Roselle confirms that Manuel's test probably an allegation

By JAY BLANTON
Editor in Chief

UK President David Roselle said last night that University lawyers investigating the men's basketball program told him that allegations of possible wrongdoing concerning Eric Manuel's ACT test probably will be brought against UK by the NCAA.

"The reason it was being investigated by NCAA apparently was that they intended to include it among the allegations," Roselle told the Kernel.

The president said he did not know what any of the other allegations against the basketball program might be.

Roselle informed UK athletic officials and a faculty representative at a meeting Sunday of the concern about Manuel's eligibility.

"We'd received an update that said there may be reason to be concerned about the results of Eric Manuel's ACT examination," Roselle said. "I don't know the details of why we ought to be concerned."

The meeting was attended by UK basketball coach Eddie Sutton, Athletic Director Cliff Hagan, Robert Lawson, faculty representative, and Joe Burch and Judge

James Parks, the UK lawyers, Roselle said.

"The reason the lawyers came to see me was that they had information that suggested that, and I don't know if it's NCAA information or if information that was developed otherwise," Roselle said. "I think the NCAA information has suggested that one could be of concern, of special concern."

Concern about Manuel's test scores stems from the marked rise in test averages between the sophomore guard's two lower scores on the SAT test, taken in Georgia, and his score on the ACT test, taken in Lexington.

UK gets its investigation of the men's basketball program to coincide with an NCAA probe, begun after a Los Angeles newspaper reported that a package sent by assistant coach Dwane Casey to the father of Wildcat recruit Chris Mills contained $1,000.

According to The Los Angeles Daily News, the package popped open in transit, revealing 20 $50 bills.

Casey and Mills's father, Claud, have denied that the envelope contained money.

Casey's lawyer, Joe Bill Campbell, earlier said that Casey had been set up.

"Someone put that money in the package in order to do harm to Dwane Casey," Campbell said.

The NCAA also informed the University that approximately 10 additional allegations against the basketball program are being prepared.

Last month Hagan delivered his first statement on the investigation. Much of Hagan's comments concerned, what he considered to be, positive aspects of UK's athletic program.

Paper chase

State newspaper representatives make their pitch around campus

By CHARLIE McCUE
Contributing Writer

Sophomore Nancy Paulin doesn't want a subscription to the Lexington Herald-Leader or the Louisville Courier-Journal.

She didn't want one the first time she was asked. Nor did she want one the second or third time.

"They are wasting their time and money," she said, "and they get on my nerves."

Junior Michael Clevenger said that the people at the booths where subscriptions are sold "were trained to be manipulative and insulting."

Both papers set up booths at Kennedy and UK bookstores and on the Student Center patio during the first two weeks of regular classes at UK.

The Courier-Journal has additional booths set up inside the Student Center and on Rose Street.

Students can pick up free copies of the papers at the booths and sign up for discount subscription rates.

And although many students say that the Herald-Leader and Courier-Journal sales representatives are bothersome, the representatives say the campus subscription campaign increases circulation a great deal.

"We're trying to make the paper as accessible as possible to the students," said Greg Greer, metro circulation manager for the Herald-Leader.

On the Monday before the start of regular classes, the papers face-off for two weeks of head-to-head competition.

Herald-Leader salesman Doug Watts delivers his spiel: "The Herald-Leader is printed two to three hours later than the Courier-Journal so that gives us better coverage of west coast baseball and late-breaking stories."

The Courier booth counters: "The Courier-Journal's state coverage is far better (than the Herald-Leader). Since many of the UK students are from Kentucky, they like to know what's going on throughout the state."

The Herald-Leader this year has increased the number of student subscriptions 17 percent over last year.

The Courier-Journal has also seen a steady increase in campus subscriptions.

Both papers have been setting up booths on campus during the first few weeks of school for about 10 years.

CHE reviewing funding formula

By JAY BLANTON
Editor in Chief

Balancing the percentages of state funding to the state universities will be the major concern at a Sept. 30 hearing at UK to discuss the formula, according to a University administrator.

UK gets a lower percentage of funding than most Kentucky universities by the formula that determines state appropriations, said Ed Carter, vice president for administration.

Carter said the "Kentucky Appropriations Recommendation Formula," formed in 1982, is not applied equally to the universities.

The Sept. 30 hearing is one of eight being held at each state university to discuss the funding formula, which is being reviewed by the state Council on Higher Education.

Hearings already have been held at Morehead State University and Eastern Kentucky University.

The formula calculates the amount of state funding needed for higher education, placing a percentage on that amount. For example, full funding of the formula equals 100 percent.

To determine the amount of money each university receives, the formula then evaluates a series of components at each university — including the number of students, research, square feet for maintenance and operation — and applies them to each university.

The formula has yet to be fully funded by the state General Assembly. The 1988 General Assembly funded the formula at about 85 percent for 1988-89, down from about 88 percent in 1987-88.

Universities will receive $530.9 million from the state in 1988-89. Full funding of the formula would mean state appropriations of $627.5 million.

For the 1988-89 biennium, UK and the University of Louisville will be funded at 84 percent of the formula, with the community colleges at 67 percent, compared to the other state universities which are funded at 87 percent of the formula or better.

Murray State University tops the list, with 97 percent of the formula funded.

Carter said the University does not have

"You pull the wrong card out (and) the whole thing's going to fall down."

Jim Hill,
CHE member

a problem with the formula itself, but in how it is applied in funding the universities.

UK Student Government Association President James Rose said that as a land-grant institution UK has a responsibility to the entire state, not just one region so it "should set the benchmark for what the other schools are doing."

James Hill, the CHE's student member, said he understands UK's concern since it is a larger school with a broader mission.

However, Hill, a second-year UK law student, said there is a danger in trying to "tinker too much" with the formula.

Reviewing the formula is like dealing with "a house of cards."

"You pull the wrong card out," Hill said, "and the whole thing's going to fall down."

Although there have been complaints about the formula at the previous hearings at Morehead and Eastern, university officials generally support formula funding of schools, according to Kenneth Walker, CHE executive director for finance.

And it is the lack of funding, Walker said, that people consistently mention at the hearings.

Carter said that the "amount of money in total" that is available for higher education is the more overriding issue in higher education funding.

Even if the state funded the formula at 100 percent, higher education officials say it would not be nearly enough, he said. The formula is set up to fund state universities at just the average of what their benchmarks are funded.

"We're not striving to be competitive with the top range of the institutions," Carter said. "We're striving to be in the middle of the pack."

Arbogast seeks 75th district

By C.A. DUANE BONIFER
Editorial Editor

Four years ago when Mike Arbogast ran for state representative of the 75th legislative district one of the precincts he did well in was the Tower precinct, which includes most of the UK campus.

ARBOGAST

Although he lost to incumbent Ernesto Scorsone by a 67 to 32 percent margin, Arbogast received 56 percent of the vote from that precinct. This year Arbogast is challenging Scorsone again for his house seat and he hopes to get about 65 percent of the vote from the UK campus.

"I need your help the worst this time," he told about 45 people yesterday at a meeting of the UK College Republicans at the Student Center. "The incumbent is always difficult to unseat, but I believe it can be done. I really think I can win this one."

Arbogast was critical of the way state government has been run by the Democratic party.

"Democrats believe that people are not able to govern themselves," he said. "They like to set up bureaucracy, commissions and task forces . . . they feed on themselves. In fact, they are the problem."

"The Republican view is, the least government is the best government for the people. We do not believe in interfering with every facet of peoples' lives."

Arbogast lashed out at Scorsone, calling him a "Dukakis liberal," referring to Democratic presidential candidate Michael Dukakis.

"He is at least as liberal as Michael Dukakis and that is saying a lot," he said. "He is probably the dumbest liberal man in the House of Representatives in Frankfort."

Arbogast questioned Scorsone's ethical standards because of a July 13 dinner held by five state lobbyists in honor of the lawmaker in which all guests were asked to donate $100.

"You can get an idea of what the lobbyists are thinking," he said. "Will the lobbyists have him in their pocket or will he vote individually?"

Arbogast was critical of an amendment proposed by Scorsone during the last meeting of the General Assembly. The amendment proposed to HB-12, which related to day care, would allow people who have been charged with a felony or violent crime to work in day care facilities.

Arbogast, who tried to get the Fayette County occupation tax repealed, said he will oppose any tax increase lawmakers try to pass during the next legislative session.

"I think the people should have a right to

'Rebecca' listed as critical at Med Center

Staff reports

The newborn baby that police found in a dumpster behind Kennedy Bookstore Wednesday morning was listed in critical condition yesterday at the UK Chandler Medical Center.

The infant, an 8-pound 2-ounce girl, has been named "Rebecca" by UK nurses at the Neonatal Intensive Care Unit.

"The baby has no last name," said Mary Colliver, public affairs director at the hospital. "The baby is in critical condition and is on ventilator support."

The Crimes Against Children Team of the Lexington Division of Police is investigating the discovery of the baby which was found in a garbage dumpster on the corner of Jersey Street and Euclid Avenue.

The baby girl had been in the dumpster 5 to 10 minutes and had stopped breathing when an ambulance arrived, according to police reports.

Jalila K. Byars, 19, a resident of Lexington, was arrested and charged with first-degree wanton endangerment, police reports said.

Pilot coaxed passengers to safety from airplane wreckage in Dallas

Associated Press

DALLAS — The last survivor of Delta Flight 1141 reached by rescuers was the pilot, who passengers say coaxed them out of the burning wreckage while pinned on his back beneath debris.

Capt. Larry Lon Davis, 48, was listed in fair condition at Parkland Hospital yesterday, the day after the plane crashed on takeoff from Dallas-Fort Worth International Airport.

The jet lost power suddenly and bounced three times before skidding to a stop at the end of the runway and catching fire. At least 96 people survived the crash; 13 died, including two flight attendants.

