Further NYA Assistance Is Necessary

The National Youth Administration, while only a small part of the Federal relief program, has been one of the most profitable and encouraging efforts of the national government to meet the needs of its citizens.

Education, even in state-owned institutions, is still a matter of considerable expense. More and more students are finding it impossible to meet this expense without some outside aid.

Students who could never have made the initial entrance into college life, were given encouragement and aid. It is impossible to overestimate the beneficial effects of this national program on the youth of America.

Last year Congress appropriated $75,000,000. This year the sum has been reduced to $35,000,000. Here at the University of Kentucky, the appropriation has dropped from approximately $75,000 to $35,000.

Throughout the country, students are asking -What are we to do? Many active student groups have attempted to draw up plans to meet this crisis.

It is the duty of every student, no matter what may be his financial situation, to support any action taken by student groups on the NYA cut.

On our campus, a more general awareness of the problems which confront students, both in intellectual and financial matters, must be aroused. We must co-operate with the groups who will plan for Thursday, October 14, some effective plan of protesting the cut, and action to lead to the restoration of last year's appropriation for student aid.

A Disgraceless Defeat

When the echoes of the last graining spectacle died into space Saturday, there was a minimum of inspirational aftermath for a faithful Kentucky roter.

As the Wildcats plodded from the field, the faithful one could lift but a single monumental tribute from out of the clear-scattered quagmire. Though outplayed all the way, the gallants of Coach Wynne never gave the slightest indication of surrender.

The game was not 15 seconds old before Kentucky was trailing by seven points. From that instant to the final whistle, the Wildcats fought valiantly against a team that would not, that could not be bridled.

A genuine fan will rally 'round his team when they fight to the finish. When his football representatives are outclassed and beaten, he might be disappointed but never intolerant.

BULL PEN

By GEORGE H. KERLER

Take it, Quinn, it's too tough for me.

THE GEORGIA TECH wreckage left me so completely baffled that I pounced lovingly on Joe Quinn, former sports editor of The Kernel whose frequent by-line in the Cincinnati Post automatically makes us make a Post newsboy a few cents happier.

Joe made the trek to Lexington just to see the local heroes balance last year's outrage. Being a veteran Wildcat sufferer and sympathizer who saw the Atlanta butchering also, Quinn took this recent rout with more manliness than I did. Probably, he has a sane train of thought in his fingers.

So I'll ask the idol of all Kernel sports writers to sit in here for a while. Climb on, Joe, while I grope for some Aspirin.

It was the opinion of Mr. George Kerler, our friend of some long standing, and regular reporter in this space that we might be fitted to the task of making some comment on the most recent toboggan excursion by Kentucky's Wildcats in which they went all the way to the bottom against those gentlemen from Georgia Tech.

We were fitted peculiarly, argued Mr. Kerler, because of previous association with Wildcat teams of the past few years in which we had ample opportunity to reap a harvest of experience with sundry forms of tobogganing of both the plain and fancy variety. And hadn't we been an eye-witness to a like massacre only a year ago one sunny day in Georgia?

"Well, George, you've got something there" we had to admit in our written manner. And that's how we happen to be spending our afternoon off trying to find something to say about another Georgia Tech lambasting after we had considered all that sort of thing as pleasantly passed as our college career.

Now that we've gotten this far along, there isn't a whole lot that can be said about the ball game. (We really knew that three paragraphs above.) Once again the boys from Georgia Tech just had the stuff and once again the Kentuckys couldn't do anything about it.

Last year we said something to the effect that the Engineers didn't make a mistake all afternoon. Well, they made some errors last Saturday but it didn't make much difference when the auditors totaled up the score.

They used to call Tech's club The Ramblin' Wreck, and for all we know they probably do yet. At any rate it's an apt handle, or it was Saturday, when the Georgians just about rambled over the soaked soil at will.

We can't find any excuses for the Wildcats and if we could they probably wouldn't want any used anyway. There's no need of that stuff after the game has been tucked away.

Coch Wynne told us and several of the gridders admitted after the game that the 'Cats had been specifically warned just before they went out on the field that Tech would use their Sims to Koneemann forward on the first play from scrimmage. What happened? Well, you know what happened. Sims faked back and hurried to Koneemann on the first play and there was the first touchdown.

The Engineers used consistently a bunch of plays that Kentucky had been warned against, drilled against and evidently should have been guarding against but that didn't deter the Techsters one whit. They just kept on using them to advantage.

What impressed us most, probably, in the hapless Kentucky situation was the repeat performance staged by Walter "Whirly" Hodge, the "boom-crushing" 160-pound full-back. Whirly was one of the handiest lads on the field Saturday and his exhibition, coupled with his excellent showing in the Xavier tilt, brings him right to the head of the Wildcat backfield class.

