Test Code Committee in 1938.

Kentucky Honors Mississippian

Thomas D. Clark is not a Kentuckian by birth but the fascinating style in which he writes of her history would recommend him for adoption. Born in Mississippi, this state has been his home the past fifteen years. And from his beginning as an instructor in history at the University of Kentucky he advanced to a full professorship and head of the Department of History two years ago. His books have been many and the subjects intensely interesting. Since locating in Lexington, where the urge to pioneer was first expressed in the palisaded settlement during Revolutionary times, Clark has become acquainted with the prime movers in Central Kentucky's initial development. He writes copiously, thrillingly, with no halting of his flow of ideas clothed in expressive words.

Before coming to Kentucky he had worked diligently toward perfecting himself in the acquirement of knowledge attached to the expansion of a few frontier towns into the second state admitted into the Union. He is a member of the Filson Club, that alone attests his purpose to inform himself, for those who belong to that club sought membership for the opportunities to fellowship with others who would know more about Kentucky. But he added to that association other available sources of information, and wherever he goes about the state his pen is ready and his inquiring eyes are alert for material of a historical nature. Only 43, there is in him a youthful exuberance that keeps him alert, and before a half century is behind him he will have another shelf of Kentucky histories.

Professor Clark was a small town Mississippian. Louisville, in the east central section with only 3,000 people was the place of his birth. He must have had the typical curiosity of small town and country folk, for he began to forage far from his natal territory in quest of an education. From the University of Mississippi he moved over to the University of Virginia, Duke University, and spent a while at the University of Kentucky, which he was to enrich with his genius. The small town boy with a thirst for knowledge in transportation became a railroader—as a historian—and then a Kentucky pioneer, mixing with Simon Kenton and contemporaries. Not content to hear others talk about Kentucky rivers, Professor Clark made personal explorations and wrote about them.

University of Kentucky students who during the past fifteen years have been privileged to sit under the teachings of Professor Clark must have been fortunate, from reports of his excellence in imparting information to others. An instructor in history who can vitalize the printed words with the lambent flame of his own enthusiasm is a valuable asset on any faculty, from grade school

A social research-consultation service, to assist private and public community groups throughout the state, has been set up by skilled social scientists at the University of Kentucky.

Dr. Irwin T. OBITUARIES

DR. C. R. MELCHER, 83, dean of men emeritus and retired head of the department of German at the University of Kentucky, died March 23 at his home in Lexington. He had suffered a heart attack the day before. Dean Melcher came to the University in 1907 and was retired July 1, 1933. Born in Vevay, Ind., Dr. Melcher was graduated from Hanover College in Indiana in 1885, where he also received his M.A. degree in 1890 and an LL.D. degree in 1935. He attended the Universities of Munich and Leipzig in Germany during 1886-'88 and took special work at the University of Chicago and University of Louisville. He was principal of Vevay High school in 1885-1886 and was superintendent of schools at Carrollton, Ky., from 1889 to 1895. In 1901-02 he was principal of Reynolds Presbyterian Academy at Albany,

Texas, and from 1902 to 1907 taught ancient and modern languages at Hanover College. Prof. Melcher became assistant professor of modern languages at the University in 1907 and the following year was given a full professorship. He was named dean of men in 1914 and also served as head of the Department of German from 1917 to 1933, when he retired. Survivors include his wife, Mrs. Mary Shannon Taylor

Melcher, and a daughter, Mrs. Ruth Patterson, of Plymouth, Mich.

DR. C. C. ROSS, 54, professor of educational psychology at the University of Kentucky since 1926, died March 8 at the Good Samaritan Hospital, after an illness of two weeks. A native of Church Hill, Tenn., Dr. Ross received his bachelor's degree from Carson-Newman College in 1914, his master's degree from the University of Tennessee in 1916 and his Ph.D. degree from Columbia in 1925. A veteran of World War I, and a resident of Lexington for the past 21 years, Dr. Ross taught in the American University established at Shrivenham, England, during World War II. Before joining the University staff in 1926, he taught at Furman University and Iowa State College. He is survived by his wife, Mrs. Vera K. Ross; two sons, Clay Campbell Ross, Jr., and John Newton Ross, all of Lexington; two sisters and two brothers.

ROGERS CLARK BALLARD THRUSTON, Louisville historian and civic leader, who was granted an honorary degree from the University of Kentucky in 1942, died Dec. 30 of a heart attack. Mr. Thruston, whose family has been closely linked with the history of Kentucky, retired from active business in 1909 to devote his time to historical research. He had been president, generous contributor to and supporter of the Filson Club—Kentucky's historical club—since 1923. He was a recognized authority on the United States flag, and his pamphlet, "The History and Evolution of the United States Flag" was published by the government. He was a member of numerous historical and civic groups and had at one time served as president of the Yale Alumni Association of Kentucky. Mr. Thruston is survived by a number of nieces and nephews.