Many of the survivors escaped near the cockpit, which broke off from the fuselage and rolled slightly.

David Carmichael, a 35-year-old restaurateur from Monticello, Ark., said he could hear Davis telling passengers to remain calm as they scrambled to get out of the plane near him.

"The pilot's seat back was broken so that he was lying flat on his back with all this debris on top," Carmichael said. "And the whole time he was saying, 'Slow down, watch your step.'"

Firefighters found Davis strapped to his seat, slipped a backboard underneath him and pulled him from the wreckage. He was the last survivor to get out of the plane.

Afghan guerrillas strike at Kabul, diplomats say

By BRYAN WILDER
Associated Press

ISLAMABAD, Pakistan — Muslim guerrillas launched rockets at Kabul and its airport yesterday, and Afghan fighter planes struck deep into Pakistani territory in one of the most violent days of Afghanistan's 10-year-old civil war.

Western diplomats, quoting dispatches from missions in the Afghan capital, said the airport was shrouded in "thick black and gray smoke" from the rocket attack. Earlier in the day, Pakistani authorities said seven Afghan fighter-bombers struck the deepest to date into Pakistani territory, killing one person and injuring seven.

Diplomatic dispatches from Kabul said the rockets started hitting the city around 2:55 p.m. at Kabul airport and "significant parts of the city."

"By 3:20 the fire was out of control," said a dispatch from one western embassy. "There were secondary explosions and foreigners were ordered to evacuate (the airport)," it said.

"Rockets have been exploding in Kabul all afternoon," said a U.S. diplomat on condition of anonymity. "The force of the explosion indicates it may have been an ammunition dump," he said.

In a report from Kabul, the official Soviet news agency, Tass, said "opposition units today subjected to massive bombardment with ground-to-ground rockets the Kabul international airport area. The rockets damaged depots and transport aircraft."

The report added that several rockets exploded in residential districts of Kabul, and authorities had put out the resulting fires.

Reports said it was not clear how many rockets had fallen. There were no immediate reports of casualties and state-run Kabul radio, in its nighttime broadcast, made no mention of the attack.

Both the Kabul attack and the bombing of villages near the Pakistani frontier city of Peshawar appeared more daring and destructive than any operations this year. Afghan insurgents began fighting communist Afghan forces in 1978.

Pakistani sources reported yesterday that seven Soviet-built Afghan fighter-bombers hit villages 30 miles east of the Afghan border.

Kabul radio said four people, including children, were killed and nine others were wounded. Pakistan's Foreign Ministry said one person was killed and seven injured, and five houses were destroyed.

In Washington, State Department spokeswoman Phyllis Oakley condemned the bombing as the "latest and most extreme incident of armed intervention" against Pakistan's territorial integrity, and said it violated the four-month-old Geneva accords.

Wilkinson backs Hacker for Senate

Associated Press

FRANKFORT, Ky. — Gov. Wallace Wilkinson is backing Lexington sportscaster Ralph Hacker for the U.S. Senate in an effort to control the state's Republican party, U.S. Sen. Mitch McConnell claims.

"This is an example of the governor trying to throw his weight around," McConnell said. "If Hacker ran, he would be labeled Wilkinson's candidate in the primary."

"Hacker should be told that there hasn't been an incumbent Republican U.S. senator to lose a primary in 40 years," McConnell added. "Hacker's chances of winning would be like Slippery Rock winning the Rose Bowl."

Asked what evidence he had that Wilkinson backs Hacker, McConnell said: "The Hacker talk has been around for a while. People have been talking about it privately."

Wilkinson, a Democrat, declined to say whom he would be supporting in the 1990 race. He said he was backing no one at this time.

Hacker, 44, the color analyst on University of Kentucky football and basketball broadcasts, said earlier this week he might challenge McConnell in 1990.

say about their taxes," he said. "When they (lawmakers) start taxing and not cutting expenses they got a problem that multiplies."

In 1984, he said he "got tagged" by the media as being a pro-life candidate who was not interested in any other issues.

While he said he is still very active with the state pro-life movement, Arbogast said he is going to concentrate on other issues during this campaign. "I think if I get the message out I can appeal to people," he said.

The four issues Arbogast will be stressing during the campaign are education, taxes, family issues and jobs, said J.V. Millard, Arbogast's campaign chairman.

In '84 Arbogast received more than 30 percent of the vote in 23 of the district's 30 precincts, Millard said. This year the campaign will be concentrating on those 23 precincts and "be working south to north," he said.

"We think this University is one of the key players," he said. "We think that the University organization can do a lot in getting people registered and they can make a difference in the election."

Kevin Hagan, chairman of the UK College Republicans, said the College Republican chapter is incorporating all Republican campaigns under one effort.

"We need to elect Republicans from the White House to the state house," Hagan said.

It's not often that a restaurant lives up to its name, but this one does.

Stuffem's dishes out hot and cold sub sandwiches, salads and various side orders and desserts.

The sandwiches come in three different sizes — a four-inch mini ($1.99), a six-inch small ($2.99) and a nine-inch large ($3.99). In keeping with their promise, a mini is usually enough to satisfy a normal appetite, although larger appetites have prevailed.

Recommended is the Italian Stuffer, which consists of cappocola, ham, hard salami and cheese. On the hot side, the roast beef or the Stromboli Stuffer — Italian sausage, green peppers and onions — are also recommended. There is a nominal charge for cheese on all other sandwiches.

For a $7.50 minimum order, Stuffem's will deliver.

'American Illustration' art exhibit begins UK's Center Sundays series

By CINDY RANSON
Contributing Writer

The UK Art Museum's opening fall exhibit focuses on American book and magazine illustration from the first half of the twentieth century.

"The Best of American Illustration: Selections from the Delaware Art Museum" features such artists as N.C. Wyeth, Maxfield Parrish and Howard Pyle and literary classics such as Treasure Island, Hans Brinker, and The Scarlet Letter.

Harriet Fowler, curator of the UK Art Museum said, "students would enjoy it a great deal because it's a nostalgic look at America at an earlier time."

The exhibit, circulated by The Trust for Museum Exhibitions, Washington, D.C., opens Sunday 4 and runs through Oct. 16. A free lecture overviewing the Golden Age of American Illustration will be given by Fowler at 3 p.m. Sunday.

The exhibit starts off the 1988-89 Center Sundays season at the Singletary Center for the Arts. On Sept. 18, The Polecats, consisting of members of the school of music, will play their brand of New Orleans jazz.

The October lineup is highlighted by a lecture by Thomas Hart Benton concerning the origins of country music.

"He's done a big mural on country music's origins and it's unusual to find country music as the focus of an art exhibit," said Nancy Unger, public relations special assistant at the College of Fine Arts.

All lectures and performances are free and are presented at the Singletary Center for the Arts.

Play's successful opening has sparse crowd

Acting, effects are highlights of season opener

"On the Verge," a new comedy by Eric Overmyer, enjoyed a first-rate opening performance last night at the Lexington Opera House.

Director David Filman made the most of a very limited space by bringing the actors into the audience.

This technique also helped to make the viewers more involved in the play.

The play is the story of Alexandra, Fanny and Mary, three Victorian women, who set out to explore an uncharted land in 1888.

In their travels they go to the jungles of Terra Incognita. During their trying hikes through the brush, they are caught in a time warp and end up in 1965.

The actor and actresses did a wonderful job with some extremely difficult lines, except for some occasional problems with diction and sound.

Ruth Ann Snyder (Mary) and Vivian Robin Snipes (Fanny) were very good, while UK freshman Rebecca Davis was exceptionally enjoyable to watch.

Frederic Zegelin did a fantastic job of handling roles ranging in character from the abominable snowman to a troll to God.

Lighting designer Rob Dillard and sound designer Tim Campbell added special effects that made the bareness of the set less apparent.

For the scenes that took place in the jungle, darker lighting and animal sounds also were used. In a snowstorm scene, the lighting was brightened and the sound of wind swirling brought the scene to life.

The ladies' costumes and the abominable snowman's costume were designed by Eduardo Sciangio and were a wonderful addition.

Overall, it was a thoroughly enjoyable evening, the only major

HOT TO TROT

If you see "Hot To Trot," the star is Don the Horse. He supplies Bobcat Goldthwait with hot stock tips, drinks giant buckets of Tab, plays the harmonica with a blind blues singer and generally makes life worse for everybody. He also manages to belt out a soulful version of "Heartbreak Hotel," which, in my opinion, is the highlight of the movie.

Goldthwait plays Fred Chaney, the stepson of the owner of a brokerage firm, played by Dabney Coleman. When Chaney's mother dies, she is left to Freddy. After rejecting his stepfather's hefty buy out offer of $25, Chaney decides to stay and eventually gets rich with help from the wisecracking Don, given a voice by an undebatedly enthused John Candy.

This movie's appeal is based on aiming low and connecting. Honestly, it's stupid as hell, but I liked it.

"Hot To Trot," rated R, is now playing at Fayette Mall Cinemas.

The Georgia Satellites
Elektra Records

On their second album, The Georgia Satellites still sound as if they're playing like their beer money depended on it. The album doesn't stray from the shit-kickin' rock and roll of their debut.

The album is full of good ol' boy sexual innuendo, from the chorus of the title track ("I'm old enough to know there's wrong and there's right/But I just got to know if that thing is open all night") to the mild-mannered vulgarity of "Mon Cheri" ("So we sat down over on a park bench/With her skirt rolled up and I could see that she was French").

This is an album that, if played above volume level three, will peel paint and kill small house pets.

UK football was a religious experience for Buddy Long

I first met Buddy Long Nov. 13, 1976, outside Commonwealth Stadium. UK was playing Florida in its final home football game of the season.