Hodge was handicapped last season with injuries. He developed just about everything that came along on the sickest menu and never was able to reach his proper peak. It appears that he has finally hit his stride this year and is about to live up to the advance notices broadcast by the Bourbon County grid experts.

In conclusion we haven't even a prediction to make on Kentucky's future possibilities. It's a hazardous business trying to say what the Wildcats may do.

One thing we may say. This year's team has more spirit than any of its predecessors of the past five years. That may count a lot in future games now that the club can see its past mistakes. Don't let the Kentuckys short this early in the campaign.

It's back to you now, George. We may not have said anything but we sure filled a lot of space for you.

Let me sing a strong baritone to your Hodge praise, Joe. His Saturday exhibition definitely stamped him as Kentucky's most consistent ground gainer. But one thing I'd like to know is, who dominates the Wildcat huddle when we have the ball inside the enemy five yard line. At Xavier Hodge brought the huddle down to the Musketeer gate and we waited three downs before they let him carry it over the goal line. Again Saturday, Whirley kept the Tech five and never did the signals give him the opportunity to take it over.

The performance of Harold Black and Alex Farda at center against the Engineers leaves us with three good pivots. Sherman Hinkbein did not play because of a temperamental game. Why not shift Hinkbein to one of the wings? He's a smart boy and might learn how to handle a flank after two weeks of practice. Since we're in desperate straits anything will help.

If ever a team was outclassed it was Kentucky. Tech out passed, out tackled, out gained, and out smarted the Cats from start to finish. The only virtue we can salvage from the disaster is the fact Kentucky was trying all the way. Outside of that we have little to smile about. There is no sense in being broken hearted. You wouldn't expect the Cincinnati Reds to beat the Yankees.

CAT-TECH

(Continued from Page One) hands, good for 13 yards. Coleman then threw a speed ball into Garland's mitt on the Georgians' 11 for another yardage. But the Alexandrian defense capped the rally by breaking up three of the next four passes. The only successful one gained two yards. Davis tried to cross up the Georgia aerial forces on the fourth down by pass-in-out—no luck. Came the first half curtain.

Immediately upon resumption of play the Wildcats showed comeback life. Robinson carried the kickoff to his own 32. On the first play Hodge electrified the crowd with a dazzling gallop of 63 yards down the sidelines. He was finally shoved out of bounds on the five yard line.

With four tries to gain five yards the Kentuckys failed miserably. Two line backs by Dob Davis were strangled, a pass was way off, and on the fourth down Larry Garland caught one but was beyond the bound of the end zone. Tech took the ball on her own 20.

Snyder broke through and dropped a runner three yards from scrimmage. They kicked out of danger to the Kentucky 45. The Wildcats fought back again with Hodge ramming the line and the Davis Brothers, Bob and Dameron, hitching up in a new pass combination. They brought the ball down to the Tech 26 where the Atlantans took it on downs. The battle zoomed up and down the field until Tech intercepted a pass on Kentucky's 45, as the quarter closed.

A Tech lateral advanced the ball to the Tech 28. Sims made four. A forward, Sims to Smith, brought the ball to Kentucky's 16 for a first down. Koneemann struggled through to the 10 but Tech was penalized for holding to Kentucky's 31. Koneemann tried again and made five and on the next play he started out around his right end. His interference was knocked overboard so he reversed his field leaving from the entire Kentucky team headin' north while he started south and then west. Not a Kentuckian laid a hand on him. Sims extra-pointer snatched the ball from the players.

Georgia Tech, after kicking off, nudged the ball again by intercepting a toss and running it back 20 yards to Kentucky's 45. Line plays failed so Koneemann booted out on the Kentucky 29. Coleman faked back scanning the bats for a lonely blue-shirt, but found none. In desperation he threw the ball in the general direction of the Tech goal line. Wilcox, an Engineer guard, was wandering about waiting for the foolishness to end when he met a spiraling football. He plucked it out of the atmosphere and jogged, untouched, 29 yards to a score. A forward passed extra point was incomplete. The game still fighting doggedly Kentucky was once more and got as far as Georgia's 25 where the Atlantans recovered a fumble. They kicked out to midfield and the Cats came back once more to the 31. But another Coleman pass was stolen by Tech and the timekeeper's pistol compassionately interceded.

Tech made 14 first downs to Kentucky's 11. On running plays Georgia made 180 to Ky's 135. Tech tried 14 pass, completed 8 for 129 yards. Kentucky hit 10 times out of 30 good for 64. Tech averaged close to 38 yards per punt. The Cats averaged 36. Hodge gained 7 1/2 yards per try.

We know... don't we You bet we do

Chesterfields go right along with smokers... giving them the kind of a smoke they want... in the way they like it best. Chesterfields are refreshingly milder—they've got a taste that smokers like. Chesterfields are different from all the rest... THEY SATISFY.

Milder Better Tasting ...because they're made of MILD RIPE tobaccos

Chesterfield ... they'll give you MORE PLEASURE