The Cats were 5-4, and it was rumored that if UK beat Florida and went on to defeat Tennessee at Knoxville the following week, it would receive an invitation to a postseason bowl.

The temperature was below freezing, but the idea of UK — a team that had gone 2-8-1 the year before — playing in a bowl was more than enough to keep the Wildcat faithful warm.

Buddy had two extra tickets to the game and he asked my Dad if any of his sons were ready to be baptized into the Blue and White. I was only in the third grade, but already though God created UK on the seventh day.

My Dad, Grandfather and I met Buddy and his wife, Julia, at the gate. With stadium seats under one arm and a radio tuned into Coward Ledford with the carpark stuck in his ear, Buddy said to my Dad, "Chuck, do you think we can pull it out today?"

My Dad, the eternal Big Blue optimist, responded, "It will be tough, but I brought him along for good luck," putting his hand on my shoulder.

UK beat Florida that day, 28-9. After the game, Buddy said to my Dad, "Chuck, you need to bring him up here more often," pointing to me.

UK went on to beat Tennessee the following week, 7-0, and receive a bid to the Peach Bowl where Rod Stewart led the Cats to a 21-0 win over North Carolina.

Buddy began attending UK football games in the early '50s, when a man by the name of Paul "Bear" Bryant was the head coach. At that time, the only way to get from Paducah to Lexington was U.S. 62.

Buddy and his brother, Louis, used to make the eight-hour journey several times a year, Julia said. "Sometimes they would go to Louisville on Friday night to see a game there and then go on to Lexington," she said.

In 1961, Bryant took the Wildcats to New Orleans to play against heavily favored Oklahoma. The Sooners were riding a 31-game winning streak, the longest in the nation at that time. Buddy joined the more than 13,000 UK fans and made the trip to the Big Easy.

Behind the sterling defense of Walt Yowarsky, UK upset the Sooners 13-7, and finished 11-1 on the season.

"Buddy was always interested in sports," Julia said. "He liked UK basketball and football, but he got the idea that football was always the underdog in Kentucky since basketball was so popular."

It probably did not take too much dedication to watch UK games at Stoll Field during the days of the "Bear." UK compiled a 60-23 record during Bryant's tenure, including trips to the Great Lakes, Orange, Sugar and Cotton bowls.

The past few decades, however, the state Republican party has seen brighter days than the UK football program.

Five coaches have tried to pick up where the "Bear" left off, but none have been able to forge a consistently winning program. In 19 years since the "Bear" left UK, the football program has gone 153-196-12 with only 11 winning seasons.

Although Buddy wanted to see

UK win, Julia said he did not always leave Commonwealth Stadium disappointed if the Wildcats came out on the losing side.

"He was the happiest person in the world when the team would come out onto the field at the beginning of the game. The night before the game he couldn't even get to sleep," she said. "He wanted to see UK win, but he wanted the players to play well and do their best."

After a loss, Buddy would walk over to our side of the aisle and say in the spirit of a true Brooklyn Dodgers fan, "Well, Chuck, maybe next time."

One summer, my family stopped by Buddy's house on the way home from vacation. It looked not unlike the many other homes in Paducah, but the inside was a UK fan's dream.

One entire room was dedicated to UK, mainly football. There were pictures, furniture and other paraphernalia that was worth at least a zillion dollars on the streets.

When Commonwealth Stadium opened in 1973, Buddy purchased four season tickets. Julia said she and Buddy knew that there might be occasions when they would only need two of them, "but he bought the four tickets because he wanted to help out the program."

One game Buddy had two extra tickets. About 30 minutes before the game, he gave the tickets to two boys standing outside the gate.

"Chuck, you should have seen their faces when I gave them those tickets," he told my Dad. "You would have thought it was the greatest thing anyone had ever done for them."

It was the greatest thing anyone could have done for Buddy.

When Jerry Claiborne came to UK in 1982, Buddy was optimistic about the future. Even with the dismal 0-10-1 season during the first year, Buddy said Claiborne would restore a level of integrity and ethics to the football program that had been stamped into the ground during the Curci years.

One year after Claiborne's winless season, UK was invited to play in the Hall of Fame Bowl. Buddy and Julia were planning on making the trip to Birmingham, Ala., but a mix-up prevented them from getting to the game.

The following year, Buddy was told he had cancer, caused from asbestos. He made it to a few games the following season, but as the weather got worse, it prevented him from going to the ones later in the season.

In December of 1984, UK returned to Birmingham, but Buddy had to watch on television because he was too sick to make the trip.

The Wildcats squeaked out a 20-19 win over Wisconsin on Dec. 29 and it was the last UK football game would see. He died the following year.

Death is something no one looks forward to, but for Buddy, the inevitable was probably a little easier knowing UK was a winner.

Julia has given up the season tickets and the UK room has been remodeled. Julia said she doesn't listen to UK games any more.

"That is the one thing I don't do anymore because it just isn't the same," she said.

Tomorrow, UK will open its football season for the 16th time at Commonwealth Stadium. And as the football team runs through a "K" formed by the cheerleaders at the tune of "On, On U.K.," somehow I have a feeling Buddy will be watching.

Volleyball team kicks into action at Classic

By SHAWN GRAY
Contributing Writer

Led by a pair of All-Americans, coach Kathy DeBoer last year guided the UK volleyball team to a 31-2 record and a final-eight appearance in the NCAA Tournament.

Now those All-Americans (Lisa Dausman and Annette Ewasak) are gone, but DeBoer isn't crying in her milk. She's preparing her squad for even more success this season.

"I don't know what to expect in September," DeBoer said. "But the talent is here to take us to the Final Four."

Kentucky, ranked No. 11 preseason by Volleyball Monthly, will begin its quest for the national title Saturday in the Kentucky Kickoff Classic at Memorial Coliseum.

Louisville and Morehead will square off in a 5:30 p.m. match Saturday. UK will face Eastern Kentucky University in the night-cap at 8 p.m.

The consolation match is Sunday at 12:30 p.m., followed at 3 by the championship match.

UK player Lisa Bokovsky thinks a good, consistent effort in every match — not just Saturday's — will allow UK to surpass last season when the team won the Southeastern Conference regular season and tournament championships.

"We have a chance to go to the Final Four if everything falls in place," Bokovsky said.

Bokovsky, a senior, was named All-SEC first team last season, led the SEC in hitting efficiency with (.389), and was selected to the Southeast All-Regional tournament team in the NCAA.

But Bokovsky isn't the lone star on this team.

Sophomore Laura Linder led the SEC last year in assists with 1,404. "Laura is a team player who will see a lot of playing this year," DeBoer said.

Linder also led the team with 41 service aces and was 6th in the SEC in hitting efficiency with .296. She said that was just the start. "I am more experienced, stonger, and my quickness has improved over last year," she said.

Another star sure to shine is veteran player Kim Thompson. Thompson, also a potential All-American, had 18 kills in the SEC title match against Louisiana State University.

She was third in SEC in kills per game with 3.71 and also led the SEC in average digs per game with 3.24.

Katrina Alrhart, Kentucky's defensive backbone, will receive plenty of playing time this year, too.

Alrhart doesn't score many points but DeBoer said she didn't have to. Not with Bokovsky, Thompson on the team.

DeBoer also filled the roster with a couple of outstanding newcomers.

Freshman Stephanie Green was named one of the 50 best high school prospects in the nation by Volleyball Monthly.

Green is a 6-foot-1 middle blocker/hitter from Belleville, Ill.

DeBoer also got freshman Yvette Moorehead, a 5-11 middle blocker from Detroit, Mich., who has a 33-inch vertical jump.

Moorehead was rated a blue-chip recruit her senior year after being named to the 87-88 Detroit City Dream Teams, squads made up of Detroit's best volleyball players.

DeBoer said freshman Cathy DeBuono, the third of the newcomers, is definitely going to see some playing time this year.

DeBuono is a 6-foot-1 middle blocker from Bronxville, N.Y. with a 30-inch vertical jump and a standing reach of 7-6.

This summer DeBuono was one of 36 high school players invited to the Junior Elite Volleyball Camp held in Colorado, DeBoer said.

With Lisa Bokovsky, Kim Thompson, Laura Linder, Katrina Alrhart and the high potential of the freshmen class, DeBoer believes her team should be favored to win the SEC again.

The UK volleyball team starts its season Saturday against Eastern Kentucky University with the Kentucky Kickoff Classic.

Wildcats hope to chip Chippewas in opener

By ALEX MONTGOMERY
Staff Writer

Jerry Claiborne remembers Central Michigan well. His Wildcats edged the visiting Chippewas, 31-14, on opening day in 1983 to give Claiborne his first victory as head coach at UK.

Saturday is opening day 1988 and again Central Michigan comes calling. This time Claiborne goes for UK win No. 31.

And just like the game five years ago, Claiborne knows it won't be easy.

The Chippewas, who hail from the Mid-America Conference, finished 5-5-1 in 1987. But coach Herb Deromedi's club returns 14 starters from last year, including all-conference tailback John Hood. Hood won't start because of a knee injury but may see action.

The Central Michigan offense will be led by junior quarterback Randy Levels. Levels played spar-

FOOTBALL '88

UK quarterback Glenn Fohr passes against Ohio University at Commonwealth Stadium last season. Fohr will lead a depleted Wildcat offense through one of the toughest schedules UK has ever seen.

Tough schedule to test UK mettle

After all the talk they've heard and all the predictions that have been made, it would be easy to think the UK football team might want to go into an early hibernation.

With an inexperienced offense and a schedule that would rival Iran in terms of evilness, many are predicting doom for Kentucky. Major magazines have already done so, labbing the felines anywhere from seventh to 10th in the Southeastern Conference. And no wonder.

Just look at the teams Kentucky will play: Auburn, Alabama, Indiana, Georgia, Tennessee, Florida, LSU. Seven squads that went to bowls last year. Even traditional powder-puff teams like Vanderbilt are predicted to finish ahead of the Cats. Calling this the "Toughest Yet," as UK's promotional advertisements do, may well be the understatement of the year.

Sure, it's a cliché. But it's also true. In the preseason Associated Press Top 20 poll, all but two of UK's opponents received at least one vote. Even Kent State.

Kentucky, which finished a disappointing 5-6 last year, did not receive any votes. To be honest, they simply did not deserve any.

You can figure out why just by looking at the offensive line. Last year everybody knew who was on it. Dermontti and Greg, Butch and Brad. This year these guys' names are far from household.

Now, 6-foot-7, 300-pound right tackle Mike Pfeifer does return and will be the man Kentucky builds its offensive base on. But as experienced, strong and battle-tested as the Louisville native is, he is only a junior.

Excluding Pfeifer, only one player on the line — sophomore left guard Dean Wilks — lettered last year. That's not to say that they weren't good. It's just a little hard to get playing time, especially when you had to compete against two guys like Greg Kunkel and Dermontti Dawson who are now playing in the NFL.

With game experience, the offensive line will blossom into one of the SEC's best in two seasons. Right now, however, they will take their lumps. Not just from the Auburn Tigers and their standout defensive tackle Tracy Rucker or Tennessee's Keith DeLong but by a good Central Michigan defense.

The man hoping for a quick and hopefully less painful lesson is Kentucky quarterback Glenn Fohr. Even though he started in only four games, Fohr showed flashes of brilliance in all of them. Turned loose this season, he'll raise some eyebrows in the league. That is, if he's not too busy scrambling from quarterback-hungry defensive backs.

UK's offensive backfield is filled with questions:

- Can Andy Murray recover from major knee construction?
- Will Al Baker gain new confidence and lead the running attack?
- Which Ivy Joe Hunter will we see: The one who rushed for 238 yards against Vanderbilt two years ago or the guy who spent more time on crutches than on the field?

The answers may come in 5-11 tailback Alfred Rawls, a junior college transfer from Northeastern Oklahoma A&M. The speedy little runner has been compared to former Wildcat and now Dallas Cowboy Mark Higgs. He's flashy and fast (Rawls runs a 4.48 in the 40-yard dash) and put up some Higgs-like numbers in a UK scrimmage last Saturday — 133 yards rushing and three touchdowns.

The situation of pass-catchers on this team is also uncertain. Again, Kentucky has a warehouse of talent, but no one who's had game experience. John Bolden and Phil Logan are fine replacements for the departed Dee Smith, but both have to learn their position before they can shake off the more powerful cornerbacks in the conference.

Tight ends in the Jerry Claiborne era have been snake bit with injuries. A few years ago it was Mark Wheeler, Mark Lucas and Martin Pennington. This season preseason All-SEC end Charlie Darrington will miss about three games with a broken foot he sustained in practice.

On the other side of the field is a steady, ready-for-battle defensive unit. With eight of 11 defenders and the top five defensive backs from last year returning, it's easily the Wildcats' strongest position.

Kentucky is unquestionably solid and experienced in that area. Just the thought of David Johnson, Ron Robinson and Ron Mack coming back causes visions of interceptions to dance in the head of defensive backs coach Chip Garber.

Now linebackers coach Terry Strock won't be doing any cartwheels, especially after losing fifth-year senior Jeff Kremer to graduation. But he's not exactly crying in his milk.

After all, all-star candidate Chris Chenail is back and returning back-up Randy Holleran will get a chance at a starting berth after getting one start and 11 appearances as a redshirt freshman last season.

Any line that features Oliver Barnett and Vic Adams, two legitimate All-SEC performers, should be proud. UK is tight on the outside ends, with steady and consistent Jay Dortch and Tony Massey.

But the burning question is what about depth? Except for the defensive backs position, UK has virtually no depth. And that will prove to be the factor that does the Wildcats in.

Don't be surprised if UK plays even better than most of its opposition in the first half of a ball game. And don't be surprised when the lack of depth kicks in and they lose it in the fourth quarter, like they did four times last season.

It will be a very trying season for UK fans, players and coaches. Despite not having a winning record in four years, optimism and enthusiasm runs high.

"Hey, we got everything to gain and nothing to lose," Pfeifer told me. "You can pick us anywhere you want. What difference does it make? The season hasn't started yet."

"Everybody is picking us down," echoed defensive ends coach Dave Lakin. "Everybody is picking us to go 3-7 and stunk like that. We make anything better, we're an improvement."

But maybe the Wildcats have to have that feeling of winning to shield them from the reality of the situation. Any team facing this schedule would have difficulty winning even six games. You have to have a positive attitude.

"No wants wants to work all winter, all spring and all summer and just give it up," Pfeifer said. "There's just too much heart. There's just too much time put into it to let it just fly by."

As a result, you'll see a difference in this year's bunch, Pfeifer said. Kentucky may be out-manned and out-gunned. But not out-hustled.

"There will be people making some diving catches, make that extra block, go out and do a little extra effort," he said. "That's what it's gonna take to win the big games."

The last three years Kentucky has finished with five wins, which is disappointing when you consider what kind of record they could have had. Five wins this year and Wildcat fans might resort to doing crazy, unheard-of things, like rooting for Tennessee.

But regardless of their final record, Lakin said it best when he summed up the mental attitude of his team.

"I think our kids, really if you watch them, are a tight-knit bunch."

Maybe the toughest yet isn't the schedule.

Looking Foehr consistency in UK's quarterback situation

By ALEX MONTGOMERY
Staff Writer

The date was Nov. 21, 1987. The site was Commonwealth Stadium. The opponent was archrival Tennessee. UK lost 24-22, but it was a game full of bright spots.

And probably the brightest spot was UK quarterback Glenn Foehr — the big-play man with the big-play arm. Foehr completed 14 of 31 passes for 240 yards and no interceptions. It was a sweet memory from a sour game. And the Wildcat signal-caller hopes it continues into 1988.

"I definitely feel more confident," Foehr said. "I had a great Tennessee game. I hope to pick up where I left off."

The 6-2, 214-pound senior, who started four games for UK last season, returns as the Cats' number one signal caller in 1988.

The big question mark about Foehr this year will be consistency in throwing the football. Last season he threw the ball more times to the opponent (eight interceptions) than to his own receivers in the end zone (only six touchdowns).

With experience, his coaches hope that will change.

"His major weakness is reading defenses and being consistent throwing the football," said Jerry Eisaman, quarterback coach. "He's got a strong arm and he's got to put that ball on the numbers instead of behind or high or low. He's a little erratic at times and that's just a matter of concentration."

Foehr completed just 45.4 percent of his passes last year. Eisaman said Foehr will have to improve on that this year.

"He's throwing a little better than that now, but he needs to get that up to 60 percent," he said.

While Foehr may lack consistency, he has experience and feel for the game.

"Glenn has savvy for the game," said reserve quarterback Chuck Broughton. "With him starting some games last year that's got to give him an edge coming into this year."

"Foehr's main strength is that he's a big-play quarterback," Eisaman said. "He'll find a way to get a big play, get a long gainer or get in the end zone."

Eisaman said that as a result of reading defenses wrong, however, Foehr would often turn a big play into a bad play.

"You can't have bad plays," he said. "You've got to have good plays and then you come with big plays and that's a big part of winning."

Foehr said the Cats don't plan to make any drastic changes in the offense.

"I don't think there will be any big change in the offense from last year," he said. "I think we will try to take the plays that worked well last year and try to perfect them to where they are flawless and eliminate the stupid mistakes. A lack of concentration and little mistakes are what hurt us last year."

Foehr said if he has a reputation for being too aggressive at times, it is probably because of his high school experiences.

"I come from a real small high school where the coaching philosophy was to be very conservative and never take chances," he said.

Foehr played four years of football, but only one year at varsity quarterback at small Belvidere High School in Phillipsburg, N.J. As a result, Foehr had no college recruiters waiting to sign his name to a scholarship.

On the advice of his coach, Foehr went to a junior college to work on his skills and mature as a football player. Foehr spent two years at Hudson Valley Community College in Troy, N.Y., and had an impressive showing in a junior college all-star game, all in the hope of doing one thing — signing a scholarship with a college team.

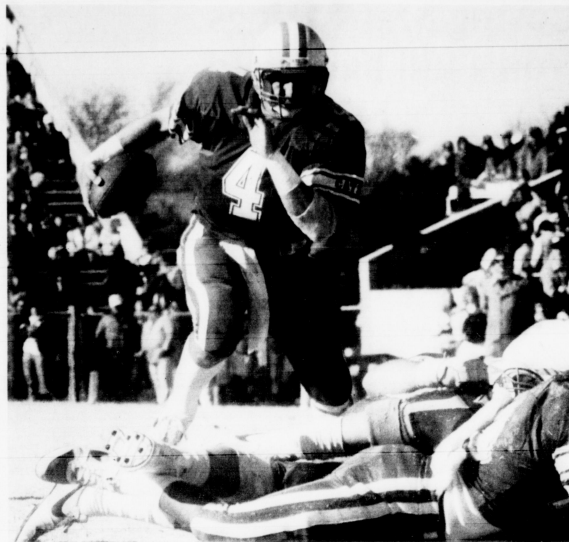

"I was thinking maybe I would get a scholarship to a Division III school or something," Foehr said.

But the call instead came from Division I Kentucky. Foehr saw the opportunity and took it. And now it has paid off.

Although Foehr appears ready for the challenge ahead, he has to look back to last season, and the injury to Kevin Dooley, to realize the importance of a back-up quarterback.

Backing up Foehr this year will be the junior, Broughton (6-4, 220), redshirt freshman Freddie Maggard (6-2, 220) and senior Bill Allen (6-0, 201).

Maggard, though, suffered a partial dislocation of his collarbone during a scrimmage Aug. 20. He could miss UK's first three games, according to UK officials.

Allen will handle the holding duties for the kicking team. He would like to have a crack at his real job. But unfortunately for Allen, the opportunity has never been there.

He's had flashes of brilliance and has been impressive more than once, but with three young signal-callers ahead of him, Allen will probably get little playing time.

That in itself has earned the respect of his teammates.

"Bill's a real good fundamentals player," said Foehr. "He has real good steps. Every day I try to go out and emulate him."

Oliver Barnett chases down a quarterback in a game last season. Barnett led the Wildcats with six sacks last year.

Experience, size the hallmark of defensive line

By ALEX MONTGOMERY
Staff Writer

Juniore defensive tackle Oliver Barnett is a big man — his 6-foot-3, 285-pound frame attests to that. But Barnett doesn't just carry that weight around — he also likes to throw it around, preferably when chasing down quarterbacks. Just like last year, when he led the team with six sacks.

"I have set some personal goals for myself," Barnett said. "I want to lead the team in quarterback sacks again this year and make All-SEC and hopefully All-American."

Besides leading UK in sacks, Barnett was sixth in total tackles and tied for the lead in forced fumbles.

"Barnett has a very good work ethic," defensive tackles coach Rod Sharpless said.

After tying tight end Martin Pennington for total weight lifted (1,465 pounds) in an off-season program, Barnett easily agreed.

"I've been working over the summer and have gotten stronger. The biggest thing I need to work on is my consistency as far as shutting down the run and causing more big plays."

Teaming with Barnett in UK's wide-tackle six defense will be Vic Adams, a junior guard from Middlesboro, Ky., who made tremendous strides for the Wildcats in 1987.

"Vic was our most consistent defensive lineman besides Jerry Reese last season," Sharpless said.

Adams said UK should have a strong defensive front. And no wonder. Along with Barnett, Adams also is in contention for SEC honors. But Adams said his first priority is the team.

"I have mostly team goals," said Adams. "I don't want anybody to worry about the defensive guard spot. I want them to feel confident with me and I want to feel confident with the left guard and tackles. That's what makes the team."

Adams will be heavily counted on by the Wildcats this year. The coaches say Adams must perform better for UK to have a solid defense.

"He has to rise to the challenge," defensive guards coach Bill Glaser said. "Vic needs to give us much better play than last year. I think he's up to the task. I'd be very surprised if he doesn't improve considerably this year."

Adams isn't the only one on the defensive line expected to improve.

Juniors Doug Houser (6-3, 261) and Donnie Gardner (6-4, 236) both played in all 11 games last year, recording more than 20 tackles each. They'll fight for the right tackle spot.

Jerry Bell (6-3, 284) probably will start for the Cats at the left guard position. Bell, a redshirt freshman from Louisville, has played in only one collegiate game. He was injured in last season's opener against Utah State and did not return the rest of the season.

To top it off, Bell has been hampered by a sore leg most of the preseason. But that's not bothering Glaser.

"He's looked good when he's practiced," Glaser said. "He just hasn't practiced enough yet."

Losing Mark Higgs won't kill backfield

By ALEX MONTGOMERY
Staff Writer

In most years, the loss of a running back like Mark Higgs would be a tremendous blow. All Higgs did last season was pile up a single-season record of 1,278 yards and end up No. 2 on the all-time career yardage list at UK.

The Wildcats will have a hard time filling Higgs' shoes, but UK may be even stronger this season in the backfield because of the emergence of a junior college standout (Alfred Rawls) and the re-emergence of a pair of talented, but inconsistent, backs (sophomore Al Baker and senior Ivy Joe Hunter).

"All three are looking good," said running backs coach Greg Nord. "I think we will get a lot of mileage out of those three at tailback."

Hunter will probably get the starting nod at tailback tomorrow against Central Michigan, although Baker and Rawls also are looking strong in practice.

"Ivy Joe has been doing a real good job for us," Nord said. "He reported in better shape than I had originally anticipated."

The 6-foot, 218-pound Hunter rushed for 503 yards in 10 games last season for an average of five yards per carry. He has been hampered by injuries throughout his career at UK. Hunter, from Gainesville, Fla., said he wants to avoid injury this year, knowing his services will be needed.

"We're looking for big plays from the running backs," he said.

"I think Ivy Joe is feeling he is the man now," said Nord. "He feels he wants that responsibility. When you want that and get that confidence in yourself and develop the confidence from the rest of your teammates, then you start performing and trying to live up to their expectations."

And Hunter won't have to perform the whole duty by himself. He said the entire backfield will have an active role in the offense.

"I see all the tailbacks sharing the load during the games," Hunter said.

Another player plagued by injury the last two years has been Baker. He had an impressive Blue-White game this spring, rushing for 88 yards on 17 carries. Last season the 5-foot-11-inch, 225-pound tailback from Cadiz rushed for 107 yards in 32 attempts.

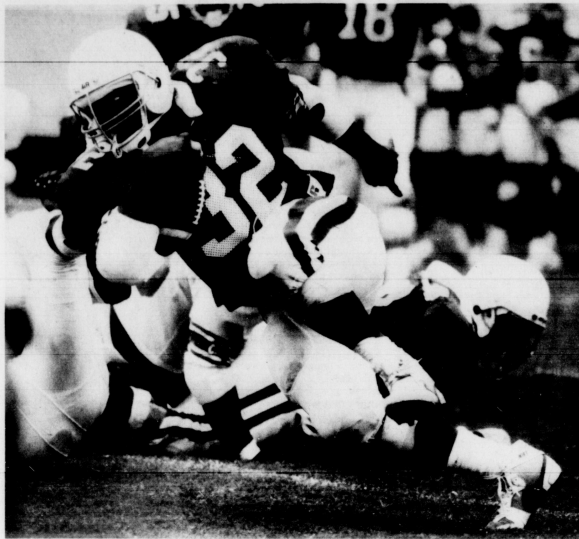

"Al is doing great," Nord said. "He has a tremendous attitude and is blocking better than ever."

Also competing for the No. 1 tailback slot is junior college transfer Alfred Rawls. The 5-10, 201-pound Rawls rushed for more than 800 yards last year at Northeastern Oklahoma A & M, The Pitts, Ga., native originally signed with Georgia out of high school, but went to junior college after failing to meet Proposition 48 requirements.

The speedy Rawls, who runs the 40-yard dash in 4.48 seconds, has been compared to Higgs.

"Alfred has quick feet and can get around the corner fast," Hunter said. "He's somewhat like Mark Higgs."

Leading the way at fullback for

DAVID STERLING/Kernal Staff

Ivy Joe Hunter scrambles to the left with the ball. Hunter led the backs in rushing last year, and will be counted heavily upon this year.

the Cats this season will be juniors Andy Murray (6-1, 237) and Darren Bilberry (6-2, 211).

Murray, a Louisville native, is coming off a major knee surgery, the result of an injury he suffered in last year's game against Vanderbilt. He missed spring practice, but is 100-percent healthy, according to the coaching staff.

Before going down last year, Murray played in eight games and finished third on team rushing and fourth in receiving.

Bilberry is an excellent blocker, according to the coaching staff. He played in all 11 games last season and started five times at fullback.

UK's offensive line troubled by inexperience, size

By TOM SPALDING
Sports Editor

Look around the offensive line last year and you probably saw UK's most experienced, biggest and strongest line in the Jerry Claiborne era. Of the five starters, four were fifth-year seniors.

Look around the offensive line these days and you'll probably see one of the more inexperienced, weaker and smaller lines in the Jerry Claiborne era.

No easy transition for offensive tackle coach Farrell Sheridan. "It was difficult," he said. "We had built the program to the point where four of our five linemen were fifth-year seniors."

Kentucky lost offensive guards Dermontti Dawson and Butch Wilburn, right tackle Greg Kunkel and center Brad Myers. It has left quite a hole. And not many are expecting UK to fill it.

"We've got a lot to replace," UK offensive guards coach Jake Hallum said. "It's hard to replace guys that have had a lot of experience."

As a result, the coaches said, there will be a completely new line except for the steady presence of All-American candidate Mike Pfeifer. It will be a line that will do more stunting and blocking schemes to make up for the loss of power, the coaches said.

"You're gonna have a mixture from now on," Sheridan said. "You've got people competing for positions, you've got (a couple) freshmen, two sophomores, (two) juniors, three seniors and two walk-ons. You've got a good mixture and good competition going."

Leading everybody of course, is Pfeifer. At 6-foot-7, 300 pounds the Louisville, Ky., native is UK's biggest and probably best offensive lineman. But last year, despite playing in all 11 games, he was overshadowed by Kunkel and Dawson, both currently are playing in the National Football League.

"We lost Kunkel and Dermontti, and Dermontti is doing outstanding in the pros right now," Pfeifer said. "But I think with the offense we've put in, with the new offensive changes, this new line fits us. It gives us the opportunity to do the things — it correlates with the ability we have."

Anchoring the left side of the offensive line is 6-7 sophomore Mike Nord. Together, Nord and Pfeifer give UK two of the largest bookends in the country.

"Mike Nord is coming along real good," Sheridan said. "He's improved a lot this summer, (but) he's a long way from where he needs to be. But he's six-foot-seven, 265 pounds. So he's a nice addition to the other side. He still has a ways to go, but he's only a sophomore. He's just gonna improve and improve with every ball game."

Replacing Myers' slot in the middle is Brian Cralle, a 6-1, 280-pound junior from Elizabethton. A strong postseason helped move him to the No. 1 spot on the depth chart, but Hallum said it was still a three-man race between Cralle, David Crane and Courtney Longacre.

"Brian has had an excellent spring," Hallum said. "At the end of spring he was our best center. We hope Dave will give us backup there, (but) right now Brian is the guy we got in the middle."

Filling in the two vacant guard positions will be difficult, which is why Hallum is palming to rotate many of the players on the offensive line. At left guard, 6-3 sophomore Dean Wilks has the edge, and at the right guard is 6-2, 257-pound sophomore Bill Hulet. But don't be surprised if they're not in there too long.

"This year we're going to play a lot more people than we did last year to give more experience and to help in the fourth quarter to help keep fresh people in," Hulet said.

Running second on the depth chart on left guard is 6-3 sophomore Kevin Disotelle. On the left side, senior Brian Denham will be the top reserve.

While talent is not a problem with this year's offensive line, Sheridan said he is unsure how many of the linemen will react in a game.

"Without a doubt, we're going to make mistakes just from inexperience and that's the key to the season," he said. "There are so many question marks on offense. How many people have really played a lot? ... Everybody's a question mark. As far as talent, shoot, they're as talented as we've ever had. But how are they gonna react in a game situation? That is the big question. It can't be answered until we get there."

Tight end situation like deja vu

By WARREN HAVENS
Staff Writer

Charlie Darrington might have been repaying teammate Martin Pennington a favor.

Two weeks before last season's football opener, Pennington went down with a hip pointer. In doing so he surrendered the starting tight end position to junior college transfer Charlie Darrington.

The rest is history. Darrington went on to start in all 11 games and lead all Southeastern Conference tight ends in receptions with 26 while scoring two touchdowns.

Those 26 catches totaled 365 yards and enabled the 6-3, 224-Tifton, Ga., product to lead all UK receivers in receiving. Pennington, who went on to participate in 336 plays, was not expected to regain a starting spot.

Two weeks before tomorrow's opener against Central Michigan, Darrington fractured the second metatarsal on his left foot after it was stepped on by a teammate.

And now Darrington will have to sit out.

"It's funny how opportunity comes," said tight ends coach Tony Crack. "Charlie took advantage of his last year and hopefully, Martin and Mike Meece will be able to make good of their chance now that Charlie is injured."

Meece, a 6-6, 227-pound sophomore, also must be considered for playing time. The Madeira, Ohio, native was one of the biggest surprises in spring drills. He and Pennington have been running with the first team in recent practices.

"Mike is a guy that has improved as much as anyone on this football team," Crack said. "He has the potential to be a truly outstanding player."

Meece credits his improvement to hard work in the weight room, but he said he needs to improve his technique.

"Right now, we have to step forward and take over," Meece said. "Martin has experience and has proven himself."

"This year it turns out had for Charlie and good for me," said Pennington, a 6-2, 226 senior from Corbin. "It's just one of those things. Charlie had a great season last year and I'm hoping to pick up where he left off."

Florida St. should win it all this year

Although they finished just short of winning the national title last year, Florida State will be second to none this season and take home the championship trophy.

The Seminoles are returning 14 starters from last year's squad with only a few new faces to fill. They did everything last year but win the national championship — FSU had an impressive 11-1 record, finishing second in both the AP and UPI Top 20 polls.

The defense, led by All-American safety Deion Sanders, speaks for itself. The burden of FSU's offense, however, will rest on the shoulders of senior quarterback Chip Ferguson. When he's not firing bullet passes to his top-flight receivers, Ferguson will be handing off to junior tailback Sammie Smith. At 6-2, 220 pounds he has world-class speed coming out of the backfield.

Florida State's offensive line should be little worry for Coach Bobby Bowden. Four of the five starters from last season's team are back and they are very experienced. Florida State's true test will come Sept. 17 when they enter Death Valley at Clemson University. If they defeat the Tigers in Death Valley, Florida State may be on its way to winning the national championship.

Southern California's nucleus will be led by Heisman Trophy candidate quarterback Rodney Peete. USC is known for its depth at tailback but there are some questions. The Trojans, for the first time in years, may not need a strong backfield because of Peete.

Tailback Steven Webster, the Pac-10 rushing leader last season, will be back, along with fullback Leroy Holt. Also on offense is all-conference tight end Paul Green and receiver Erik Affolter.

The only thing that may stop USC from returning to the Rose Bowl is its tough PAC-10 schedule. The Trojans also play Oklahoma, Notre Dame and Boston College.

The eyes of Death Valley will be upon the offensive attack of Clemson this fall. Against Penn State in the Citrus Bowl Danny Ford and company switched from their conservative running game to a passing game.

However, Clemson decides to attack opposing teams they should do well with 18 starters returning from last year's 10-2 team, including senior quarterback Rodney Williams.

The Tigers defense probably will be their strength. They ranked fifth overall last season. Clemson's real defensive strength is in the secondary, with three seniors returning, including Kodak All-America Donnell Woolford.

The Tigers face Florida State and South Carolina, but the rest of Clemson's schedule is filled with patbies, assuring the Tigers their third straight Atlantic Coast Conference title.

The UCLA Bruins were one win away from the Rose Bowl last year, but lost to USC. The trip to the Rose Bowl could be on the line once again on Nov. 19 when the Bruins will try to avenge their loss to the Trojans.

UCLA has its own candidate for the Heisman Trophy with quarterback Troy Aikman. The defensive unit of the Bruins will be led by Cornell Lake who placed second in All-American and PAC-10 defensive player polls. The Bruins also will have a tough contest against Nebraska this season.

Last season Iowa coach Hayden Fry had a quarterback controversy between Dan McGwire, Tom Poholsky and Chuck Hartlieb. This season is different. Hartlieb stole the show from McGwire and Poholsky by becoming an All-Big 10 quarterback.

The Hawkeyes will be a strong team and should win the Big 10. Their toughest games will come within the conference against Michigan State and Michigan.

In the past three seasons Oklahoma has gone into the Orange Bowl with hopes of a national championship and come up short all three times. The Sooners record during that time is 3-3, with all three losses coming in the Orange Bowl. Coach Barry Switzer has a young team with only nine starters returning.

Jamelle Holeyaw is back from knee surgery to lead the mighty wishbone attack. The burden of the team will rest on his shoulders to bring home a national title. Oklahoma will do well this season despite its defensive problems. Look for Holeyaw and the wishbone express to carry the load for the team. The Sooners' tough opponents will be USC and conference foe Nebraska.

With quarterback Jeff Burger gone coach Auburn coach Pat Dye

can breathe easier this season. Burger was constantly in the news for his sub-par academic standards and his run-ins with the police.

Auburn's tie with Syracuse in the Sugar Bowl is a thing of the past and the most controversial season in Dye's career is yesterday's news.

One of the Tigers' strength will be their kicking game. They have two excellent kickers in field-goal kicker Win Lyle and punter Brian Shulman.

Auburn will win the SEC as Dye enjoys a less controversial season. The Tigers' passing game should be interesting to watch with their unbelievable receivers. Auburn's toughest opponents will be cross-state rival Alabama, Tennessee and Georgia.

Despite losing 13 starters from last year's national championship team Miami will remain in the Top 10. The past two seasons they have lost most of their key players and still had a good season. It remains to be seen if they can keep up that tradition.

Miami opens the season with Florida State. Should they win that game they could be on their way to another championship. Their other tough games will be against Michigan and Notre Dame.

Nebraska has continuously finished in the Top 10 under coach Tom Osborne. What they haven't done is beat Oklahoma too often (4-12 under Osborne) or win the national championship. They have had powerful teams for long, but have always lost that one game that cost them the championship.

Last season South Carolina beat Clemson handily in Death Valley. From that point on it was a roller-coaster season ended by an embarrassing loss to LSU in the Gator Bowl.

Todd Ellis returns as the Gamecocks' quarterback and is regarded as one of the best in the country. He will be trying out the new multiple offense orchestrated by new coordinator Al Groh. The Gamecocks' kicking game is anchored by Collin Mackie. As a freshman last season he had 25 field goals and 113 points, an NCAA rookie record.

South Carolina will be an exciting team to watch with Todd Ellis and the new passing offense. Their tough games will come against state rival Clemson and Georgia.

Auburn Tigers lead tough SEC pack

"The SEC is just a battle for your life every week no matter which team you are playing." Florida coach Galen Hall

Alex MONTGOMERY

There have been no truer words uttered in the Southeastern Conference.

That statement will be even more apparent this year as the always competitive SEC introduces a seven-game format. All member schools must play seven conference games as opposed to the previous six.

My pick to win the conference is Auburn. The Tigers are loaded on both sides of the pigskin. They should repeat as SEC champs in 1989.

All-SEC quarterback Jeff Burger is gone from last year's 9-1-2 club, but the Auburn Tigers still have the most talent in the league. Replacing Burger will be junior Reggie Slack. Last season against Mississippi State, the game which Burger was suspended, Slack was 11 of 17 passing for 185 yards and three TD's.

The Tigers' big man on defense will be senior defensive tackle Tracy Rucker. The 6-3, 274-pound Rucker recorded 75 total tackles last season despite missing the last three games due to injury.

The big question mark for the Tennessee Volunteers this year lies with its defense. The 1987 Peach Bowl champs lost seven defensive players from last season's 10-2-1 team.

One of those returning defenders is All-America candidate Keith DeLong. The senior inside linebacker recorded 125 total tackles last year. DeLong is considered by many to be a top candidate for the Butkus award, which is given to the nation's best linebacker.

1987 Liberty Bowl Champion Georgia lost 10 starters and quarterback James Jackson, but should be strong enough to finish third with 12 key people back.

Senior Wayne Johnson should apply fill the void left by Jackson in running the Bulldogs' traditional option-I offense. It was Johnson who came off the bench last season to lead Georgia to victory over UK after trailing 14-0 early.

Second-year coach Mike Archer of LSU had a brilliant rookie season as coach of the Bayou Bengals. But with 15 starters missing from last year's Gator Bowl club, there is little indicate Archer can duplicate the success.

The good news is the Tigers return one of the SEC's top quarterbacks in Heisman Trophy candidate Tom Hodson. Even so, the Tigers will have a battle just to finish fourth in the league.

The Alabama Crimson Tide surprised everybody last season by winning seven of its first nine, then plummeted back to reality by losing three straight at the end of the season.

And it may continue. This summer, two of his players were involved in off-the-field incidents that could only hurt the Alabama program. Offensive lineman Joe King (bullet wound) and tailback Bobby Humphrey (broken jaw) should return to full strength.

Much of Florida's success last year depended on freshman phenom and Heisman candidate Emmitt Smith, the best running back this side of Herschel Walker. But a big question mark for the Gators will be at quarterback where Coach Galen Hall will have to find a replacement for career starter Kerwin Bell.

The only reason Vanderbilt isn't a top 5 SEC team is because of, well, five great SEC teams. But the Commodores will improve on last season's 4-7 record thanks to Heisman candidate Eric Jones. Vanderbilt will score and score and score, but will also be scored upon due to a porous defense.

In to finish eighth will be Kentucky, which itself has a lot of question marks and very few answers. If the Cats win more than one SEC game, it'll be a surprise. And playing the top seven league schools, an 0-7 slate is not impossible.

Pity poor ole Mississippi, which was the SEC flop of the year with a 3-8 record. The only things that are keeping hopes alive in Oxford is the return of 14 starters and quarterbacks Mark Young and John Darnell.

Mississippi State could be the Cinderella of the league, with 16 of 22 starters back. But don't let the stats fool you too much. They are deceiving. With virtually the same line up as last year, those 16 led the Bulldogs to a 4-7 record.

Andy Murray finds open field in last season's victory over Ohio University. Murray, fully recovered from knee surgery, will be back as UK's starting fullback.

Murray now all the way back

By WARREN HAVENS
Staff Writer

Andy Murray will be at the heart of the UK offense this season, but to even suit up this fall Murray had to have a lot of heart.

The 6-1, 237-pound fullback suffered extensive ligament and cartilage damage to his right knee last year in the first quarter against Vanderbilt.

After major knee reconstruction and a tough rehabilitation program, the rugged Louisville product is back on the field and is playing hard.

Murray continues to run in his bruising fashion. He punishes defenders in his solid, workman-like fashion as if he had not experienced the setback.

Murray started at fullback in six games last season before his injury. He averaged 6.5 yards per carry. In UK's 28-0 win over Ohio University, Murray caught two passes for 54 yards and rushed for 56 yards on six carries.

"I thought my game had all come together," Murray said. "Then I got injured. I was becoming as big a part of the offense as ever. I'm now looking to pick up where I left off."

Running backs coach Greg Nord said the junior is not only playing well, but he is a leader of this year's football team.

"Andy has developed into a big leader," Nord said. "He's the kind of guy that all the players look up to. He's paid the price and they respect him for that. They all look up to him."

"I'd like to be looked upon as a leader but that is a thing where you have to gain their respect," Murray said. "You have to perform to maintain that leadership."

Murray said one reason he was able to recover so quickly from the injury was because of the support he received from his teammates who had experienced similar injuries. He said former fullback Mark Higgs was someone who especially helped him.

"I also saw (former linebacker) Larry Smith come back from a similar operation and have his best season the following year," Murray said. "And my roommate Craig Benzinger has come back.

"But I've also seen guys that didn't make it back. I'd rather be known as someone who came back from something like that than someone who let it end their career."

At times, Murray said it was difficult, but "I never gave up."

"You go out some days and a lot of times you want to stop," he said. "But you know in your mind that once the knee is warmed up, the pain will become tolerable."

Although the Ohio game was the statistical highlight of his UK career, Murray said his reconstructive recovery was an equal triumph.

"I don't know the statistics on reconstructive knee recovery rates, but they tell me that I've come back as fast as anyone ever has," Murray said.

Massey, Dortch one-two punch on defense

By TOM SPALDING
Sports Editor

One is quiet, soft-spoken and explosive.

The other is aggressive, confident and consistent. Combined, Tony Massey and Jay Dortch are a formidable one-two punch at the defensive end position.

"I love playing with Tony," Dortch said. "He's exciting, he makes big plays and he's a great player. When we play together, we're a good combination. He knows what I'm gonna do and I know what he's gonna do. We just have fun in a fun position."

Ditto for Massey. "I can't say enough for Jay. He's a very consistent player, he plays well each game. I don't know what I'd do without Jay, I don't know what the team would do without

Jay. He does so much for this team."

Both Massey and Dortch share more than just respect and admiration for each other, they both have worked hard to get to the point they're at now.

When Dortch came to the UK practice field as a walk-on in the spring of 1986, he meant business. The 6-foot-1, 207-pound defensive end from Paducah, Ky., made it known from the start that he wasn't a typical non-scholarship player.

And after two seasons, he's proven he hasn't. Dortch is known as "Mr. Consistency" and is regarded as one of the hardest workers on the squad.

What Dortch has done "is quite an accomplishment." UK defensive ends coach Dave Likins said. "He came here and he's really improved. We keep a chart... on how they've improved... and he's improved every test. I'll color-code (the tests). Green's a gain and red's a loss. His whole chart is practically green 'cause he's worked his butt off to get where he is. He's really a great youngster."

Dortch said working hard is something he takes pride in.

"I always want to play good," he said. "If I make a bad play I feel terrible. It takes a lot of hard work and dedication. Playing with the guys on the defensive ends is nothing but fun. We've got big-play people."

For Massey, getting to UK was a little easier. A two-time All-State pick, he helped lead Somerset High School to a 49-4 record and two state runner-up spots during his prep career in Kentucky. It was only natural that he'd sign with his home state.

And like most freshmen under Claiborne, Massey was redshirted. In 1986 as a back-up defensive end, Massey saw action in ten games. But it wasn't until last year when he made his mark.

Massey started 11 games at the left defensive end, intercepting four passes and making 62 total tackles, good for ninth on the team. In the process, he also raised a few eyebrows, earning him the nickname, "Mr. Big Play."

"(Tony) came in last year like a kid with a new toy," Likins said. "He flew around, was excited and made a lot of big plays before people knew who he was."

"It's something I take pride in," the junior said. "I don't try to make big plays, I just try to be consistent. Make an interception, cause turnovers, make things happen and I think it motivates the team when you do something big."

But unlike last season when neither player was too heavily counted on, Likins said one of the keys to a winning season is the play of the defensive ends.

"I expect both of them to play real well," Likins said. "They both came back stronger and they both came back in excellent shape. They both have great technique, they both run well, they both hit ya. I expect them to play as well as I've ever had ends play here."

Likins said he expects Massey and Dortch to see a lot of playing time.

UK receiver corps looking to replace hole left by Smith

By TOM SPALDING
Sports Editor

Most freshmen coming into the UK football program get red-shirted. The philosophy is simple: By sitting out your first year, you gain a fifth year.

Phil Logan did not want to sit out his first year and sit on the sidelines. He wanted to play.

"Coming out of high school, I wanted to make the team and play my freshman year," Logan said. "I didn't want to get redshirted."

Logan impressed the coaching staff enough to play in all 11 of UK's games at split end. In fact, he and cornerback Chris Tolbert were the only "true" freshmen to earn a varsity letter. It's something he is proud of.

"It was very pleased that I came out and was able to make the team, travel, letter and get to play in some of the big games," he said.

The UK coaching staff probably is glad he got to play in some of those big games, because Logan will be counted on heavily in the receiving corps, especially in the wake of flanker Dee Smith's decision to transfer to Western Kentucky University over the summer. Smith led Kentucky with 24 punt returns for 242 yards. He also was second on the team with 22 receptions and 1,037 yards.

"I don't want to be known as the guy who follows Dee Smith's footsteps."

"Not exactly an easy man to replace."

"It's gotta hurt," said receivers coach Joe Phillips about losing Smith. "All those plays he made it's, gotta hurt somewhat. I just have to work with what I've got."

Logan will make up for the deficit by switching to flanker. But just because he's taking over Smith's spot doesn't mean he's going to wear Smith's shoes.

"I don't want to be known as the guy who follows Dee Smith's footsteps," Logan said. "I want to have my own name and do my own thing. . . (I want to be) known as Phil Logan, not the guy who took Dee Smith's place."

Not that too many have, yet. Logan, a 6-foot-2, 205-pound Louisville native from Holy Cross High School, only caught four passes for 59 yards in 1987. But Phillips thinks he is capable of turning in the big plays.

"I can see him being one of the best in the conference if he works at it," Phillips said. "Right now he's young, still learning the position. He had a few letdowns, but with a lot of hard work he could be one of the top in the SEC."

Another possibility at flanker is senior Ray Gover (6-3, 196 pounds). Sophomore John Bolden emerged from the pack toward the latter stages of the spring to win the No. 1 spot at split end entering the fall. Sophomore Steve Phillips also will battle for the position.

"Yeah, we've got a pretty nice receiver corps," Phillips said. "We've got some guys that can fill in and make some big plays."

But Phillips said those receivers must be ready for UK's new offense, which will feature a whole bunch of passing.

"(This year) the guys have to be on the same page as the quarterbacks now. This type of offense," Phillips said. "You can't have the quarterback reading one thing and the receiving reading the other. Everybody has to be in sync."

Tesar and Nelson still competing for punter spot all these years

By TOM SPALDING
Sports Editor

For two years, Jay Tesar and Jeff Nelson have used themselves in the same predicament: Both are experienced players. Both are battling back from injuries or personal setbacks. And both are fighting to be the punter on the UK football team.

UK coach Jerry Claiborne only offers one scholarship to a punter. Two seasons ago Nelson had that job. Last year it was Tesar's. This year it's up for grabs.

"We both know it's two good people and one good job," Nelson said. "So somebody's gonna get it."

The Tesar-Nelson rivalry began in two very different ways.

Tesar, a native of Vine Grove, Ky., earned a scholarship in 1985 as a walk-on, helping Claiborne solve the punting problem that season.

Soon came Nelson, who transferred to UK from Miami of Ohio University. He quickly assumed the No. 1 spot on the depth chart when Tesar was injured in opening game warm-ups in 1986. He played in all 11 games and was the top punter with 41 kicks for 1,648 yards.

As last year rolled around, so did the battle. This time Tesar won the role, and the scholarship, helping UK place 2nd in the SEC and 18th in the nation in net punting with a 37.6-yard average.

Now it's a new season. And the two are battling once again for the starting job.

"I always hate going up against people that are friends," he said. "And me and Jeff are pretty good friends. There's a competition, but we still keep it friendly. I hate always having to compete."

Punting coach Terry Strock, however, is glad about the competition because he said it assures UK will have the best punter possible each Saturday.

"That's what we like," he said. "It makes them better and let's them know if they're not getting the job done then we know we have somebody that can go in there and do it."

Although Claiborne provides only one scholarship for a punter, Tesar said he would like the UK coach to award both Nelson and him a scholarship and "whoever was kicking better that game could be the punter."

Tesar might not be battling Nelson for the starting job had he not undergone knee surgery to his non-kicking leg while working out last spring.

"At the end of winter workouts (we were doing) agility drills and I was doing a shuttle run," Tesar said. "It was inside on turf and I planted it (his left knee) really hard and it popped. I never really felt it."

But Tesar said he does now. "They (the coaching staff) wish it would have been that (right) knee because I plant with my left leg. It puts a lot of pressure on it," he said.

Had Tesar not been injured, he probably would have been guaranteed a starting spot.

"The competition is always good, but it's always nice to come in as the incumbent punter and have your job secure. But I've been punting well and I continue to do so. I'll be the man," Tesar said.

"Both of us would rather have just one person doing it," he said. "It's kind of mentally straining on you, to don't know if you're going to punt or not. I think we pretty much want it to be one person."

One person who isn't worried about job security is kickoff man and kicker Ken Willis.

Willis, a 5-11, 184-pound junior from Owensboro, Ky., has the difficult task of replacing four-year starter Joe Worley.

All Worley did in his career was become UK's all-time scoring leader (246 points), point-after-touchdown leader (75), and in field goals made (57). Quite a record to live up to. But not for Willis.

"Everybody has asked me about that," Willis said. "Joe and I are good friends and I learned a lot from him but I need to live up to my own standards, not his. I just need to go out and see what I can do."

So would kicking coach Farrell Sheridan.

"He's always had a strong leg," Sheridan said of Willis. "He's always been capable of kicking the ball long on kickoffs and on field goals and the big thing is how he's going to react in the game situation. His big question mark is consistency and that's what he's got to work on."

Willis agrees. "I've worked a lot this summer to get ready and I feel I'm about there," he said. "I've just gotta go out and do my job."

Pfeifer leading young line

By TOM SPALDING
Sports Editor

UK hasn't had a player chosen to the All-American football team since Art Still was selected more than a decade ago.

And more likely than not, the Wildcats won't have a representative on the elite team this year, either. But it's not going to deter junior offensive tackle and preseason All-SEC selection Mike Pfeifer. He can hide his line.

"I feel honored that people choose me (in the preseason)," Pfeifer said. "But I look it as boastful. . . (I've) got no materialistic goals like that. I just want to play good and grade out 80 percent each week."

As a sophomore last season, the 6-foot-7, 300-pound Pfeifer started all 11 games at offensive tackle. He also made some incredible things happen — against Rutgers he had an impressive 10 knockdowns as UK rolled up 387 yards of total offense. In that game, he graded 96 percent on 89 plays.

In short, this man is a weapon, harnessed only by himself.

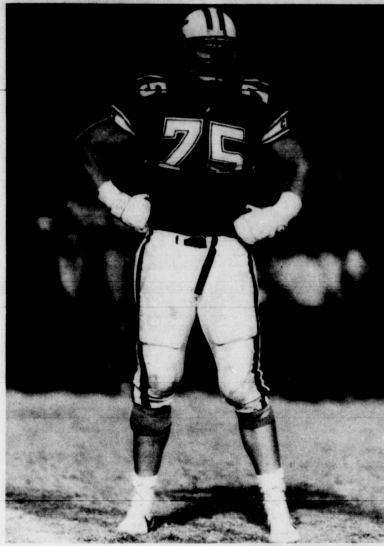

"Well, at six-seven and a half, 306 pounds and with the work I've done to improve my feet and to improve my football play, I hope I can be a force on the line of scrimmage," Pfeifer said.

But, as the UK coaches say, Pfeifer is good. But he's still just a babe in the world of major college football.

"You could say he's the best," offensive tackles coach Farrell Sheridan said. "He's the biggest, the strongest and the most experienced. . . But he's got a long way to go from being a really, really outstanding ballplayer. He's still young, he's just going into his junior year."

If this all sounds too good to be true, then consider these stats: The Louisville native can bench press 425 pounds, squat 575 and run the 40-yard dash in five seconds.

"I worked out a lot this summer and gained a lot of strength," Pfeifer said. "And I took a lot of time to work on my feet and my pass protection and just basically my agility all around. . . I feel more comfortable (with) what I'm doing."

As brilliant as Pfeifer is on the field, he has made himself infamous with his eating habits off the field. In one meal at a restaurant, the 22-year-old said he consumed 13 eight-ounce steaks.

"And then (I had) four orders of crab legs after that," he said. But this is no puffed Pfeifer. At last check, his body fat percentage was just 13 percent.

But when Pfeifer hits the field, the only appetite he has is stopping the defensive linemen going after his quarterback.

"(Of course) they're gonna be some defensive linemen in our league who are booger bears, too," defensive coach Dave Likens said.

"And Mike will have wars with them. You'll see a man-to-man war. He'll have his hands full with them and they'll have their hands full with him."

And the defensive linemen will have to continue to improve or lose that battle. Because the hard-driving Pfeifer just keeps getting better.

"He's the type of person who works hard," Sheridan said. "He's a workaholic, he improves every year. I'm just looking forward to seeing him have a real fine junior campaign."

Pfeifer could have taken the route chosen by former All-state football players and gone to a college football powerhouse, such as Notre Dame, Michigan or Oklahoma. Pfeifer said he has not regretted his decision.

Defensive backs are searching to escape the 'no respect' tag

By TOM SPALDING
Sports Editor

David Johnson doesn't look like Rodney Dangerfield. And with a pierced ear and long, black hair he certainly doesn't dress or act like the famous comedian.

But if the two do share a common trait, it's that neither of them get any respect.

Johnson, a 6-foot-1-inch, 190-pound senior from Louisville Male High School, has been underrated most of his career at UK, despite consistent play at the cornerback position. But instead of complaining about the lack of respect, he's just going to go out this year and prove it.

"It bothers you a little bit, but you can't let it affect your game," Johnson said. "I don't know. I go out there every game whether I get the respect I deserve or not. Some people may think I deserve some respect, some people may not."

Johnson's situation is ironic because the defensive backfield probably is UK's deepest area. The top five players (Johnson, Ron Robinson, Mark Sellars, Ron Mack and Chris Tolbert) all return to the secondary.

Don't think defensive back coach Chip Garber doesn't realize this. And although he's not acting like a kid in a candy store, he is pretty happy.

"I don't know if it's a bevy of talent, but it's the most talent we've had in the defensive backfield in a long, long time," Garber said. "Back to 1984 was the last time we had as many backs capable of contributing and playing quite a bit."

That '84 defensive group helped steer Kentucky to a trip to the Hall of Fame Bowl and a victory over the University of Wisconsin. But that's the past. The future is now, and it looks good.

"I don't see a weakness right now," Robinson said. "We have two returning corners back, and I'm back. Mark Sellars is behind me who's had experience. . . I wouldn't say it's just us. I think we are pretty strong on defense as a whole."

But the secondary is the key, and it has all the ingredients to produce all-star defensive results. The pot is made up of a blend of:

• Youth and energy. Tolbert, a 5-foot-11-inch sophomore from Pensacola, Fla., is one of only two players who are true freshmen. He will man the right cornerback position.

• All-star candidates. Both Robinson, a preseason All-SEC free safety, who Garber calls "one of the premiere safeties in the country" and Johnson, who the Kentucky media guide says "owns the tools to be one of the premiere cornerbacks in the Southeastern Conference."

• Consistency and depth. Look no further than Mack, a senior back (behind Tolbert) from Lexington, who has lettered three times, and Sellars, a 6-3, 204-pound safety from Louisville.

Is there anything this group can't do?

"There's always a weakness," Garber said. "We've got to get a lot better at getting turnovers. As a whole that's one thing (last year) we didn't do. When you don't have a lot, you're not gonna score a lot of points. You've got to give the offense the opportunity to score, give them the opportunity to get that football. That's what we have to do as a defensive unit."

"I appreciate praise from other coaches because I have a lot of respect for our coaches and anything they say," he said.

Johnson, who has been recovering from a broken little toe, said he won't sit around moping if the honors don't come.

"You can't let it affect your game at all," he said. "I go out there and try to play hard, do the things I'm capable of doing, and hopefully the right people will notice. I think when it comes down to it, they will notice. I think a lot of coaches and other teams have a lot of respect for me. I'm gonna play hard and hopefully we'll have a winning season."
